DIVIDED INTO BLEVEN SECTIONS.

PEACE AND JOY:

Being a Brief Attempt to consider the Evidences of the Truth of the Gosper, in which we have the witness of Peace with Gos, through Jesus Christ, drawn from the Old and New-Testaments, together with our Obligations to keep the Foundation of our Peace, thus evidenced always in Remembrance; with several other Pieces connected with and built upon this foundation, part of which was not before published.

By SHIPPIE TOWNSEND.

ISAIAH lvii. 19. I create the Fruit of the Lips; Peace, Peace to far off and to near, faith the LORD.

JOHN XVI. 33. These things have I spoken unto you, that in me ge might have peace.

ACTS x. 36. Preaching peace by JESUS CHRIST.

DEDICATION.

AS an expression of unseigned Thanksgiving, for the exceeding Riches of Divine Grace, exhibited in the Gospel, the following Collection is dedicated by the Writer, to the Honour and Glory of the Author and Finisher of our Faith; and as an expression of Love to the purchased possession, they are published for their perusal. That the blessing of God may attend the work, to those who read or hear, is the prayer of the Writer.

AMEN.

The Occasion of the following Treatise.

ON the publication of Peace in Boston, a number of friends were collected together an evening after, and a speech delivered on the occasion; the substance of which is the foundation of the present discourfe: When the importance of understanding the evidence of the truth of the gospel, which publishes peace with God, through Jesus Christ, in order to fatisfy distressed, perplexed minds, and for the confolation of believers, gave occasion briefly to go over these evidences, as they appear in the law of Moses, the Prophets and the Pfalms, in the birth, life, death, and refurrection of JESUS CHRIST: In the testimony of the Apostles: In the miracles wrought by the power of the Holy Ghost, in confirmation of their. testimony: The difference between those miracles and the deceivable miracles of antichrist: The evidence arising from the rife, reign, and consumption of antichrist, and that arising from the state of the Jews, according to what Jesus Christ faid concerning them, agreeable to the Prophets and Apostles. things being often read in the course of reading the bible, as histories of the events that took place, and not as evidences of the truth testified of Jesus Christ, for which they were defigned; and fo our minds remain at a loss about the evidences of the truth of the gospel, which is, I apprehend, the source of much of our darkness and perplexity.

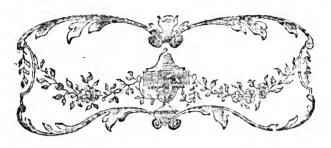

HEREIN I have endeavoured to keep close to the feriptures, and to speak of those things in scripture language, in words that the Holy Ghost teacheth, comparing scripture with scripture: Such as wish patiently to search the scriptures to see if these things are fo, may be affished in turning to many of them that may tend to lead their minds to the evidences therein contained. When I had gone through the consideration of the evidences above-mentioned, the importance of the truth thus evidenced being kept in memory, struck my mind, which occasioned the consideration of many passages to that end. I have endeavoured to keep as close to the obvious meaning of the scripture, and as free from the traditions of men as I was able: Having gone through in as brief and plain a manner as I am capable of, I now devote it to the honour and glory of our LORD REDEEMER, and to the benefit and comfort of that part of his purchased inheritance into whose hands it may come.

PEACE AND JOY.

SECTION I .-- CHAPTER I.

The Bleffings of Peace between Encland and America.

IN every piece of news our minds are anxious about the evidence of its truth, in proportion to the importance of it to us: And in order to our rejoicing, with full fatisfaction in good news; these two things are necessary.

First. That we are fully satisfied of the evidence of its truth.

Secondly. That we understand the greatness of the good therein contained.

The good tidings of peace we now contemplate with joy, come to us with the fullest evidence of their truth that can be desired, so as to leave no room for the least doubt or hesitation: It is only requisite for the fulness of our joy, that we understand the greatness of this mercy; in order to which it would be needful to consider 1st, what we are hereby delivered from; and 2dly, what we are hereby put in possession of.

[The residue of the first chapter being more peculiar to the time when it was first published, it is here passed over, and we proceed to chapter 2d.]

CHAP9

CHAP. II.

The News of Peace with GOD.

WHILE I am speaking of the ground of rejoicing in the glad tidings of peace, national peace, or peace from war, is there not an anxious spot in the mind that is not yet reached an objection to sulness of joy after this manner? These things are bounded by time which is swiftly passing, but there is a long eternity before me, and my concern is whether my peace is made with Gop.

If there be any newsabout that matter which would make it certain, then, I could rejoice. Is there any? Yes, and it is published by an angel, Luke ii. 9 to 14: It is good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people; for unto you is born in the city of David, a SAVIOUR which is CHRIST the LORD; on which a multitude of the heavenly host appearing praising and faying, glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace; good will towards men; unto you: To who? To the shepherds, exclusive of all others? No, it shall be to all people. On earth peace, good will towards men: Not a corner of the earth, nor any of the inhabitants finally excluded from it. If I am on earth, no matter what part of it, there is peace there. If I be of the race of men, there is good will to them. This is a fhort account of this good news: But what is contained in it, unto you; to all people? is born in the city of David, the place whence the scripture faith that CHRIST should come, John vii. 42, Micah v.2. A Saviour which is Christ the Lord; a Saviour appointed and anointed to this office; who is also the LORD, having all power in Heaven and earth; able to accomplifh the falvation of all people. He was born a Saviour, Galations iv. 4. When the fulness of time was come, God fent forth his Son, made of a woman.

woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of fons.

He lived a Saviour, and made it manifest by forgiving sin, by healing diseases, by testifying he came not to destroy mens lives, but to save them, that the world through him might be faved.

He faves by his holy life, in which the law is perfectly obeyed, even to that precept, Matt. v. 48. Be ye perfect as your Father in Heaven is perfect: This Jesus spake under the law while that dispensation lasted, and it must be to lead to himself, where alone it could have its sulfilment; and every son and daughter of Adam must despair of attaining any other way than as they are compleat in him in whom the divine will was done on earth as it is in Heaven,

Again, he faves by his death, by answering the penalty of the law for the fins of the people, 1. Cor. xv. 3. Christ died for our fins according to the fcriptures; and the apostle says, We thus judge, if one died for all then all died; all being comprehended in the one, the head of every man for whom he tasted death: And thus we are said to be reconciled to God by the death of his Son.

Again, he faves by his resurrection, as that evidences the truth of his character and the perfection of his work and sacrifice, and of the perfect satisfaction thereby made to law and justice; so that he could not be holden of death, as he is declared, determined, manifested, the Son of God with power according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead, he being our head. The scripture saith, he rose again for our justification. So the apostle speaks of the answer of a good conscience towards. God by the resurrection of Jesus Christ: It is God that justifieth, who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, year ather that has risen again from the dead.

Further,

Further, he faves by his exaltation and intercession; who is at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us: He is able to save to the utmost them that come to God by him, seeing he ever lives to make intercession for them, and to them that look for him he will appear the second time without sin unto salvation. He told his disciples, I go to prepare a place for you; I will come again and receive you to myself, that where I am ye may be also.

This is a brief account of our peace, being made with God, for he is our peace, and he hath made peace by the blood of his crofs. Now the truth of this news depends on the true character of Jesus Christ. If he be the Christ, the Son of God, the news is all true, the falvation is accomplished.

CHAP. III.

The Evidence of the Truth of this News, from the Scriptures of the Old Testament.

THE inquiry then is, where is the evidence of the truth of this good news? The answer is in the whole volume of the book which is written of him, which would carry us back to the first promise of the feed of the woman that should bruise the serpent's To the promise to Abraham, Gen. xxii. 18. And in thy feed shall all the families of the earth be bleffed. It would lead us to his way, which the Pfalmift fays was made known to Mofes, his way of flewing mercy: This was made known to him in Exodus xxxiv. 6. Moses had prayed in the preceding chapter, verse 13. Shew me now thy way that I may know thee, that I may find grace in thy fight. Verse 18th, And he faid, I befeech thee shew me thy glory. The anfwer is, verse 19. I will make all my goodness pass before fore thee. In chap. xxxiv. 5. The Lord descended in a cloud, and flood with him there, and proclaimed the name of the LORD. Verse 6. And the LORD passed by before him, and proclaimed the LORD, the LORD God merciful and gracious, long fuffering and abundant in goodness and truth, keeping mercy for thoufands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and fin, and that will by no means clear. How is this name of the LORD to be made manifest? How is iniquity, transgression and fin to be forgiven consistent with justice, but with respect to the surety in which justice is satisfied, who was by no means cleared until all the divine attributes harmonized in him, he having paid the utmost farthing? He spared not his own son, but gave him up for us all. We cannot possibly conceive of peace and forgiveness of iniquity, transgression and fin, and the guilty transgreffors not cleared. The words the guilty are supplied as we see by the different character.

It is added, Visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth.

Under the former difpensation there was a remembrance of sin every year; the priesthood and sacrifice could not take it away? The children of Israel are asked what they mean by using this proverb. The sathers have eaten sour grapes, and the childrens' teeth are set on edge? Ezekiel xviii. 2. So Fereniah xxxi. 29. In those days they shall say no more the sathers have eaten sour grapes and the childrens' teeth are set on edge; but every one shall die for his own iniquity. Must not this have its suffilment in him who when he was listed up from the earth, drew all men unto him, and tasted death for every man, and dying for all, all died. Is not this thought strengthened by comparing verse 34? For I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more; which refers to the one sacrifice of Jesus Christ, in which there is remission and no more facrifice for sin, as in Hebrews x. 17, 18. And thus only have we a consistent view of every man dying for his own iniquity, and the forgiveness of iniquity, and the remembrance of sin no more.

So then the vifiting the iniquities of the fathers on the children was to continue until the coming of Christ and his perfect facrifice, in which there was remiffion, and no more offering for fin, no remembrance of it by repeated facrifice as under the law, it being taken away by the one facrifice. Why this is called the third and fourth is matter of inquiry; but this is plain, that Jesus Christ came under the law, and closed that dispensation, and brought in the gos-

Which gospel, or way of shewing mercy in confistence with justice was made known to Moses, as it was also in the passover institution, Exodus xii. In which the unblemished Lamb was a type of Jesus the Lamb without blemish and without spot, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world; wherein is pointed out what God had respect unto in passing over the children of Israel, in verses 13, 23. And when I feethe blood I will pass over you, and when he feeth the blood he will pass over the door, and not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite; leading us to the price of our redemption, the precious blood of Christ as a Lamb without blemish and without spot, in which we have the suffilment of this word of God.

This was also shewn to Moses in the brazen serpent that typisied the listing up the Son of Man, that whosever believeth on him might not perish, but have eternal life. And in the various things under that dispensation, that had a shadow of good things to come, which centring in Jesus, and having their suffilment in him, are so many undeniable evidences of the truth of the gospel, the good news of salvation
by Jesus Christ.

The like may be faid of the prophets, who all gave witness to him; see Ifaiah liii. 3 to 6. He is despifed and rejected of men; a man of forrow and acquaint-ed with grief: He hath borne our griefs and carried our forrows: He was wounded for our transgressions: He was bruifed for our iniquities; the chastifement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed. All we, like lost sheep, have gone oftray, and turned every one to his own way; the Lord laid upon him the iniquity of us all. Verse 8. for the transgression of my people was he smitten.

Was he wounded for our transgression, bruised for our iniquities, and the chaftifement of our peace upon him, and we healed by his stripes, surely then according to Feremiah xxiii. 6. This is the name whereby he shall be called the Lord our righteousness. Ezekiel also prophetically proclaims the glad tidings, chapter xxxiv. 29. And I will raise up for them a plant of renown, and they shall no more be consumed with hunger in the land: Which is the same spoken of by Isaiah in his 49th chapter, from 8 to 10. They sus said unto them, I am the bread of life, he that cometh to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

When Daniel was speaking and praying, and confcffing his fin and making supplication, he is informed by the angel Gabriel, that feventy weeks were determined to finish transgression and make an end of sin. This could not be done under the Mosaick dispensation, where the priests stood daily offering oftentimes those facrifices which only brought fin to remembrance, and could not take it away: But this was to finish and make an end of it, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness. All typical legal righteousness was in its own nature transitory, only pointing to this, and must fade as a leaf when its antitype is made manifest, and everlasting righteousness brought in.

And to feal up the vision and the prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy.

The fealing up the vision and the prophecy leads to the completion of it, as when any writing is to be fealed, care is taken that it is completely finished. This vision and prophecy, or what was revealed to and delivered by the prophets, had its completion in the anointing of the Most Holy.

To whom all the prophets gave witness, and who is brought in by the prophet Hosea, chapter xiii. 9, saying, O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself, but in me is thy help. V. 14. I will heal their back stidings; I will ransom thee from the power of the grave; I will redeem thee from death. And ch. xiv. 4. I will love them freely; for my anger is turned away from him. This is good news, glad tidings of great joy; of which Foel also speaks, ch. iii. 24. For I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed; for the LORD dwelleth in Zion.

And although Amos was called to prophecy of the various judgments, the desolations and destructions that were to come on Syria, the Philistines, Tyrus, Edom, the children of Ammon and Moab, with Judah and the kingdom of Israel, or the ten tribes, of whose utter destruction, as a kingdom he prophecyeth: Yet he tells us, ch. ix. v. 11. In that day, or as the apostle expresses it, after this will I return and raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof, that they may posses the remnant of Edom, and of ALL the heathen that are called by my name, saith the LORD.

All the heathen are called by my name. Yes, and bleffed be his name, with Amen, ecchoing from the utmost ends of the earth: In Christ Jesus is this prophecy sulfilled; this tabernacle of David raised up; that as James expresses it, the residue of men might seek the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, faith the Lord, that doeth all these things.

It would draw me to too great length to mention the other prophets, which write in their prophecies of Jesus, to whom they all gave witness, as so many undeniable evidences of the truth of the news of falvation by JESUS CHRIST. The exhortation in Ifa. xli. 27, may be here introduced: Behold, behold them, and I will give unto Jerusalem, one that bringeth good tidings; even good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. If we pass from the Law of Mofes and the prophets to the Pfalms, they are concerning him; and we fee not the meaning of them until we see them center in him, and testify of him. The perfect character of the BLESSED MAN in the 1st, 14th and 21st Pfalms, is no where to be found but in Christ Jesus: The many prayers that are made in the various Pfalms where uprightness and love to the divine precepts, testimonies, commandments, &c. are pleaded as the ground of being heard, belong to none but Jesus, who ever did the things that pleafed the FATHER; and are the prayers, supplication, ftrong crying, with tears to him that was able to fave him from death, that he offered in the days of his flesh, and was heard for his piety; that these were his prayers, we have a specimen in his uttering the 1st v. of the xxiid Pfalm on the cross; the other part of the Pfalm was as undoubtedly a prophetical description of the prayers of the Messiah, as that though it was not vocally expressed. The assurance of being heard, and the happy fruits of his fufferings, expressed from the 21st v. to the end of the Pfalm, bring to view that expression, Father, I thank thee, that thou hast heard me, and I know that thou hearest me always.

If we cast our eye on the 18th Pfalm, where the Prophet brings in the Messiah under the forrows, the snares of death and the forrows of hell, in distress calling upon the Lord, and crying to his God: It is added, he heard my voice out of his temple, and my cry came before him into his ears. The following most majestick description would lead to the answer of the prayers of Jesus on the cross, in the earthquake: Then the earth shook and trembled, the soundations of the hills moved and was shaken because he was wroth. The darkness that was under his feet would lead to the darkness that was over all the earth: He made darkness his pavillion, round about dark waters and thick clouds of the fky.

Verse 16 and on. He sent from above, he took me, he drew me out of many waters, he delivered me from my strong enemy, and from them that hated me. Though they appeared to the view of the world too strong for me, he brought me forth into a large place, he delivered me, because he delighted in me, because in me he was well pleased. This deliverance leads our minds to his refurrection from the dead. The Lord rewarded me according to my righteoufnefs, according to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me; for I have kept the way of the LORD, and have not wickedly departed from my GoD; for all his judgments were before me, and I did not put away his statutes from me: I was also upright before him, and kept myself from mine iniquity: therefore hath the LORD recompensed me according to my righteousness, according to the cleanness of my hands in his eye-fight. Now when we view David in the Pfalms speaking of himfelf, we are led to blunder in the dark after creature righteoufness, and wish to be as good as David, that we may pray, as he did; and hope we are fincerely defirous of it, &c. So to compass ourselves about with sparks of our own kindling, which will be forever disappointing, but when we see him testifying of Tesus, we find a righteousness that is perfect, that is fafe to trust and be found in: for with him who perfeetly fulfilled the law and endured the curse in mercy to us with him who is the merciful thou wilt shew thyfelf merciful; with this upright man thou wilt shew thyself upright; with this pure, this HOLY ONE thow wilt shew thyself pure, while thou wilt contend with the perverse that flight this perfect righteousness, and go about to establish their own: For thou wilt fave the afflitted people through the divine righteoufness, that are altogether destitute of righteousness in themselves, but wilt bring down high looks. Surely he fcorneth the fcorner, he refisteth the proud; the loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the hautiness of man fhall be made low, and the Lord alone shall be exalted. In that day, according as it is written, let him that glorieth glory in the LORD. But to confider the good news of falvation by Jesus Christ from the Pfalms, would open too large a field for the present defign; if what has been brought to view may be an help to open this field, to walk in at our leifure, a good end may be answered.

CHAP. IV.

The Evidences of this Truth from the New-Testament.

If we turn over to the New-Testament, the evidences multiply upon us from the birth, life, death and refurrection of Jesus, from the testimony of the apostles, from the prophecy of the rise and reign, consumption and destruction of antichrist, from the state of the Jews, agreeable to the prophecy of Christ and the apostles' testimony concerning them.

PART

Of the Birth, Life, Death and Refurrection of Jesus Christ.

To begin with his birth. When an inquiry is made for the place for the LORD, an habitation for the MIGHTY ORE of Fucob, it is faid, Pfalm cxxxii. 6. Lo, we heard of it, at Ephrata, when this habitation is found for the LORD. It is added, v. 7. We will go into his tabernacle, we will worship at his foot-stool. The prophet Micah foretells the place of his birth, chap. v. 2. And thou Bethlehem Ephrata, thou art litile among the thousands of Judah; * out of thee shall he come forth unto me, that shall be the Ruler in Ifrael, whose goings forth have been from the beginning, even from the days of eternity. The evangelist Mat. ch. ii. 1, gives an account that Jesus was born in Bethlehem, of Judah, in the days of Herod the king, who upon hearing of his being born king of the Tews, he gathered the chief priests and scribes of the people together, and demanded of them where Christ should be born? as being fatisfied that that event was foretold: They faid unto him, in Bethlehem, of Judah, and quoted the prophecy of Micah just mentioned.

Poor deceived, mistaken Herod, supposing Jesus Christ to be a temporal prince, feared himself in danger, (alas, in danger from the Saviour, from him who came not to destroy mens' lives but to save them) and sought the young child's life, which occasioned the being fent to Egypt for the suffilment of the prophecy; out of Egypt I have called my fon. Upon his return from Egypt, Jeseph was afraid of king Archelus, who reigned in the room of his father Herod,

It is faid the Jews, the daughter of troops, divided their country, fo that for every thousand there was a Chief Captain; and because Bethlehem was not able to make up a thousand, the prophet calleth it little, but God would raise up Israel's Ruler therein.

fo did not return to Judea, but turned afide into the parts of Gallilee, and came and dwelt in the city called Nazareth, that it might be fulfilled that was fpoken of by the prophets, he shall be called a Nazareen: As the prophets in the plural number are here spoken of, and I have not been able to turn to any of them, in which this is particularly expressed, it has exercised my mind in way of inquiry, and that which appears most likely, is, that it was what was testified by the prophets concerning Jesus, in other expressions that denote the same thing.

Now when I confider that the holiness of the Nazarites under the law was only typical, and could not make the Nazarites perfect, as pertaining to the conscience, but they must offer their sin-offering when the days of their separation were fulfilled, Num. vi.13.14. Though all the days of their feparation they were called holy unto the Lord, I look for this holiness thus typified; in him of whom it is faid, he shall be called a Nazareen. In him alone can I view that inimitably grand, majestick description of her Nazarites, we have in Lam. iv. 7: Her Nazarites were purer than fnow; they were whiter than milk; they were more ruddy in body than rubies; their polishing of sapphire. was what their holiness, all the day's of their separation, pointed to, which dwelt in perfection in Jesus the Holy One. When we confider Sampson, who was a type of him, a Nazarite from the womb, as the angel told Manoah's wife, Judges xiii. 5. She added, when she told her husband in v. 7. 'till the day of his death; but this might not be, no perfection was to be found in the typical Nazarites, that was referved to the antitype.

Now confidering these things, if what is said of the Nazarites reserved only to themselves, those scriptures would be of private interpretation; but we are told no scripture is so, therefore they must point to IESUS who is the public interpretation of them: So what is spoken of them is fulfilled in his being called a Nazareen; and as the Nazarites holiness, pointed to his perfect holiness so the multitude of texts where he is spoken of as the Holy One, all point to him. In this character, the purer than fnow, the whiter than milk, the more ruddy than rubies, whose polishing is of fapphire, the Nazarite indeed, in whom is no blemish; this is the most fatisfying view I can at prefent take of that paffage, that it might be fulfilled that was spoken of by the prophets, he shall be called a Nazareen.

If we take notice of the life of Jesus, we shall find the prophefies fulfilled herein as fo many evidences of the truth under confideration. The pfalmist, in the ciiid pfalm, bleffeth the LORD who forgiveth all thy iniquities, who healeth all thy difeases. That Jesus is the LORD is evidenced in his pronouncing to the fick of the palfy, fon be of good cheer, thy fins be forgiven thee. To prove himself the Lord that forgave iniquity, he healed the man with his word, as we fee Matt. ix. begining, Mark ii. 3.

When the disciples of John were sent to inquire, if he were the true MESSIAH, Luke vii. 21, in the fame hour he cured many of infirmities, and plagues, and of evil spirits; and to many that were blind he gave fight, and gave them this as an answer to John, the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleanfed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, to the poor the gospel is preached, as if he had said, tell John the things you hear and see, and let him compare them with the prophefics of the Old-Testament concerning the MESSIAH, and collect the answer to his inquiry.

The blind fee; Pfalm cxlvi. 8. The Lord openeth the eyes of the blind, Ifaiah xxix. 18. And the eyes of the blind shall fee out of obscurity and out of darkness. Isa. xlii, 6. 7. And I will keep thee and give thee for a covenant of the people, to open the blind eyes, Ifa. xxxv. 5. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened. Ifa. xiii. 16. And I will bring the blind by a way which they knew not; I will make darknef; light before them, and crooked things streight; These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them. Thus the many that were blind, to whom he gave fight while John's messengers tarried, appeared as so many evidences of his being the true Messian, prophefied of by the prophets: So do the two blind men whose eyes were opened, recorded in Matt. ix, from the 27th v. and the blind man that was restored and faw every man clearly, Mark viii. from 23d to 25th v. With blind Bartimeus the beggar, who received his fight and followed Jesus in the way, Mark x. from 46 to 52; and the other beggar man, who was blind from his birth, of purpose that the works of God might be made manifest in him, that he should be an evidence of the truth of the character of JESUS CHRIST, as a means made use of to bring others to believe in him; for this is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath fent. If we confider these as not only restored to their bodily fight, but having the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ, wor-fhipping him, calling him Lord, following him in the way, the evidence will increase upon us; and we shall see the following character exemplified spiritually as well as literally, THE LAME WALK. Those ignorant and incapacitated to go one slep of the way, having received fight, follow Jesus in the way, as well as those literally lame, who when we see them coming to Jesus in the temple, and being brought to him in other places, and healed by him, are we not constrained to join with the multitude in Matt. xv. 31, who wondered when they faw the dumb speak, the mained to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to fee ? And they glorified the God of Ifracl. And do do we not see, Isaiah, xxxv. 6. Then shall the lame leap as an hart, fulfilled in Jesus causing the lame to walk? See the man lame from his mother's womb, leaping and walking and praising God, Alts iii. 8.

The lepers are cleanfed.—Under the law there were directions to the priest to discover the leprofy and put the leper out of the camp, and shut him up, &c. but no means directed to, for the healing of it, that was the work of God.

Even when king Uzziah was fmitten with leprofy, he continued fo to the day of his death, and dwelt in a feveral house; the wealth of his kingdom could not procure him healing or inlargement.

When the King of Syria fent to the king of Ifrael to recover Naaman of his leprofy, no wonder that the king of Ifrael was fo struck as to rend his cloaths and fay, am I a God, to kill and make alive! That this man doth fend to me to recover a man of his leprofy.

But behold! when Jesus came down from the mountain, among the multitude that followed him, there came a leper and worshipped him, saying, LORD if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean; and IESUS put forth his hand and touched him, and faid, I WILL, be thou clean, and immediately his leprofy was cleanfed. This was done under the law dispensation; so Jesus faith to him, fee thou tell no man, but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer the gift that Moses commanded for a testimony unto them. Though the priest could do nothing towards cleansing the leper, yet he was directed when to pronounce him clean; and when he was obliged to pronounce one clean that Jesus had healed by his word, it was an evidence unto them of this truth, that JESUS was the CHRIST, the true Messiah. Even Naaman the Syrian, when healed of his leprofy, acknowledges the God of Ifrael to be the one only living and true God, 2 Kings, v. 15. Behold, now I know that there is no God in all the

the earth but in Ifrael: So then when Jesus faid to the leper with immediate fuccess, I will, be thou clean, it was a testimony unto them, that the God that could kill and make alive, and recover a man of his leprofy, was manifest in the flesh, in Jesus of Nazareth, that Jesus was the true Messian, he that should come; and John would know when the lepers were cleanfed; he need not look for another; especially when he understood him to heal with a word without hesitation: Even when ten of them joined their voices in Jesus, mafter have mercy on us, he only fays, go shew yourselves to the priest; and as they went they were cleanfed.

The deaf hear. The prophet Ifaiah fays, chap. xxix. 18. In that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book; and xxxv. 5. The ears of the deaf shall be unflopped. In Mark vii. from 32 to 37, Jesus manifelts himself the true Messiah, by healing the deaf and dumb, to the assonishment of beholders, who acknowledge he hath done all things well: He maketh the deaf to hear and the dumb to fpeak.

The dead are raised up. Jesus raising the widows fon from the dead, Luke vii. 12, caused the much people that were present at the young man's funeral to glorify God, and gave occasion to John to send his disciples to him: He likewise manifested himself in calling Lazarus out of his grave, on which many of the 7ews, believed on him.

And to the poor the Gospel is preached. This pasfage contains ample matter to fill the mind with admiration, at the exceeding riches of divine grace contained therein. Oftentimes poverty of spirit is lookeduponasa qualification, or good difposition, wrought in, or attained by, religious people, as that which diftinguishes them as objects of the divine favour, to the exclusion of the destitute and worthless among the ehildren of men; and there is nothing more natural to us than to admire ourselves for some such supposed attainment, to the despising of others. When Jesus brought this paffage to the view of his hearers, in the 4th of Luke, where it is written, the spirit of the LORD is upon me, because he hath annointed me to preach the gospel to the poor, &c. and said unto them, this day is this fcripture fulfilled in your ears: They all bear him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth; undoubtedly imagining it had a particular direction to them, as thus qualified, as well as that they had a claim upon him as their countryman, he shewed them from the scriptures of the old testament, that the widows of Ifrael were passed by, and Elias sent to Serepta of Sidon, to a despised Gentile, a woman that was a widow; and though many lepers were in Ifrael in the days of the prophet, yet none of them were cleanfed, faving Naaman the Syrian; which foon evidenced their deftitution of poverty of spirit, by their being filled with wrath, highly offended at the aspect of the gospel toward the deflitute.

To the poor the gospel is preached. What do we understand by gospel? It is good news, glad tidings. The poverty, distress and perplexity of mankind is about acceptance with Gop, and it is natural to us all to look for it in a way of establishing our own righteoufness, which is ever accompanied with diffress and perplexity, as inadequate to fatisfy justice, or give peace of conscience; and the distressing inquiry, what lack I yet? dwells upon the mind that is confcious of inability of doing any thing that can satisfy justice, or atone for past transgressions: But the golpel brings glad tidings of peace by Jesus Christ, the Mediator of God and man, the end of the law for righteoufness; in whom alone we are made accepted: His righteousness being perfect and the sole ground of acceptance, no one can ever look for acceptance ceptance by virtue of any other rightcousiness, without finking disappointment, be his character ever so fair in the eyes of men, or in his own apprehensions.

Neither can any one ever so vile look for acceptance solely from this quarter and be disappointed, Isuiah xxviii. 16. 1 Pet. ii. 6. He that believeth shall not make haste: He that believeth on him shall not be confounded: Shame and confusion belongs to those who make lies their refuge, and hide themselves under falshood: For the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overslow the hiding-place; which must bring on haste and consusion of mind when the refuge and hiding-place fails, which those who believe the gospel report shall not be subject to; for, Rom. ix. 33. Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.

The gospel brings the fure and everlasting foundation to view, in the perfect character and finished work of Jesus Christ. 'Tis good news, glad tidings to the destitute children of men: Let John judge if it can come from any but the true Messian, he that should come, &c.

To the inquiry, why John, who before this bare witness of him, should now send to ask this question; whether for the confirmation of his own faith, or the satisfaction of his disciples, it may be said, it appears likely he might have himself and them both in view; for both they and he might be stumbled to see that he was left confined in prison, while Jesus, to whom he bare testimony as the true Messiah, did not relieve him; Jesus lets him know he was about the work the Messiah was to do, and the blessedness he was to look for was not a temporal deliverance from his confinement, but in not being offended in him.

As John's testimony hath been mentioned, it may be needful to attend to it as an evidence of the truth before us; for as the prophet prophesied of John as the forerunner of the true Messian, (as the voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the LORD, make flraight in the defert a high-way for our Goo: Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low, and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain; and the glory of the LORD shall be revealed, and all flesh shall fee together, for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken, Ifaiah xl. 3, 4, 5. Behold I will fend you Elias the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, Malachi iv. 5. This event must take place: So the disciples when they had a view of his glory on the mount of transfiguration, and heard the voice, this is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, asked this question, why fay the scribes that Elias must first come? Jesus answered and told them, Elias verily cometh first. Elias is come already, and they have done to him whatfoever they lifted: (They had beheaded John in prison) likewise shall also the son of man suffer of them. Then the disciples understood that he spake to them of John the Baptist, of whom Matthew says, this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esais, saying, prepare ye the way of the LORD, make his paths straight. Perhaps we have the reason of his being called Elias, in Luke i. 17. And he, i. e. John, shall go before him; i. e. Jesus in the spirit and power of Elias, and shall turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, &c.

The spirit and power of Elias was manifested in bringing the idolatrous Israelites to acknowledge Jehovan is God, 1 Kings, 18, 21 to 29. John the baptist comes in the same spirit to turn the disobedient to the wisdom of the just, and make ready a people prepared for the Lord. John calls them off from every error, to view the glory of the Lord, that was to be revealed in the Messiah that should come after him, and be preserved before him, until he comes to know him. Says he, I knew him not, but that he should be made marifest to Israel: At his baptism, when he saw the Holy Ghost descend and remain on him, and heard the voice from heaven confirming the prophetick word; This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. He says, he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, upon whom thou shalt see the spirit descending and remaining on him, the same is he that baptizeth with the Holy Ghost; and Isaw and bear record that this is the Son of God.

What Isaiah prophesied of him had an exact fulfilment in him and his ministry, calling every exalted character, that looked for preference in the MESSIAH'S kingdom on that account, to repentance; it was not an earthly kingdom, but the kingdom of Heaven that was at hand. None were there admitted on account of personal excellencies, or excluded for want of them; but every one admitted by the good pleasure of the KING, in virtue of his own righteousness; which, while it brought low mountains and hills, it exalted every valley, every one depressed and despairing for want of personal righteousness, to recommend them to the divine favour, upon the knowledge of his perfect character and finished work, or upon the glory of the Lord being revealed. See the of their acceptance in him ;-All flesh shall see together, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken. Thus were the vilest characters encouraged by John's preaching; the publicans and harlots believed him, whose characters were depressed low as valleys. The apostle speaking to the Ephesian Gentiles, who in time past, or before they believed the gospel, sustained the same worthless characters, says, Eph. ii. 4. But God who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he lived us, even when we were dead in fins, hath quickened us together with Christ, and hath raifed us up together, and made us fit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Surely here, the valleys are exalted, finners of the Gentiles quickened together with Christ, and raifed and made to fit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Jesus the high-priest of our profession, when he had offered one facrifice for fin, fat down as having finished his work. We sinners of the Gentiles, as low as valleys, are quickened together with Christ, and raifed and made to fit together in him; fit as those come to a place of rest and safety. Surely here is the place in which the brother of low degree may fit and rejoice with exceeding great joy, in that he is exalted, and the rich in that he is made low; that he hath discovered the fading nature of his riches, by the knowledge of Jesus Christ. If we pursue John's testimony of him, after Jesus was manisested to him, as in John i. 29, 36. Behold the LAMB of GOD that taketh away the sin of the world: Behold the LAMB of God, &c. It will join in yielding evidence that Issus is the Christ; for fo fure as the prophet's testimony of the voice crying in the wilderness, was fulfilled in John the baptist, so sure he bare witness to the truth which he thus expresses; I faw and bare record that this is the Son of God.

This is the character Jesus claimed; this is the truth he bare witness to, through his whole life; this is what his works bare witness of. This is the character he claimed, John viii. 24, 28, 58. Before Abraham was I am; which was the character of the God of Israel, as given to Moses, Exodus. iii. 13, 14. Moses inquires, what answer he shall give, when the children of Israel shall ask the name of the God of their fathers? And God said unto Moses, I am that I am: And he said, thus shalt thou say to the children of Israel, I am hath sent me unto you. Jesus conversing with their descendants who had this record, says to them, if ye believe not that I am, ye shall die in your sins. When ye have lift up the Son of Man, ye shall know that I AM. When the band came to apprehend Jesus, he said unto them, Whom seek ye? They faid, Jesus of Nazareth: Jesus faith unto them, I AM. As foon as he had faid unto them, I AM, they went backward and fell to the ground. He asked again, whom seek ye? They said, Jesus of Nazareth: Jesus answered, I have told you that I AM.—When Jesus faid, before Abraham was, I AM, they took up stones to cast at him, John, viii. 59. The reason of their several attempts to stone him, they gave, John x. 33, for blasphemy: And because thou being a man maketh thyself God, he still claimed this character, and referred them to his works. If I do not the works of my father, believe me not; but if I do, though you believe not me, believe the works; that ye may know and believe that the father hath fent me: I have greater witness than that of John, for the work which the father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do bare witness of me, that the father hath fent me: Believe me that I am in the father and the father in me, or else believe me for the very works sake.

Thus Jesus claimed the character and did the works which the Messiah was to do, and referred the Fews to the works, as bearing witness of him: They constantly opposing and accusing him as having a devil, being mad, speaking blasphemy, until he is purfued to death as a blasphemer; in which death we have the fulfilment of the prophefies, and the accomplishment of the types of the old Testament. And although Jesus was put to death as a blasphemer, and is despised and rejected of men; despised and we esteemed him not: but esteemed him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted; yet he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and by his stripes we are healed: The LORD hath laid on him the iniquities of us all: For the trangression of my people people was he fmitten. The various other prophefies concerning the death of CHRIST (which had their ful, filment therein) in the old-testament, would lead to too great length to take a view of here. All the types and facrifices have their fulfilment here, as the LAMB GOD would provide himself, of which Abraham told Isaac, who was typified by the lamb caught in the thicket by his horns, that was offered instead of Isaac, Genesis xxii. 13, as the antitype of the paffover lamb, the blood of which being sprinkled on the door, &c. the destroying angel should pass over and not come into their houses. These types no doubt John had in view when he points to the antitype with, behold the LAMB of God that taketh away the fin of the world: Behold, the LAMB of GOD. So had John the beloved, when he fays, Unto him that loved us and washed us from our fins in his own blood. So had Paul, when he fays, Even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us: and when he speaks of the church of God which he had purchased with his own blood, of being justified by his blood, of having redemption through his blood, and of his fanctifying the people with his own blood, And Peter, when he fays, for as much as ye were not redeemed with corruptible things as filver and gold, from your vain conversation, received by tradition from your fathers, but with the precious blood of CHRIST, as of a LAMB without blemish and without Spot. Here the whole redeemed company will join without a diffenter, Thou art worthy, for thou wast flain and nast redeemed us to God by thy blood.

The fulfilment of the prophesies of the old-testament in the circumstances of the death of Jesus might here be taken brief notice of, such as the reproach he underwent, spoken of Psalm xlii. 3, 10. My tears have been my meat day and night, while they continually say unto me, where is thy God? With a sword in my bones mine enemies reproach me, while they say continually, where is thy God? They that fit in the gate speak against me, and I am the song of the drunkard. Reproach hath broken my heart. Is it possible to express the most keen reproach in stronger language? With a fword in my bones mine enemies reproach me; reproach hath broken my heart. These were fulfilled in the dying Jesus, Where is thy God? He trusted in Goo, let him deliver him now, if he will have him. They fpit upon him: What more ignominious? They blind-folded and smote him: What more distreffing? The prophefy fays, they shout out the lip, they wag the head. The history fays, they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads. The prophety of their giving him vinegar to drink, is then fulfilled, and the prophetick language of the xxiid Pfalm uttered; my God, my God, why hast thou forfaken me? And we have a specimen of the accomplishment of the prophefy in the ciid Pfalm, of his regarding the prayer of the destitute, hearing the groaning of the prisoner, and saving the sons of death, in his answer to the dying thief. Here we have him uttering the language of Pfalm xxxi. 5. Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit. The prophet Daniel says, he shall finish transgression and make an end of sin, make reconciliation for iniquity, and bring in everlasting righteousness. Jesus upon the cross says, it is finished. Isaiah says, he made intercession for the transgressors. Dying Jesus prays, Father forgive them for they know not what they do. Those circumstances that at sirst view feemed merely accidental, were ordered for the fulfilment of the scriptures: The zeal of the Jews for the the observation of the sabbath, made them urge that the legs of those that were crucified might be broken, and that they might be taken away. Confequent upon which the foldiers came and brake the legs of the first, and of the other that were crucified with him; but when they faw that he was already dead they break not his legs, but one of them with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came there out blood and water, which things were done that the scriptures should be fulfilled, The type in the passover lamb, Exodus, xii. 46, Numbers ix. 12. Neither shall ye break a bone thereof, has its sulfilment here. And the prophesy in Pfalm xxxiv. 20. He keepeth all his bones, not one of them is broken, is accomplished in him.—

(Doth the apostle say, we are members of his body, of his slesh, and of his bones! and shall not one of them be broken! here is strong consolation.) So likewise the piercing the spear is spoken of by another prophet: They shall look on him whom they have pierced, for every eye shall see him, and they also that pierced him.

Thus the subject is pursued until Jesus is dead: The soldiers found him so, and therefore they break not his legs. When Joseph asked the body of Pilate, he would not give it until he knew from the Centurion that he was certainly dead. Joseph, who before had been a secret disciple for sear of the Jews, went in boldly to Pilate to ask the body of Jesus, and laid him in his own new tomb, that was hewed out of a rock, wherein never man before was laid.

Well, his crucifiers have prevailed—are they fatisfied? Alas! they are still afraid! they remember that Jesus put the issue of the controversy upon his resurrection from the dead, which he spake of so often as to be a known fact among them: And they say to Pilate, Sir, we remember that that deceiver said while he was alive, after three days I will rise again; command therefore that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day: Pilate, answered, You have a watch, go your way, make it as sure as you can. So they went and made the sepulchre sure, fealing the stone and setting a watch. The design of the watch was to prevent any deception about the resurrection of Jesus Christ,

CHRIST, by his disciples coming by night and stealing him away. Alas! what fear could arife from the disciples; who all forsook him and sled? Matthew xxvi. 56, Mark xiv. 50. And though Peter and John afterwards followed him, yet Peter followed afar off, and was afraid to own his LORD, even before a damfel, but denied three times that he knew him: And 70hn who was the only male of the disciples that we have an account of that stood by the cross, he did not understand the scriptures concerning the resurrection of JESUS CHRIST, until it was accomplished, nor any of them, John xx. 8. 9. The sepulchre was hewn out of a rock, and no way to it but by the door. The very great stone that was rolled to the door was fealed, and the watch fet to keep it, who if they fell afleep, forfeited their lives; but divine power interposed, there was a great earthquake; the Angel of the LORD descended and rolled back the stone from the door and fat upon it; his countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as fnow, and for fear of him the keepers did shake and became as dead men. The earthquake mentioned in Matthew xxvii. 51, 54, and xxviii. 2, appears to be one and the same, though at first view the mention that is made of it in Matthew xxvii. 51, feems to be immediately connected with his giving up the ghost; yet the 53d verse shews it belonged to his refurrection. The vail of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; the vail that always hung to divide the holy place from the most holy, where none might enter but the high-priest once a year, upon the day of atonement, with the blood of the facrifice, which he offered for himfelf and the errors of the people: This was rent to shew that the antitype was now come, and the way to the holiest of all was opened by JESUS CHRIST.

The centurion and those that were with him watching Jesus, when they faw the earthquake, and those things that were done, feared, faying, truly this was the Son of God. The centurian and they that were with him watching Jesus, mentioned in the 54th verse, I conceive to be the watch at the sepulchres although the appointment of them by Pilate and their being fet is mentioned after in verses 65, 66; this watch being fet to prevent, finally strengthen the evidence of our Lord's refurrection, being themfelves constrained to acknowledge, truly this man was the Son of God. Some of them returning to the city shewed the chief priest all the things that were done, and when they were affembled with the elders, they gave large money to the foldiers, to hire them to fay, his disciples came by night and stole him away while we flept; and although this will expose you to death, yet we will interpole if it come to the governor's ears; we will perfuade him and fecure you: So they took the money and did as they were taught; and this faying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day, Matt. xxviii. from the 11th to the 16th verse. By this report it is evident that Jesus was not in the sepulchre on the third day, by the confession of the Fews. The angel that thus overcome and dispirited the soldiers comforted the women with the tidings of the refurrection: Fear not ye; for I know that ye feek Jesus: He is not here; for he is rifen as he faid: Come, feethe place where the LORD lay.

Mary Magdalene was the first at the sepulchre: John xx. 1. Early while it was yet dark, and seeth, the stone rolled away from the sepulchre. This was all that John gives account of her seeing at that time of her going to the sepulchre; upon which she runneth and cometh to Peter and John, saying, they have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him: They ran both of them, and went into the sepulchre, and saw the linen clothes lie, and the napkin that was about his head wrapt together in a place by itself. It is said of John, he faw and believed, for as yet they knew not the scriptures that he must rise from the dead. He faw and believed what? that Jesus was not in the fepulchre: Also it appears most highly probable that what the scriptures of the Old-Testament had said, pointing to the refurrection of Jesus Christ, with what he had faid concerning it, which as vet, or until that time they did not understand, now struck the mind of 70hn, as what was accomplished in his refurrection; while Peter returned wondering in himself at what had happened, and went away again unto their own home; (but Mary was back again the fecond time to the fepulchre after them:) And when they went home she stood without at the door of the fepulchre weeping, and stooping down into the fepulchre, and feeth two angels in white, fitting one at the head, and the other at the feet where the body of Jesus had lain; who inquired, why she wept? Because, faid she, they have taken away my LORD; and she turned herself back and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus: He was pleased, by calling her by name, to make himself known to her, and bid her go to his brethren, and speak to them of his ascension. She went and told the disciples that she had feen the LORD, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

She is now ready to accompany the women to the fepulchre with the spices they had prepared, as Matthew relates, who came at the rising of the sun. They said, who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre, for it was very great. But why should they make the inquiry, if Mary had been there before and seen the stone rolled away? Probably they might not credit her testimony; might suppose her to be easily mistaken, being there so very early, while it was yet dark. But when they looked they saw that the stone was rolled away, and entering in they faw a young man sitting on the right side in a long white garment. Saith Mark, and behold two men stood by them in shining garments. Saith Luke, which spake to the women, saying, be not affrighted, ye feek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: He is not here; but is rifen. Mark mentions a young man fitting, and Luke two men standing, which testimonies do not contradict each other; for it often happens when two are together the one that strikes the attention most, as being chief speaker, is made mention of; especially when the evidence of the fact they testify is the matter to be attended to, and it is not uncommon for a person who is first seen sitting, to be presently and at the same interview standing or moving from place to Those who were in long white garments, or shining garments, I suppose, were angels appearing in the likeness of men; and, no doubt, the same angel that Matthew speaks of, who came and rolled back the stone, and fat upon it, whose countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as fnow, was one of them, and the chief speaker. Their joint testimony is, that Jesus Christ is risen from the dead, as he said unto the disciples: And each evangelist reports, that they fent the women with the news to the disciples, informing them that he goeth before them into Gallilee, where they should see him, as he said unto them before he was crucified, Matt. xxvi. 32, and Mark xvi. 7.

Now as they went to tell his disciples, Jesus met them and said, All hail, and sends them on the same errand they had before from the angels. Mary had before told the disciples she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken such things unto her. Now Jesus meets and shews himself to Mary Magdalene, the other Mary, Salome and other women, with them, and sends them with their joint evidence to tell his disciples.

disciples. The view that I have taken of Jesus Christ shewing himself to Mary Magdalene alone, as recorded by John previous to and distinct from his appearing to the women, is proved and strengthened by Mark xvi. 9. Now when Jesus was risen, early the first day of the week he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast feven devils; and it seems to me to be most plainly to be gathered from the history, as related by the four evangelists.

The disciples did not believe Mary Magdalene, Mark xvi. 11. They did not believe the joint testimony of her and the other women, Luke xxiv. 11. So Jesus after appeared to two of them as they walked and went into the country; the account of which we have, Mark xvi. 12, and the particulars related, Luke xxiv. 13, &c. And they went and told it to the refi-due; neither believed they them: The cure of their unbelief, or the further evidences that was given of the truth to them, are multiplied evidences of the same truth to us. He after appeared to the eleven as they fat at meat, and upbraided them of their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them that had feen him after he was risen, Mark xvi. 14. But Thomas was not with them when Jesus came, John xx. 24. The other disciples therefore said unto him, we have feen the LORD : But he faid unto them, except I shall fee in his hand the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe. Thus we see the disciples did not any of them give in, to this truth, without evidence to their full fatisfaction. After eight days, (I suppose, on the return of the first day of the week) his disciples were within, and Thomas with them; when Jesus again manifested himself to them, and fatisfied Thomas of the evidence of the truth he had before heard from the other disciples, by faying to him, Reach hither thy finger and behold my hands:

and reach hither thy hand and thrust it into my side, and be not faithless, but believing. Thomas, satisfied with the evidence, answered and said, My Lord and my God. Jesus said unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen and have believed: Those that believe on the credit of divine testimony; that believe through the word of the prophets and apostles, jointly centring in this truth; although they see not Jesus with their bodily eyes; of whom Peter speaks, 1st epistle, i, 8. In whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable, and full of glory.

We find him not only shewing himself to them, but eating and drinking with them after his refurrection. The evening of the day of his refurrection, when he walked unknown with two of the disciples, when they came to fit at meat with them, he took bread and bleffed, and brake and gave to them; and their eyes were opened and they knew him. They rose up the same hour, and returned to Ferufalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and they that were with them, faying, The LORD is rifen indeed, and hath appeared unto Simon: And they told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them, in breaking of bread. And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst, and said, peace unto you. When they were terrified and affrighted, supposing they had seen a spirit, he bid them behold his hands and his feet, that it was he himself; bid them handle him, and be fatisfied he had flesh and bones; and shewed them his hands and his feet. And while they believed not for joy and wondered, he faid unto them, have ye any meat? And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish and a honey-comb; and he took it and did eat before them, Luke xxiv. 43. We have another account of his dining with them, John xxi. from the 10th to the 13th. And Peter speaks of it, Alts x. 40, 41. Him Gop

God raised up and shewed him openly; not to all the people, but to us who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead. This part of the evidence may be closed with the testimony of Paul, 1st, Cor. xv. 4th to the 8th. That he rose again the third day, according to the scriptures: And that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve. After that he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen assect. After that he was seen of James; then of all the apostles. And last of all he was seen of me asso, as of one born out of due time.

PART II.

The gift of the HOLY GHOST:—The spread of the Gospel: The miracles wrought in confirmation of the Truth:—The difference between them and the deceivable miracles of Antichrist.

THE gift of the Holy Ghost, according to the promise of Jesus Christ to his disciples, is another evidence of this truth, with which is connected the Apostles' testimony, or their bearing witness of the resurcation of the Lord Jesus. When Jesus Christ fold his disciples, John xiv. 2, I go to prepare a place for you. Chap. xvi. 5, 7, But now Igo my way to him that sent me. Nevertheless, I tell you the truth; it is expedient for you that I go away: For if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart I will fend him unto you. I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; but the Comforter, the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will fend in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you. And Luke tells us in the history of the AEls of the Aposlles, chap. i. 4, 5. That Jesus being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusulem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which ye have heard of me; for John truly baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the HOLY GHOST, not many days hence. This having its accomplishment after the afcension of Jesus Christ, while the disciples tarried together at Jerufalem, waiting for it, according to the Lord's direction, as we have account, Ads ii. evidences the truth before us, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, which will more fully appear, if we confider the office of the Spirit, or the defign of his being fent, as expressed by Jesus Christ unto his disciples before his death, John xvi. 13. he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he shall guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatfoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: And he will shew you things to come. He shall glorify me; for he shall take of mine, and shew it unto you, John xv. 26. But when the Comforter is come, whom I will fend unto you from the Father, the spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me. And ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning, Acts i. 8. But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Guost is come upon you: And ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

There appears three things to be taken notice of. First. He shall shew you things to come. This had its sulfilment, I conceive, in what the Apostles spake concerning the rise, reign consumption and destruction of Antichrist; as in 2 Thes. 2; 2 Pet. 2; 1 John ii. 18, 19; 1 Tim. iv. 1; 2 Tim. 3; and in the book of the Revelations: And in what is spoken of Israel in the xith of Romans, particularly from the 26th verse.

Secondly. He shall not speak of himself, he shall glorify me; for he shall receive of mine, and shew it unto you. All that the Father hath are mine; therefore said I that he shall take of mine, and shew it unto you.

He shall not speak of himself, of his work on the hearts of men, so as to make men the objects of admiration and attention, because they can tell of the work of the Spirit on their hearts, and so are led to give out that they are some great ones, some peculiar favourites of heaven.

He shall glorify me, he shall take of mine and shew it unto you. The office of the spirit is to shew the glory of Christ, as a guide points us forward to the way in which we should go, or to the object to which we should look; and is the voice behind us, faying, this is the way, walk ye in it. We are taught to call JESUS LORD, by the HOLY GHOST, and to view his glory as our all-fufficient relief, in our destitute circumstances, to be looked to: Not to call ourselves and one another experienced Christians, that have the Spirit, and fo to admire ourfelves and one another as the favorites of Heaven, in preference to others. If we should take notice of the many ways in which the work of the spirit is manifested in the New Testament, they would be all found to center in the display of the glory of Christ, which will be more eafily brought to view in confidering the third particular; wherein the witness of the Spirit and the Apostles' testimony are connected together.

Thirdly. He shall testify of me, and ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning; ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and Samaria, and to the uttermost ends of the earth.

When

When the Apostles were filled with the Holy GHOST, on the day of Pentecost, they received power to be witnesses of the resurrection of the LORD Jesus, to men of other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance, though there were together at that time dwellers in Ferufalem Fews, devote men out of every nation under heaven. There are about fifteen different parts of the earth mentioned, from whence they came, where they were born; (probably collected together to the feaft of Pentecost.) They heard every man in his own tongue, wherein they were born. What they heard was proving from the Scriptures that Jesus was the Christ, as evidenced by his refurrection from the dead: as may be feen by Peter's discourse to them, v. 36. Therefore let all the house of Ifrael know affuredly that God hath made that fame Jesus whom ye have crucified both LORD and CHRIST; the effect of which was the addition of about three thousand fouls, to the number of those that called Jesus Lord, by the Holy Ghost. The apostles did not arrogate any thing to themfelves; for when the lame man was healed in the next chapter, by the gift of healing from the fame Spirit, and the people ran together into Solomon's porch, greatly wondering, Peter answered to the people, Ye men of Ifrael, why marvel ye at this? Or why look ye fo earnestly upon us, as tho' by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk? The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the Gon of our Fathers hath glorified his Son Issus, whom ye delivered up, and denied in the prefence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go; but ye denied the HOLY ONE and the just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you, and killed the Prince of Life, whom God hath raifed from the dead, whereof we are witneffes, and his name, through faith in his name, hath made this man strong, whom ye fee and know; yea, yea, the faith that is by him hath given him this perfect foundaris in the prefence of you all. And tho' on their speaking to the people, the priests and the captain of the temple and the Sadduces came upon them, being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus, the resurrection from the dead, and laid hands on them, and put them in hold until the next day; yet many of them that heard the word believed; and the number of the men were about five thousand.

The next day, being brought before the rulers, they received power to be witnesses to this truth, before these rulers in Jerusalem; being filled with the Holy Ghost, Peter said unto them, Ye rulers of the people and elders of Ifrael, if we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole, be it known to you all, and to all the people of Ifrael, that by the name of IFsus Christ, of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raifed from the dead, even by him doth this man fland before you whole: This is the stone set at nought by you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there falvation in any other; for there is none other name under Heaven given among men, whereby we must be faved. Thus with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection; and though they firaitly threatened and commanded them not to speak at all, nor teach in the name of Jesus, they received power to answer, Whether it be right in the fight of God to hearken to you more than unto Gon, judge ye? We ought to obey Gon rather than man; we cannot but speak the things which we have heard and feen.

Thus hath the apostles, bearing witness unto Jesus at Jerusalem, and Judea been hinted at. The History of the Asis of the Apostles abounds with other like instances: But I pass to mention their being witness.

Upon the perfecution against the church at Jerusalem, they that were scattered went every where preaching the word. Then Philip went down to Samaria and preached Christ there. And when the apostles heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent to them Peter and John: And they, when they had testified and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem and preached the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans. Philip was sent to the desert, where he met the Ethiopean Eunuch, and preached Christ to him, from the liid of Isaiah. Philip was after sound at Azotus, and passing through he preached in all the cities until he came to Cesarea.

In the above-mentioned history Luke gives an account of the apostles' being witnesses in Antioch, Ataliah, Berea, Cefarea, Cyprus, Cyrean, Cicillia, Damascus, Derbe, Ephefus, Galatia, Joppa, Iconium, Illyricom, Lydda, Lystra, Macedonia, Missa, Paphos, Phenicia, Perga, Pistia, Pamphilia, Salamis, Selucia, Syria, Troas and Thessalamica: Which are here mentioned to illustrate the suffilment of the promise of Jesus Christ to his disciples: Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me in Samaria, and so the uttermost parts of the earth.

Here it may be added, that the Apostles in their testimony, and first Disciples, appeared sincere; they really believed the truth they testissed, because they worshipped Jesus Christ as God. In endeavouring, for my own satisfaction, to look into the New Testament, to see who were believers, that, laying asside tradition, I might find what was the faith of the Gospel: From thence I could not but draw this conclusion, that those who saw the glory of Christ in so satisfactory a manner as to call him Lord, and address gress him as the object of their worship, were believers: These appeared to understand the mystery of godliness, that God was manifest in the slesh. When I came to Matt. viii. 2. And behold a leper worshipping him, faying, LORD! if thou wilt thou cant make me clean, I was fatisfied I found a New Teftament Believer: And reading on to yer. 6, 7, 8, I faw a Centurion befeeching him, faying, LORD, my fervant lyeth at home fick of the palfy, grievoufly tormented. Jesus faith; I will come and heal him. The Centurion answered, and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof, but speak the word only and my servant shall be healed; I thought I had found another, and was confirmed that I was right, by reading down to the 10th verse; When Jusus heard, he marveled and faid, I have not found fo great faith, no not in Ifrael. In looking into the 9th chapter I faw a number of believers, whose faith was manifested by their works, in bringing a man sick of the palfy to [ESUS. I call them Believers with good authority; for Jesus faw their faith. Proceeding to verse 18th, I find another Believer, a worshipper of JESUS, faying to him, My daughter is now dead; but come and lay thine hand upon her and she shall live. A diseased woman, in the crowd, is next brought in, in a parenthefis, who had fuch faith in him, as to fay within herself, If I may but touch the hem of his garment I shall be whole. Next we come to the two blind men, v. 27, who followed him, crying and faying, Thou Son of David, have mercy on us. And as they addressed him as Son of David, Jesus was pleased to give them opportunity to profess their faith, and worship him as LORD: Believest thou that I am able to do this? They faid unto him, Yea, Lord. Were I to indulge myself further in this agreeable company, I might feein tedious, having already looked over two chapters; but this may fuffice for a specimen, thar that the first Disciples, together with the Apostles, worshipped Jesus as Lord; beholding his glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth, they address him as the object of their worship; Lord increase our faith; Lord to whom shall we go but unto Thee? Thou hast the words of eternal life, and we believe, and are sure that thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. Their testimony being most surely believed of themselves, it carried them to count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus their Lord. But I am told, that the addressing of Jesus Christ as Lord, is not an evidence that they believed the divinity of his Person, or worshipped him, seeing there are Lords many, and the term Lord is often used for a superior.

But I cannot think the infrances that I have, or that might be mentioned, can be thus fet afide; and I am happy to find it is the description and character of the first disciples, Acts ix. 21. Them that call on this name: And the 1st epistle to the Corinthians is not only directed to the church of Gonat Corinth; to them that are fanctified in Christ Jesus, called faints; but to all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours. It feems Paul thought it the character of the fanctified in CHRIST JESUS. And dving Stephen addresses Jesus as the object of his worship, in the fame language with which JESUS addresses the father. They stoned Stephen, calling upon, and saying, Lorn Jesus receive my spirit. The word GOD is supplied by the translators. So we have Stephen addressing JESUS CHRIST, as the object of his worship in his most ferious and important dying hour, calling upon and faying, LORD JESUS receive my spirit. Here I thought to have closed what I intended, upon the evidence of the fincerity of the apostles and first difciples, caples, in their belief of their testimony; being for fatisfied therewith, as without hesitation, to direct their worship to him, as the true God and eternal life: But as the thought has been objected to as above, (and bringing the callers on that name to view is agreeable) I would a little further purfue the fubject. In Matt. xv. 22, 25, we have a woman of Canan crying unto him, faying, Have mercy on me, O LORD, thou SON of David! Then came fhe and worthipped him, faying, LORD, help me. She was a caller on that name, a New-Testament believer, as Jesus CHRIST himself testifies; O woman, great is thy faith! She appears to be divinely taught to understand the question the pharisees could not answer, what think ye of Christ, whose son is he? They say unto him the son of David. How then doth David in spirit call him LORD, saving, the LORD said to my LORD, fit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy foot flool. If David then call him LORD, how is he his fon? She looks to him in this united character, which can be seen in God manifest in the flefn.

In the 17th chap, we find another believer, tho' a weak one, calling on that name, v. 14. a man kneeling down to him and faying, Lord have mercy on my fon, for he is lunatick, and fore vexed. I call him a weak one, because Mark says, He addressed Jesus with, If thou canst do any thing, have mercy on us and help us. Jesus saith unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth: And straitway the father of the child cried and said, with tears, Lord I believe, help thou my unbelief. I might take notice of the multitudes that came and were brought to Christ for healing, whose faith in and worshipping Jesus is not particularly mentioned, though it is clearly implied; for who would come themselves, or bring their diseased friends to be healed, if they did not believe him able to heal them? And such as were healed by him, previous to their knowledge of him, and without their application to him, were thereby brought to know and own him, as the man born blind; John ix. 38. He said, LORD I believe, and he worshipped him. I might take notice of the calling of the apoilles; of Peter's confession, that had Christ's approbation; of Nathaniel's conviction and confession; of Thomas, who, upon conviction, with full fatisfaction faid, MyLORD and myGOD: But shall close with the crucified thief: LORD remember me when thou comest to thy kingdom. Thus the apostles' bearing witness, with their sincerity herein, has been briefly hinted at. The HOLY GHOST teftifying of Christ in connexion therewith, is to be feen in the miracles wrought by the apostles, in confirmation of their testimony, by which God bare witness with figns and wonders, and divers miracles, and gifts of the HOLY GHOST, according to his own will; when it was the divine will that miracles should be wrought, in confirmation of the witness of the refurrection of the LORD JESUS, which the apostles bare. Perhaps it would be too lengthy to recite the many miracles wrought by the apostles, in confirmation of their doctrine, the healing the lame man has been already mentioned. I shall only recite the passage in Acts v. 12. And by the hands of the apostles were many figns and wonders wrought among the people; infomuch as they brought the fick into the streets, and laid on beds and couches, that at the least, the shadow of Peter's passing by might overshadow some of them. Then came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerufalem, bringing fick folks, and them that were vexed with unclean spirits; and they were healed every one. With the miracles which Philip did, in confirmation of the preaching of Christ in Samaria, which are thus recorded; Unclean spirits, crying crying with a loud voice, came out of many that were possessed; and many taken with palsies, and that were lame, were healed. And that God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul, so that from his body were brought handkershies or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them.

But here may arise an enquiry, in that we are told of the coming of antichrist, whose coming is after the working of satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness, a Thes. is. 9. 10. And of the beast, the spirit of devils, and the salse prophet, Rev. xiii. 13, 14—xvi. 14—xix. 20; that wrought miracles, whereby men were deceived. How may the difference be known, between the miracles wrought by Jesus Christ and his apostles, under the influence of the Holy Ghost, in confirmation of the doctrine of Christ, and the signs, wonders and miracles of antichrist, the beast, salse prophet and spirit of devils.

To which it may be replied, That there are two things ever observable in the miracles wrought by

JESUS CHRIST and his Apostles.

Ist. They were to testify of CHRIST.

Hdly. To relieve the afflicted.

Ist. To testify of Christ. Those wrought by Jesus Christ were to manifest his true character; to prove his claim to be the Son of God, one with the Father. If ye believe not me, believe the works, the works I do in my Father's name bear witness of me.

So also those wrought by the hands of the Apostles were to testify of him, agreeable to what Jesus Christ said unto them, He shall testify of me, and ye also shall bear witness because ye have been with me from the beginning. While they bear witness to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, miracles wrought by

by the power of the Holy Ghost, testified of the truth which they bear witness to. It was not the pie ty; power or holiness of the Apostles; they declared themselves to be men of like passions with their hearcrs: But it was the dignity and glory of Christ that was hereby made manifest.

Hdly. They were to relieve the afflicted, both in their bodies and minds. For instance, let us view the man fick of the palfy, believing Jesus, when he faid, Son thy fins be forgiven thee, and his afflicted. mind is relieved. He is of good cheer indeed, and that his faith might be confirmed, as well as that others might know he had power on earth to forgive fins, he is bid to arife, take up his couch and go to his house. His body is relieved, and he is able to carry that on which he lay, out before them all.

The like may be faid of all the miracles wrought by IESUS CHRIST; they were all miracles of mercy to the blind, deaf, dumb, maimed, possessed, &c. not the poorest, meanest, most destitute and miserable. ever cast out, that came to him, nor any case beyond his power, whereby he was still manifesting himself mighty to fave. These are lest on record both as the ground of our faith in him, and as an encouragement for the most dejected and abject children of men, to look to him from all the ends of the earth and be faved, whatever be their diffresses.

Thus were the miracles wrought by the apostles, miracles of relief to the afflicted, both, in their bodies and minds. Let us view the instance of the lame man that never had walked, though above forty years old, to whom Peter faid, Silver and gold have I none, but fuch as I have give I thee in the name of JESUS CHRIST, of Nazareth, rife up and walk. See him leaping and walking; and we fee him relieved of his bodily infirmity; view him praifing God; and we see his mind relieved. See the

fequel; and we see it is by Jesus of Nazareth, who was crucified, whom God raised from the dead, and to confirm the witness the apostles bare of him: But the deceivable miracles, Ist. Testify of men.

Hdly. Establish falshood.

HIdly. Lead men into flavish fear, darkness and perplexity.

Ist. They testify of men, Acts viii. 9. Simon used forcery and bewitched the people, giving out that himself was some great one, to whom they gave heed. So antichrift, spoken of by the apostles, 2 Thess. ii. whose coming is after the working of fatan, with all power, and figns, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness, is he who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God. This was undoubtedly manifest when the authority of the church was held more facred than the written word, and a measure of it is to be seen wherever the decrees, counfels, confessions and catechisms of men are preferred before the written word, or where they appear to have more weight and influence: The ground of this is, they were wonderfully pious, learned and holy men, who were not likely to be deceived, and we have been ready to fay, if we were as good as they we should not fear, which is idolatry, putting the creature in the place of the Creator; fo worshipping and serving the creature more than the Creator, who is Gon, bleffed forever.

IIdly. To establish falshood, to lead the mind from the fountain of living waters, to broken eisterns that can hold no water; for while they testify of the piety and holiness of men, and lead to the above-mentioned idolatry, they testify of that which is not, of error and falshood: Because the scripture testifies of man, That there is none righteous, no not one; they are all gone out of the way; all we like sheep have gone astray. When we look to men there is no cluster to eat, the good is perished out of the earth, and none upright among men; the best of them is a briar, the most upright, sharper than a thorn hedge: So it leads IIIdly. To flavish fear, darkness and perplexity. The fear of man bringeth a snare; the spirit of antichrist testifying of man, bringing their persons into admiration, tends to subject men to them for their supposed piety and importance, and to look to them as their guides, and to look to themselves, in order to qualify them to look to Jesus, in manner and form as they shall direct them, which will soon bewilder and perplex them with the anxious inquiry, what lack I yet, to adorn myself suitably to go to Jesus, that I may obtain salvation by him?

The sum of the answer to the above inquiry is, Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus is come in the slesh, is of God; for if Jesus is come in the slesh, he hath in our nature and in our stead, sulfilled all rightcousness, obeyed the precept and suffered the penalty of the law, which is manifest, in his resurrection from the dead, when he rose for our justification; the belief of this truth relieves the mind, and gives the answer of a good conscience towards God.

But every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus is come in the sless, is not of God; the spirit that leads us to look to men and to ourselves, to put forth a helping hand to interest us in the divine savour, and insists that the work of Christ is not itself alone all-sufficient to recommend us thereto, is the spirit of antichrist, 1 John, iv. 3. It may be said, antichrist holds forth the evidences of the truth of the gospel, as the aposses foretold of the rise, reign, consumption and destruction of antichrist, who hath arisen and reigned even over the kings of the earth, whom the Lord has

destroy by the brightness of his coming.

The spirit of antichrist, whose coming is after the working of satan, with all power, signs, and lying wonders, as it testifies of men, and has raised them into places of profit, worldly honour and power over their fellow creatures, has led men into bondage and slavery to those thus raised, and into darkness and perplexity, subjecting them to religious tyranny and persecution, so as to change the appearance of primitive christianity, and prejudice the minds of unbelievers, both Tews and Gentiles, against the christian religion.

The spirit of CHRIST which testifies of him bows down the loftiness, and lays low the haughtiness of men, fo that the LORD alone is exalted: And where the spirit of the LORD is, there is liberty, light, joy and gladness; and men are taught thereby to love their enemies, to do good to them that hate them, and pray for them that despitefully use and persecute them, to love one another as he hath loved them, and by love to ferve one another: The confideration of which evidences and manifests the New-Testament religion to be divine, and the author of it to be the Alpha and Omega, the begining and the ending, the first and the last; and so far as it prevails it cannot fail to recommend the religion that teaches and inforces it to the consciences of all men. By this shall all men know ye are my disciples, if ye love one another.

PART III.

The Jews an Evidence of the Truth before us.

MIGHT farther add, that the Jews may be brought in as another evidence to the truth before us, as they are preserved in the providence of God, in their dispersions among the nations cleaving to Moses, who wrote of Jesus Christ, as living witnesses of the truth of the record of the Old-Testament scriptures, from which scriptures the apostles of the Lord and Saviour proved the truth of what they testified concerning Jesus, as being sulfilled in him. So likewise in the sulfilment of what Jesus Christ said concerning them, that should be consequent on their rejecting him and perfecuting his disciples.

Ist. Their rejecting him; see the parable of the vineyard, Matt. xxi. 38, 41. Mark xii. 7, 8, 9. Luke xx. 14, 15, 16. He says in Matt. xxiii. 37, 38, and Luke xiii. 34, 35. O! Jerusalem, Jerusalem! Thou that killest the prophets and stonest them that are sent unto you! How often would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, but ye would not! Behold your house is lest unto you defolate! So also in Matt. xxiv. 12—Mark xxi. 5, 6, when his disciples called him to view the stones and the building of the temple, he said, Verily I say unto you, there shall not be lest one stone upon another that shall not be thrown down; which had its literal accomplishment in the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple, and the very place where they stood ploughed as a field, according to the prophet Micah, which was consequent on their rejecting him: And,

IIdly. Perfecuting his disciples; Matt. xxi. from 34. Wherefore behold I send you prophets and wise men and scribes, and of them ye shall kill and crucify, and of them ye shall scourge in your synagogues, and persecute from city to city. Jesus told them this should come upon them, previous to the destruction of Ferusalem; for when he was speaking of that event, he tells them, Luke xxi. 12, 16. But before all these they shall lay their hands on you and persecute, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rluers for my name sake. And ye shall be betrayed both by parents and brethren, and kinssolks and friends: and of you shall they cause to be put to death. And as he foretold of the destruction of Jerufalem and the temple, and warned his disciples of what they should meet with, or what should befall them: So he gave them a token, which they understood, when to make their escape from those dreadful calamities, Matt. xxiv. 15 and onward— Mark xiii. from v. 14—Luke xxi. 20, &c.

I suppose there is a fund of evidence to the truth before us, in what befel the children of Ifracl, in all that came upon them, the bleffing and the curse; and their being rooted out of their land, in anger and wrath, and great indignation, and cast into another land, as at this day, mentioned Deut. xxix. 28-xxx. 1; which will more fully appear when v. 6 shall have its accomplishment: And the LORD thy God shall circumcife thy heart and the heart of thy feed, to love the LORD thy GOD with all thine heart and with all thy foul, that thou mayst live; which is similar to the prophecy Isa. lix. 20; which is thus quoted by the Apostle, Rom. xi. 26: As it is writen, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and turn away ungodlinefs from Jacob. For this my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins. This is to take place, according to the Apostle, when the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, and so all Israel shall be faved; for notwithstanding they are, as concerning the Gospel, enemies for the sake of the Gentiles, yet, as touching the election, they are beloved for their FATHER'S fake, for the gifts and calling of God are without repentance. I apprehend Jesus Christ fpeaks of the fame thing when he fays, Ye shall not fee me until ye fay, Bleffed is he that cometh in the name of the LORD. Thus the prophet spake of JEsus, Pfalm exviii. 26. Thus the multitudes, Matt. xxi. 9. that went before and that followed after Jesus, riding to Ferufalem, cried Hosanna! Bleffed is he that cometh in the name of the LORD! And thus shall the Jews do when their hearts are circumcifed to love the Lord their God with all their hearts.

Thus have I hinted at many particulars, wherein the evidences of the truth of the good news of the gospel are contained, as knowing that where the character of Jesus Christ is understood, and the evidences of the truth testified of him are satisfactory to the mind, nothing can hinder rejoicing in him; for fo fure as he is God manifest in the slesh, as his claim to Deity is just, as he rose again from the dead, fo fure was his obedience in our nature perfect, and his one facrifice did forever take away fin. The FA-THER is well pleased for his righteousness sake, and we are made accepted in the beloved; for, fays the Apostle, all things are of Gop, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ; and least that should be looked upon as the privilege of the Apostles and first christians only, he adds, Gon was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himfelf, not imputing their trespasses unto them; for he hath made him sin for us who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteougness of God in him. Hence arises the answer of a good conscience towards God, by the refurrection of Jesus Christ, which the Apostle calls the baptism that now saves us; fo that the person whose mind was just now perplexed with a fense of guilt, full of anxiety and distress, turning every way with disappointment to broken cifterns that can hold no water, upon understanding the import of the refurrection of Jesus CHRIST, finds that which quiets his mind and answers all objections, agreeable to the Apostle, Rom. viii. It is God that justifieth, who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died; yea, rather that is risen again from the dead. We read of being begotten again to a lively hope by the refurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, i Pet. i. 4.

C H A P. V.

The good contained in the TRUTH thus evidenced, and our Obligation to keep it always in Remembrance.

THIS leads to the confideration of the good contained in the glad tidings of the Gospel, which respects both the life that now is and that which is to come, being furnished with the answer of a good conscience towards God, by the refurrection of Jesus CHRIST, under a fense of our own guilt, inability and folly, and the various causes of shame, fear and terror that arise from a view of ourselves, to have affurance from the scriptures that Christ was delivered for our offences, and rose again for our justification, Rom. iv. 25. That Christ died for our fins according to the fcriptures, and that he was buried and rofe again the third day, according to the scriptures, 1 Cor. xv. 3, 4, fhews our peace is made with God by him who is our peace, and hath made peace by the blood of his cross. The work is finished in his death, and witnessed in his resurrection; the hope we are begotten to is a lively hope, a hope that maketh not ashamed; of which the Apostle speaks, Rom. v. 5. For when he speaks of Jesus being delivered for our offences, and being raised again for our justification, ch. iv. 25, he adds, ch. v. 1. Therefore being justified: upon believing this truth, we have peace with God, through our LORD JESUS CHRIST. by whom we have access by faith into this grace wherein we now stand, and rejoice in the hope of the glory of God. This made them glory in tribula-tion, which wrought patience, experience and hope; and this hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the HOLY GHOST, which is given to us. How was the love of God shed abroad in their hearts, but in their being fatisfied and affured of the truth of the manifestation of it in the death and resurrection of Jesus CHRIST, as the Apostle adds in the next verse; For when we were without strength Christ died for the ungodly, who was delivered for our offences, and rofe again for our justification: Therefore the hope that comes thereby is a lively hope, fpringing from the truth, from the perfect work of Christ; not the hope of the hypocrite; for what is that, though he hath gained; though he hath gained a good opinion of himfelf, as being diftinguished from some of his fellow-creatures in point of acceptance with God, on account of fomething wrought in or done by him; will it do to mention before God when trouble comes? Will he hear his cry on that account? Will he hear him in his own name? Or though he hath gained the good opinion of others, what is it when God takes away his foul? Hopes from this quarter is as a spider's web, as the giving up the ghost: While the hope that comes by the refurrection of Christ maketh not ashamed, is a lively hope. This is the Gospel which the Apostle preached, by which, fays he, ye are faved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain. How believed in vain? If CHRIST be not raifed your faith is vain, and you are yet in your fins: But, fays he, Now is CHRIST risen and become the first fruits of them that slept. Hence it follows, their faith is not vain, they believed a truth; therefore did not believe in vain, therefore they are not in their fins, they are faved by the gospel, the hope is a lively hope.

Begotten to a lively hope; to an inheritance undefiled and that fadeth not away, referved in the Heavens.

To an inheritance; to as many as received him, or believed the truth concerning him, or received his testimony, testimony, to them gave he power to become the sons of God; and is children, then heirs, heirs of God, joint heirs with Christ; who inherits all things, and could say, All that the Father hath is mine; all mine are thine, and thine are mine; who has prayed for his disciples that they may be with him to behold his glory, and hath said unto them, Because I live, ye shall live also. This his inheritance is incorruptible, and will never sade away, because it is his in persect rightcousness, and altogether undefiled, and it is beyond the reach of moth, rust or thieves, being reserved in the Heavens.

These hints lead to a contemplation of that good which is contained in the gospel, which hath height and depth, length and breadth, that paffeth knowledge, as it respects the present life, and leads to an understanding of the wife man's question and answer, in Ecclef. vi. 12-vii. 1. Who knoweth what good for man in life, or what is man's chief good all the days of his vain life, which he spendeth as a shadow? The answer is, a name better than precious ointment, the name above every name, the knowledge of which shews the day of a man's death better than the day of his birth; this is man's chief good in life. He that findeth me, findeth life, and shall obtain favour of the LORD; Whoso harkeneth unto me shall dwell safely, and be quiet from fear of evil, as knowing that all things shall work together for good, to them that love Gon, to them that are called according to his purpose. And with respect to the life to come, if the apostle saith, eye hath not scen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love him, well may I leave it in the admiring language of the Pfalmist, O how great is thy goodness which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee! Thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee, before the fons of men.

Н

May I never forget this truth, that is thus evidence ed, and contains in it man's chief good in this life and the life to come. When the apostle would have Timothy be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus, and endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus CHRIST, he tells him to remember that JESUS CHRIST, of the feed of David, was raifed from the dead, as that which was all-fufficient to animate him hereunto; and when he gives the Corinthians a brief account of the gospel, that he and his sellow-apostles preached, how that Christ died for our fins, and was buried and rose again the third day, according to the scriptures, and that he was feen of his chofen witnesses, many of which were then alive, though some had fallen asleep, he fays, of this gospel, by which ye are faved, if we keep in memory what I preached unto you. How is he to be understood? Doth the gospel fave on condition of keeping in memory, fo that if they forgot it they were loft?

I conceive the meaning of the apostle to be as if he had said, what I have preached is a precious truth, in which is all our salvation. Now then if those that believe this truth, keep it in memory, it will save them from innumerable evils they will otherways be exposed to: For in this truth there is a source of obligation and consolation which ought always to be kept in memory.

First. For obligation.

The remembrance that Jesus Christ died for our fins, and rose again for our justification, will always demonstrate to the mind, that we are not our own, but bought with a price, and obliged to glorify him in our spirits and bodies which are his: So that when temptation besets us, to induce us to act, according to our own lusts in opposition to his will concerning us; to act according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children children of disobedience. The remembrance of this truth, is like taking the fhield of faith, which quenches the fiery darts of the devil. Under this head of obligation may be faid, (1st,) We are hereby put in mind of the apostle's exhortation, be ye reconciled to God; which he inforceth from the certainty of this truth: For he hath made him to be fin for us, who knew no fin, that we 'might be made the rightcoufness of God in him. Seeing God was in Christ reconciling the world to himfelf, where is enmity? It must be in us; therefore be ye reconciled unto Gon; to his way of reconciling us to himfelf, to which we are by nature enemies, our pride of heart would not be thus beholden; but it is the way infinitely wife, in which mercy and truth meet together, righteousness and peace embrace each other, in which our falvation is fecured, our haughtiness humbled and the LORD alone is exalted. Be ye reconciled to God, to all his difficult towards us, which all come from him who is love, with a defign of love to us: Be ye reconciled to be at his dispose through life, and refigned to him in death; to look on ourselves, our children, our estates, our time and talents, as all belonging to him, to be improved to his glory, while he intrusts us with them; to be resigned when he calls for them, with thankfulness that we have so long enjoyed them. Bleffed JESUS, thou haft taught us to pray, Thy will be done! (2dly.) The remembrance of this truth obliges us to be reconciled one to another, and live in love and peace, one with another. For a person to have all his hopes solely founded on the free forgiveness of ten thousand talents, and have his brother by the throat for a few pence, how inconfittent and ungreatful must it appear! To sec an injury, perhaps only a supposed one, not real, or an accidental one, not defigned; or if it be real and defigned, to see it hoarded up in the mind; to nurse up alienation, anger, revenge, &c. how contrary is it to the spirit of the gospel! To the example of Jesus Christ, who prayed for his enemies, and hath directed his disciples, But love ye your enemies; as also to the direction of the apostle, Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place to wrath; for it is written, vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore, if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. Be not overcome of

Secondly. This truth is always to be kept in remembrance as a fource of confolation: He is the living fpring of everlafting confolation. It is God that justifieth, who is he that condemneth? It is CHRIST that died, year ather that is rifen again from the dead, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us. Who shall separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus? Jesus CHRIST is justified in the spirit, declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead. Is the head risen? Is the head justified? Who shall separate the members from a participation therein? Shall the tribulation, or distress, or famine, or nakedness, or perfecution or peril, or fword they may be exposed to? Nay, in all these things they are more than conquerors through him that loved them. Let this truth be forgotten in tribulation and distress, they lay hard on, look dark and gloomy; which we are faved from by keeping the truth in memory.

To illustrate my meaning by a similitude: If I have a family full of wants, and several creditors that ought to be paid, at the same time urging upon me; if I have a sum of money that is sufficient for all need, but have laid it away and forgot it, these wants and creditors sink my spirits and perplex my mind: If I

remember this fum, my mind is relieved, I am faved from this perplexity, I have enough to answer all exigencies and demands, and ward off the danger my créditors were ready to threaten me with.

The importance of keeping this in memory is further manifested in the care the apostle Peter sliews for the disciples to this end, 2 ep. ch. i. v. 12, 13, 15, Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things; yea, I think it meet as long as I am in this tabernacle, to flir you up, by putting you in remembrance. Moreover, I will endeavour that you may be able, after my decease, to have these things always in remembrance; for they are certain truths. We have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his Majesty. And as the apostles are thus careful to keep this in the memory of the disciples, look which way we will, every thing seems designed to bring Jesus to remembrance. If we fit at home at our own table, the bread, the meat, the wine brings to view the true bread, the meat that endures to eternal life; the wine of consolation. If we walk abroad, the apple-tree invites us to delight and fit down under his shadow and taste his fruits; the vine invites us to contemplate our union with, and nourishment from, and fruitfulness in the true vine. the wind pierce us, and the tempest rife, he is a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempelt. If we reflect on poverty or riches, where shall we fee them, but in him who was rich, and for our fakes became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich? If upon life or death we do not think purpofe, until it carry our minds to him that liveth and was dead, and is alive forever; who is our life, the life of our life, and our hope in death. fcarce turn our minds any where, but fomething is calculated to bring him to remembrance.

The Lord's supper, or the breaking of bread, is peculiarly fo, for as the passover Lamb, was an eminent type of Christ sufferings in his individual capacity, and had its accomplishment in Christ our paffover facrificed for us; fo the bread and wine manifests his body and blood in a collective view. The bread is not a fingle grain, nor the cup the juice of a fingle grape, but the many made one. So the body of CHRIST is not viewed as a fingle individual, but the many, made one: When he, the head was lifted up and drew all men unto him, and dying for all, all died; the apostles thus judge, if one died for all, then were all dead. As all distinctions of grains are fwallowed up in one bread, and all diffinctions of grapes, in one cup, fo faith viewing all in him, fees both Few and Gentile reconciled in one body by the crofs, and the enmity flain thereby, fo that there is neither Greek nor Jew, barbarian, Cythian, bond or free, but Christ, is all in all. When we view them individually, we see both Few and Greek, &c. but when viewed in the head of every man, all distinction is lost, and we contemplate divine love to the whole human race, with gratitude and joy; and so our obligations to love him, who first loved us, and to love one another as he hath given commandment.

I would close with an address to the believers of the foregoing news, the news of falvation by Jesus Christ in two branches:—Inquiring, is it not the indifpenfible duty of every one of them.

Ist. To confider what was the effect of the belief of the gospel in the days of the apostles, whom Jesus Curist connected with himself, saying, he that heareth you, heareth me; and he that despiseth you, despiseth me; and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me? Of whom Jesus Christ was seen for forty days after his resurrection, speaking to them of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God:

And

And after he had thus instructed them, he fent them forth to preach the Gospel to every creature, and to teach the believers of their testimony to observe all things whatfoever he had commanded them; adding, that he was with them to the end of the world. Now the practice of the apostles thus taught of him, among the believers of their testimony, was to gather them into diffinct particular churches, that in connexion one with another, they might enjoy the fellowship of the gospel, and watch over one another, and together observe all things whatsoever was commanded them. Is not this evident from the instances of the places ullet where the apostles preached, recorded in the $A \tilde{a} s$, where, after their preaching, churches were gathered, elders ordained over them, and epiffles wrote to them, as standing together in that connexion.

We find Paul in the xvith of Atls, at Philippi;* whereupon we have an epistle wrote to the faints at

In Alts xviith, at The stationica; † consequent upon it, we have two epistles to the church there.

In Alls xviiith at Corinth, † where he continued a year and fix months among them: Consequent upon it we have two epistles to the church at Corinth.

In Acts xixth, at Ephefus, \(\) where he spake three months

^{*} According to the notes in the margin of our Bibles, the Apostle Paul was at Philippi in 53, and wrote the epistle to that church in 64. † At The falonica in 53, and sent both the epistles to the church there in 54.

† At Corinth in 54, and wrote his first epistle to the Corinthians in 59; his second in 60.

of He was prefent at Ephefus in 56, and in 60 we find a church there with elders, and the epiffle was fent to the church in 64.—This shews it was the care of the Apostles to gather the believers into churches, and maintain a constant care of them in that connexion, both while present with them and when absent from them, not only when they were first gathered, but on all occasions ever after, as Paul expresses it, That which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches. Jesus Christ was not only present with them therein in those days, but lot he is with them alway, even unto the end of the world; therefore to despite them now, is as before, to despite Issus Christ and him that sent him.

months; and upon the desputations of the unbelievers; he separated the Disciples, disputing daily in the school of Tyraunus: And this continued for the space of two years.

In AAs xxth we find a church at Ephefus with Elders; and we have an epistle wrote to that church: Thus a considerable part of the New-Testament is expressly directed to the disciples as thus connected together.

The Revelation is addressed to the seven churches in Asia; and each epistle is closed with—He that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches. And in chap. xxii. 16. I Jesus have sent mine Angel to testify these things in the churches.

These things being so, let the love of God our Saviour, manifested in his will that all men should be saved and come to the knowledge of the truth, constrain the believers of it to consider what they are hereby called to, and to take heed less they be led aside from the sootsteps of the first slocks, by ignorance of, inattention unto, or *lukewarmness about what is plainly pointed out in the word: But that they search the scriptures till they are satisfied of the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning them, and attend thereunto.

IIdly.

^{*} It is faid to the church of Landicea, Because thou art lukewarm; and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth. Lukewarmness in its own nature tends to such a distinion as consequently end in the loss of the appearance of the profession of the name of Jesis, in the places where it prevails, the Apostle to the Hebrews, to guard them against it, says, Take heed brethren, less there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God, but exhort one another daily, less any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin, for we are made partakers of CHRIST, if we hold fast the beginning of our confidence stedsaft to the end. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works. Not forsking the assembling of ourselves together, as is the manner of some, but exhorting one another; affembling to exhort one another is connected with holding staft the profession of our faith, and with watching against an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God, in opposition to lukewarmness.

IIdly. It becomes the believers of the gospel, to consider wherein this salvation consists, as it respects our conduct one to another.

His name is Jesus, he shall save his people from their sins: Sin is a transgression of the law of love bound on the disciples of Jesus Christ: The second commandment is, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself: Love worketh no ill to his neighbour; therefore love is the sulfilling of the law.

The works of the flesh are hatred, variance, wrath, strife: The fruit of the spirit is love. Now the salvation of the Gospel consists not only in a deliverance from the curse of the law, but also in a deliverance from fin, as it is a transgression of the law: From the works of the slesh, producing the fruits of the spirit; therefore, every thing contrary to the law of love in our conversation, deportment and dealing one with another is unbecoming the believers of the gospel salvation, who ought ever to consider themselves as under the highest obligation to love their neighbour as themselves, and ever be on their guard against every thing contrary thereto.

Can we believe that declaration, I, even I am he that blotteth out thy transgressions, for my own Name's fake, and will not remember thy sins, and indulge any thing contrary to the spirit of forgiveness taught by the precepts and example of Jesus Christ and his apostles?

Can we fee our brother in need, and shut up our bowels of compassion from him, while we realize the grace of our Lord Jefus Christ, who, though he was rich for our sakes, became poor that we through his poverty might be rich; who remembered us in our low-estate, for his mercy forever?

Doth not the truth of the Gospel News constrain us with all our hearts to bless God, even the Father: How unbecoming is it then, with the same mouth, upon every provocation, to curse men, who are made after the similitude of God? Certainly these things ought not so to be.

How

How inconfistent for those who profess it their highest happiness to be forever freed from the inbeing of sin, and that the SAVIOUR is most inexpressibly indeared to them, in the view of his completing this work, to include in the practice of that, which we cannot be happy but in a freedom from? Which includence tends to the unhappiness of all to whom we are known, and with whom we are connected, as far as its influence reacheth.

The certain ground of hope in the word, that Jesus Christ, who hath his fan in his hand will thoroughly purge his floor, confume the chaff, burn up the tares, destroy the works of the devil, take away the dross from the filver, that there shall come forth a vessel for the siner, and that he is not only faithful and just to forgive us our sins, but to cleanse us from all unrighteousness, ought to excite us to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of sless and spirit, to cleanse our way, by taking heed thereto according to the word.

And by taking heed to the word, we shall find directions for our conduct, in every relation and circumstance of life, brought up to one fingle point by our divine teacher: Therefore all things whatfoever ve would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets. exhortation, like all others, is grounded on the manifestation of divine grace, as is evident by being ushered in by the word therefore: If we inquire wherefore? the connection will shew: Therefore, because of the gracious readiness of your heavenly Father to give good things to them that ask him: And as the law and the prophets are all here drawn together by the master of assemblies, the one shepherd, so they are taken apart and parcelled out to us, in exhortations fuited to every relation and circumstance of life, by his apostles, as is expressed by one of them. With whose words I close: -- As ye know how we exhorted, and comforted, and charged every one of you, as a father doth his children, that ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you to his kingdom and glory.

The GOSPEL of PEACE, &c.

SECTION II.

The Gospel of Peace published among all nations:
Or, an Inquiry concerning Repentance and Remission of Sins. From the Scriptures of the Old and New-Testament: Addressed, First,
To the Author of a Pamphlet, entitled, "Divine Glory in the Condemnation of the Ungodly."
Secondly, To all for whom Christ died.

Hearken unto me ye stout-hearted that are far from Righteousness. I bring near my righteousness: It shall not be far off, and my salvation shall not tarry: And I will place Salvation in Zion, for Israel my Glory.

ISAIAH XIVI. 12, 13.

Behold the man whose name is the Branch. He shall bear the Glory.

ZECHARIAH VI. 12, 13.

lory. ZECHARIAH vi. 12, 13. But now commandeth all men every where to repent. ACTS xvii. 30.

REQUENTLY observing the doctrine of repentance treated of in such a manner as is difficult to understand, in consistency with the gospel of divine grace; it has often exercised my mind to enquire from the scriptures, after a satisfactory view of it; and finding that after our Lord's resurrection, when that event took place which explained the scriptures, he opened the understanding of the disciples that they might understand them, and said unto them,—

Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer and to rise again the third day; as in Luke xxiv.

40. 46. It is added in Verse 47, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations beginning at Jerusalem.

In inquiring into the nature or meaning of repentance, it may affift me to view every part of this passage. As,

What may I understand by repentance: What by remission of sins: What by its being preached in his name: How it concerns all nations; and, Why it was to begin at Jerusalem.

I. What may be understood by repentance.

Repentance is here brought in as that which the death and refurrection of Christ prepared a way for the proclamation of:—He faid, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance, &c. here is a connexion between the sufferings and resurrection of Christ, and the proclamation of repentance as an act of grace founded thereupon, and issued for the encouragement of the rebel to return; who otherways could look for nothing but destruction. In this view it is the gracious call of the offended Sovereign to his revolted creatures, to return to him as their rightful owner and Lord.—Isaiah xxxi. 6. Turn ye unto him, from whom the children of Israel have deeply revolted.

II. What may be understood by remission of sins. Sins or trespasses are called debts, Matt. vi. 12, 15. When a person is in debt, it is plain that law and justice demand remittance until sull payment is made; the payment of the debt is its remission, and this remission satisfies the demands of law and justice, which were against the debtor: Here then remission is sull satisfaction to that law, of which sin is a transgression, and to that justice which demands penalty of the transgression; tor unless law and justice be completely satisfied, there is no remission.

III. What by its being preached in his name.

Why, furely there is no other name under Heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved, either from the delusion, ignorance and darkness, whereby we have forsaken the right way, or whereby we may be returned to our rightful owner, or whereby law and justice are satisfied. So then he himself is eminently the way in all these respects. Gallations iv. 4. 5. God fent forth his Son made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law: The law had a demand of perfect obedience upon them that were under it, which to them was impossible in their own persons; he as their head, and in their itead, is brought in; in the volume of the book faying, Lo! I come to do thy will: So that whatever the law required, was perfectly obeyed by him who did always the thing that pleafed the father, who delighted to do his will, and could not be convinced of fin, but could fay, I was upright before him, I have glorified thee on earth, and finished the work thou gavest me to do; so that he perfectly obeyed the law.

They that were under the law were under the curse, he as the redeemer of them that were under the law, was made a curse for us, so satisfied the penalty of the law, which is manifest in his resurrection from the dead; for when law and justice took hold of him as head of the human nature, (as if he were the only transgressor) all being considered in him; he became our surety, and the Lord laid the iniquities of us all upon him. Now unless law and justice have full satisfaction, the surety is not discharged; but law and justice being sully satisfied, he having made peace by the blood of his cross; it was not possible he should be holden of death.—Death hath no more dominion over him.—Therefore the surety is legally discharged.

Thus his refurrection from the dead evidences his accomplishment of what he was made under the law, for i. e. To redeem them that were under the law; fo then the refurrection of Jesus Christ proves him our Redeemer.—Whose Redeemer?—Them that were under the law. Then we belong to him by right of redemption, and ought to return to him as our rightful owner, repenting of our estrangement and alienation from him: But is there any encouragement hereunto: May we be received into favour? Yes!—Repentance and remission of fins. Repentance with remiffion of fins is preached in his name, and because there is full remission, there is the fullest encouragement to repentance. There is no other name that repentance will do to be preached in; call a man to repentance in the name of law and justice: Repent for the curses of the law, the wrath of God, the demands of justice are against you, and will surely and suddenly overtake you, except you repent; and it may drive him to endeavour to hide himself as Adam among the trees of the garden, and when he finds he cannot, it may drive him to defpair; for repentance cannot fatisfy law or justice, or appeafe the divine anger: Neither is it in them to produce repentance, they may flir up enmity, and drive to despair, while the gospel is out of fight.-It is the prerogative of our Redeemer that has fully remitted our fins .--- He is exalted to give repentance and remission of sins.

Among all nations this is to be preached, Jews and Gentiles. For God hath shewed me (faith Peter) that I should call no man common or unclean; what God hath santtified, that call thou not common. There is neither Jew nor Greek, Barbarian, Cythian, bond or free, male or semale that is excluded. Repentance and remission of sins is to be preached among all nations: If there were not full remission, how could it be preached, or how could they be called to repentance? But there is. He that is truth has ordered it to be preached as a truth among all nations; but as he was rejected at Jerusalem, are not they excluded? No, Verily: It is to be preached among all nations, BEGINNING AT JERUSALEM. What, though they like tike fishes, do all they can to escape the gospel net, will not he that made his Apostles sishers of men, so direct that net, as finally to take them in, with the sulness of the Gentiles, so that all Israel may be saved, as is written: It is written, therefore it shall be accomplished: Compare Rom. xi. 25, to 32, with the parallel passages in the prophet.

But we may enquire if this view of repentance be agreeable to the scriptures of the Old and New-Tes-

We find when Solomon, in 1st of Kings, viii. 47. praying for the children of Ifrael carried captive for their sins, says, if they shall bethink themselves, and repent, and make supplication, and return with all their heart, &c. then hear their prayer, &c. Verse 51 shews the ground of this prayer, for they are thy people, and thine inheritance—The idea of their being his people, and his inheritance, appears necessing his people, and his inheritance. fary to shew the aggravations of their folly in fin-ning against him, and the necessity of repenting and returning to their rightful owner.—They are thine inheritance which thou hast redeemed, Psalm lxxiv. 2. And when they are called to repentance in the prophet Joel, chap. ii. 13. it is turn to the LORD YOUR God. In Jeremiah xxvi 13. (though a time of the greatest degeneracy) they are thus called upon, now amend your ways, and your doings, and obey the voice of the LORD YOUR GOD: And in Isaiah lv. 7. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous his own imaginations, and return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy, and to OUR GOD he will abundantly pardon: And in Hosea xiv. 1. O Israel return unto the LORD THY GOD. When GOD, by the prophet Jeremiah in his 3d chap. calls Ifrael and Judah to repentance verse 1, 7, 12. Return again to me faith the LORD. Turn thou unto me. Return thou backsliding Israel faith the LORD. In verses 14 and 22, their obligation thereto, and the ground of their ens couragement is mentioned: - Verse 14, Return for I am married unto You :- Verse 22. Return ye backfliding children, I will heal your backflidings, not, and I will, as a condition (the and is there supplied by the translators) but I will heal your backflidings.-On this encouragement, which is the only all-sufficient one, they are brought in faying, Behold we come unto thee, for thou art the LORD OUR GOD. And in Isaiah xliv, 22, it is fully expressed in a similar manner to the paffage in Luke xxiv. now befere us.

Luke xxiv. 47. And that Isaiah, xliv. 22. I have repentance and remif-fion of fins should be blotted out as a thick cloud thy transgressions, and as preached in his name. a cloud thy fins: Return for I have redeemed thee.

But if it be faid these passages of the Old-Testament respect ancient Israel, as God's peculiar people, not finners of the Gentiles,—in answer it may be faid, it has been shewn it was to be preached as a truth among all nations; and the Apostle's question is ready, Is he a God of the Jews only? Is he not of the Gentiles also? Yes, of the Gentiles also:-Are they bleffed in Abraham fo are all the nations of the earth—in thy feed shall all the nations of the earth be bleffed :-- Are they his inheritance,—his possession; fo are the uttermost parts of the earth. It was the disposition that would confine the divine favour to the Jews, and to the most esteemed among them, that the preaching of John and of Jefus, under the law dispensation, called them to repentance from, or called them to repent of Matt. iii. 2 .- Repent for the kingdom of Heaven is at hand: He preached thus in the wilderness of Judea, among those that suppofed the Mcsiah would raise their nation to great worldly glory, and fet them above other nations and that the most esteemed among them should be most promoted moted therein: He calls them to repent of their worldly notions of Christ's kingdom: It was a kingdom of Heaven that was at hand, where every one was admitted and promoted according to the good pleasure of the King in virtue of his own righteousness, not according to their own supposed personal characters: So those that were exalted in their own and others apprehensions as mountains and hills, were brought low; and those depressed with a sense of their own vileness and unworthiness, and who were justly esteemed so by others low as vallies, without any encouragement in themselves, are exalted, agreeable to Isaiah's prophesy, chap. xl. 4. Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low, the crooked shall be made strait, and the rough places plain; and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall fee together, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken.

Here we have a view of a perfect plain, where one should not obstruct or overtop another, in viewing the object to be revealed—The glory of the Lord: And as they all expected benefit in that kingdom from their own characters; some expected to be foremost on account of their own supposed good characters, and others depressed and despairing for want of fuch worthiness, they are called to repent of their error and mistake—it was a kingdom of Heaven hat was at hand, where, none were admitted or excluded on account of their own personal character, but every one admitted on account of the perfect character of the Meffiah.—The glory of the Lord shall be revealed—the glory of divine wisdom, justice, grace, and mercy—the glory of all the divine attributes and perfections, harmonizing in the method of falvation, by Jesus Christ, according to Pfalm lxxxv. 19, 11. Mercy and truth are met together, rightcoufnefs and peace have kiffed: Truth shall foring out of the earth, and righteousness shall look down from Heaven. Thus the glory of the Lord is revealed in him who is the brightness of his glory, the light of the knowledge of the glory of the Lord is in the face of Jesus Christ, in whom dwells the fullness of the God-head: In him, the glory of the Lord is revealed, and in his time and way all slesh shall see together, for the mouth of the Lord hath fpoken.

If what has been faid of John's preaching "for the kingdom of Heaven is at hand," be agreeable to the scriptures, then we are to understand the preaching of Jesus in Matt. iv. 17. "Repent for the kingdom of Heaven is at hand." And Mark i. 15, "The time is fulfilled": The kingdom of Heaven is at hand: Repent ye and believe the gospel, (The glad tidings, the good news of falvation by Jesus Christ,") and the preaching of the twelve that Jesus sent out two by two Mark vi. 12. Who went out and preached that men should repent, in the same view.

When Jesus arose from the dead, evidencing the perfection of his character, obedience and facrifice; evidencing that justice was fully satisfied; then repentance and remission of sins are preached in his name: There can be no encouragement to repentance without remission of sins, if there be not full remission in the perfect work of Christ, all is terror, despair, alienation and enmity. Ifaid there is no hope, no, for I have loved strangers, and after them, will Igo, Jeremiah ii. 25. Let this truth, the doctrine of remisfion of fins, be clear, and there are the highest motives, encouragements and obligations to repentance; there is room for it to be preached in the name of Lesus among all nations, even beginning at Jerusalem: If we need any further, see Att. xvii. 20. Though the times of ignorance God winked at, but now he hath commanded al! men every where to repent. Now fince his refurrection hath he commanded. Confider fider the dignity of the commander, and the authority of his commands, Pfalm xxxiii. 9. He fpake, and it was: He commanded, and it flood. The Apostle pursues the thought from his refurrection to his exaltation, as we read, Ads v. 30, 31. The God of our fathers raifed up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree, him hath Gop exalted with his right hand, a Prince and a Saviour, to give repentance to Ifrael and forgiveness of fins: And in Atts xi. 18. we have a specimen actually taking place: Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life. How is this evidenced? Why, they received or believed the Apostles testimony concerning the way of acceptance with God in every nation. It was according to the word which God fent to the children of Ifrael, preaching peace by Jesus Christ who is Lord of all, his being anointed with the Holy Gnost, going about doing good, his death and refuse ction, and the evidences of it, together with the testimony of the Prophets concerning him, as we see in Alls x. 34 to 44. This preaching being accompanied with the Holy Ghost, gained full credit on the minds of the Gentiles, which when the church heard, theyheld their peace, and glorified Gon, faying, then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life: So that as foon as they believed the report of the Gospel concerning the life, death and resurrection of JESUS CHRIST, by the first of which the precepts of the law are perfectly obeyed; by the next, the penalty of it is fuffered, or the debt to it remitted; and by the third, viz. his refurrection, we have the full evidence thereof. As foon as this is believed, it is faid, then hath God also granted repentance unto life, the immediate inseparable effect of believing the remisfion of fins in his name.

he fays, concerning them in his first Epistle, chap. i. 9. What manner of entrance we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols, to ferve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from Heaven, whom he had raifed from the dead. To turn to God from idols is repentance. This was in consequence of the entrance of the apostles among them, or of the Thessalonians believing their report. What was their report among them? See Acts xvii. 2, 3. Reasoning with them out of the scriptures, opening and alleging that Christ must needs have suffered and risen again from the dead, and that Jefus whom I preach unto you, is Christ, verse 4. Some of them believed. Those believers composed the church of the Thessalonians, of whom it is shewn, how they turned to God from idols.

So in the 20th of Acts, 21, the apostle speaks of keeping back nothing that was profitable, but testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks repentance towards God, and (or * even) faith towards our LORD JESUS CHRIST. His preaching the faith as has been above shewn, was virtually preaching repentance, as it immediately called and led thereto. Thus the Old and New-Testament jointly evidences the same truth, that repentance and remission of sins is preached in the name of Jesus among all nations, beginning at Jeru-

How can repentance be preached otherwise. If there be not remission in the perfect work of Christ, he is not our Redeemer, and we cannot be called upon, when he fays, return for I have redeemed thee; but be not deceived, evil communications corrupt good manners. He is risen from the dead, he is our Redeemer, we belong to him, and bleffed be his name we are called to return, for he hath redeemed us. Who? Them that were under the law, all nations,

^{*} I am informed the same Greek word which is translated and is also translated even, as in the judgment of the translators was most suitable to the passage.

even beginning at Jerusalem. What were we redeemed for? That repentance might be preached to us in his name, that we might return to him, that we might receive the adoption of sons. Amazing grace indeed?

Objection.—But there are two passages in the New-Testament that seem at first view to mention repentance as a condition. The first is Acts ii. 38. Peter faid unto them, repent and be baptized every one of you, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. But if it be fafe to understand this for, &c. as the reason or ground of the call to repentance, Repent, because of the remission of fins, the difficulty will disappear, and the passage appear fully confiftent with the other passages that have been brought to view; and this view I think may be fairly gathered from what the apostle had before been preaching of the death and refurrection of CHRIST, in which there is remission, and the evidence of it. But if it be still urged as a condition, it can be no otherways, than as it cannot otherwife take place in our minds, for though there is remission in the one facrifice, and so no more offering for fin as the apostle expressed it, Hebrews x. 18, yet it cannot take place in the minds of any while they remain in unbelief and impenitence: Yet their unbelief cannot make the truth of God of none effect. While persons remain in unbelief they must remain in impenitence; for how can any repent of being in a wrong way until they know Jesus who is the way; of their being in error, until they know Jesus, who is the truth; and of their being in a state of death, and all their works, dead works, until they know Jesus, who is the life. how can any repent of their alienation and enmity until they know God in Christ, the just God and the Saviour—their rightful owner—their Lord deemer.

It may be what is above faid, may help to illustrate the other passage in Acts iii. 19. Repent ye therefore and be converted, that your fins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come, from the prefence of the LORD.

Repent ye therefore. Therefore refers to what went before; what the aposse had been preaching concerning the holy one, and the just, the prince of life, his death and refurrection, in which, as before, there was remission, and the evidence of it; in which there was enough to furnish even those that were charged with killing the prince of life with hope, with the apprehension of the mercy of God in Christ," as even the Assembly's Catechism expresses it, so as to give them ground of encouragement to repentance.

Repent ye therefore and be converted; be turned from your error, alienation and enmity, to allegiance to the prince of life, that your fins may be blotted out: For as infidelity and impenitence are infeparable; fo is faith, repentance and allegiance: While the former continues, guilt, diffress, fear, horror and perplexity, remain on the mind.

When the knowledge of Christ, or faith, or the belief of the truth concerning Jesus Christ * take place

^{*} It is the work of the spirit, for no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost; and the Prophet Zechariah, chap. xii. 10. expresses it thus, I will pour upon the bouse of David, and on the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and supplications; and they ball look on me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and be in bitterness as one is in bitterness for his sight born. But the spirit of God makes use of the truth of the gospel as a means hereunto; is not this intimated in Isaiah xxx. 21. Thin cars shall hear a word behind thee, * This is the way—walk ye in it. Is not he the messenger, the interpreter, one of a thousand spoken of, Job xxxiii. 23. To shew unto man his uprightness; the uprightness of Jesus Christ, through which, he is gracious to him, and saith, deliver him, for I have found a ransom; his sless sold be fresper than childhood, he shall return to the days of his verib, he shall pray unto God, and he shall be swourable to him, and he shall see his face with joy. Compare this with the description of the same person before he knew Jesus Christ as in the 19, 20, 21 and 22 verses.

^{*} For we are always looking the wrong way for remission of fins thatil taught of God.

place in the mind, repentance and conversion take place there also; hereupon guilt, fear and terror are removed; that which was blotted out or remitted before, in the perfect work of Christ, is also blotted out of the mind and conscience; agreeable to Remans viii. 33, 34. It is God that justifieth; Who is he that condemneth? It is CHRIST that died, yea, rather, that is rifen again: And instead of looking for the appearing of Jesus Christ with terror and amazement, it is waited for with hope, joy and confolation, in proportion, to the strength of faith, repentance and allegiance, agreeable to the forementioned, 1st of Thessalonians i. 9. 10. They themselves shew of as what manner of entering in we had unto you: How ye turned unto God from idols, to ferve the living and true God, and to wait for his fon from Heaven, whom he raifed from the dead, Jefus who delivereth us from the wrath to come.

Thus have I pursued the inquiry concerning gospel repentance: And purpose to close with an address,

I. To the author of a pamphlet, entitled, "The glory of God in the final condemnation of the ungodly." And,

II. To all for whom CHRIST died.

I. To the Author of the Pamphlet.

DEAR SIR.

AS your pamphlet was probably the occasion of the foregoing reflections, I have taken the freedom to address you on the subject. When I read your work, if I recollect the idea the doctrine there advanced gave me, it was this, That Christ died for all, to bring them into a salvable state, yet all would not be saved, though they might, if they repented, consequently God's glory would finally illustriously appear in the everlasting condemnation of the sinally impenitent.

And as the ear trieth words, as the mouth tafteth meats, I found it did not found like the report of the gospel, and on enquiring into the doctrine of repentance, I have collected the thoughts which are prefented to you, I hope in love and faithfulness. The idea I received from the scriptures of the Old Testament is, that he should finish the transgression—make an end of fin-make reconciliation for iniquity-and bring in everlasting righteousness. The New Testament witnesses that he did.—The testator appeals to the father—I have glorified thee on earth: I have finished the work thou gavest me to do, and cries out on the cross, It is finished, and seals it with his blood, and witnesses it in his refurrection, when he shews himself alive to his chosen witnesses, who testified to the fame truth.—One paffage may fuffice: In Hebrews x, 11th, the apostle speaking of the priesthood under the law, fays, and every priest standeth daily minister-ing, and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never take away fin, but this man after he had offered one facrifice for fins, forever fat down on the right hand of God. They stood as those that had not done-could not accomplish: But the High Priest Jesus after he had offered one sacrifice fat down as having finished his work, finished transgression—made an end of sin—made reconciliation for iniquity—and brought in everlasting righteousness. Verse 18th says, Where remission of those is, there is no more facrifice for fin.

Thus the scripture leads to full remission, when he had by himself purged our fins, to a finished work.

But your dostrine appears to me to lead to an unfinished work, dependent on the exercises, the exercitions, in short, the will of the creature, and because they will not come, that they might have life, he must glorify himself in the destruction of multitudes for whom he died.

Let me ask you, Sir, How? Is his mercy glorified? Is his justice satisfied? Is his power made manifest?

Is he mighty to fave? He will have all men to be faved, not he would, but he will. Who hath refisted his will? Is it the will of the creature?* Cannot he make them willing in the day of his power? His people shall be; and are not all his people for whom he died? But I forbear; wishing to fay no more than is fufficient to discharge my conscience in love and faithfulness to you. But I cannot pass over your Elfay without taking notice of the title, to compare it with the scriptures.

Scripture text, Romans Your Title.

iv. 5. He that justifieth the Divine Glory brought to ungodly. Rom. v. 6, Christ view, in the condemnation died for the ungodly. On enquiry, How can this be in confisence with those scriptures? I answer, it can be no otherways in a confistence with them, than in the fulfilment of Ifaiah's prophecy, chap, liii. 4, 5, 6. Surely he hoth borne our griefs, and carried our forrows: Yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities: The chaftifement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. So dying for the ungodly, he justifies the ungodly, and the divine glory is brought to view illustriously to eternity herein. For mercy is glorified;

^{*} Two Clergymen, converfing together of the doctrine of the final Univerfal Salvation of all men, very much wondered at each other;—one held that all for whom Christ died should certainly be saved, but that he did not die for all;—The other that he died for all, but all would not be saved, because they would not come to him. Said the latter to the former, I'm very much assonished at you, that you do not embrace that doctrine—For if I believed as you, I should, tor nothing is more clear from scripture, than that Christ died for all: The former answered, I as much wonder at you, that you do not embrace it, I am sure I should, if I believed as you, for it he died for all there is no power on earth or hell can hinder their salvation;—He cannot be disappointed. cannot be disappointed.

when he manifests himself mighty to save.

But view the title page as it appears intended, what confolation is there for a poor, destitute, ungodly creature? Suppose him on a death bed, agonizing with anguish of foul, nothing short of persuasion that there was an all-fufficient remedy for his deplorable condition, could afford him the least comfort or relief. Were you constrained in this fad hour to administer them from those texts, in the belief of your title, would he not fay, I am mocked? But perhaps you might not offer them on such an occasion. Why? Are they not scripture truths? Did not CHRIST die for the ungodly, and in proof, his dying for our fins was accepted; he rose again for our justification, and is not the knowledge of this truth all-sufficient to quiet the most guilty conscience, and give hope towards Gon? Would it be fafe to tell him the law of God stands in full force against him, when Jesus came to redeem them that were under the law? Would it not amount to denying that Jesus is come in the flesh? Would it be safe to tell such a man to exert himself in any way, however described, as if this was the last opportunity, and his all depended on it? It would indeed be to mock him! when his all depends on what JESUS CHRIST finished, and the relief of his mind on the knowledge of it.

Suffer me a little further, if in looking over this dreadful title, I express my surprise that to it should be added in the title page, Search the scriptures; when you attempt to illustrate it by reasoning, without producing one text to shew that the Ever-blessed speaks of condemnation as his glory. When the scriptures speak of the divine glory as manifest in his grace, mercy and forgiveness—when Moses said in Exodus xxxiii. 18. I befeech thee shew me thy glory, the answer is, I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy: Here goodness, grace and mercy is his glory. In Proverbs xix. 11, we read, the discretion of a mon deferreth his anger, and his glory to pass over a transgression. If we understand the proverb, and its interpretation, it doubtless refers to the man Christ Jesus, in whom we have the light of the knowledge of the glory of God.

In Pfalm cii. 16, it is faid, When the LORD shall build up Zion, he shall appear in HIS GLORY.—How is this made manifest?—In regarding the prayer of the destitute; in hearing the groaning of the prisoner, and saving the sons of death—To declare his name in Zion, and his praise in Jerusalem—That is his name, Forgiving iniquity, transgression and sins, through the surety whom he would by no means clear, for the Lord laid on him the iniquities of us all, and spared not his own son, but delivered him up for us all, in whom we have redemption through his blood, the sorgiveness of sin, according to the riches of his grace: Riches of his grace; is not this his glory? Yes, verily; the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindness towards us through Christ Jesus.

The angel of the Lord came upon the shepherds, in Luke ii. 9. And the Glory of the Lord shone round about them: How is this made manifest? Behold, says the angel, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people, for unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord: Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will towards men.

I have briefly presented these sew passages, wishing you to turn to the scriptures, to view the divine glory, and if these texts, with what has been brought to view (in page 73) of the glory of the Lord being revealed, was rightly understood by those that search the scriptures, I doubt not it would lead into the understanding of many passages in the Old Testament, where the glory of the Lord appeared in the cloud, filled the tabernacle, filled the house, and the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord, spoken of by Ezekiel, and many other passages, that speak of the Divine Glory, as they centre in Jesus the antitype, the brightness of glory; in whom the riches of his glory is made manifest, who came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them; not to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved. Indeed, Sir, if you think a few minutes, you cannot despise an invitation to this contemplation, for it is the final happiness of those given to Jesus Christ, to be with him, to behold his glory.

I would just take notice of what you say in page 50. "I conceive therefore that every honest man that disbelieves the sentiment, will be free to declare it, and this plainly. I take liberty to add, that such a declaration will come with peculiar propriety and weight from the pulpit Watchman, what of the night, it is the

"With particular weight from the pulpit." I conceive the weight of any doctrine confists in the evidence of its truth and divinity, not in the place where, or from whence it is delivered. Suppose a pulpit ornamented to fuch an extravagant degree, that the first fight of it would strike, ii of Chronicles xxxiii. 7. immediately into the mind: Or suppose the preacher so diftinguished in habit, as immediately to bring to view the warning of JESUS CHRIST to his disciples, in Mark xii. 38, and Luke xx. 46-would it not tend to a greater caution of mind about the doctrines they deliver, so that all hope of weight and importance must come from the clear evidence of the truth, that it is indeed the word of God which worketh effectually in them that believe, which is the word of the spirit, yea, quick and powerful-sharper han any two-edged fword. " Watchman.

" Watchman, what of the night, it is the language of the Almighty to gospel ministers." However that may be, I am not able to say, but if it be so, gospel ministers are messengers of peace—good news—glad tidings: The founder of the gospel was so. Isaiah lxi. 1, Luke iv. 18, he was anointed to preach the gospel to the poor; and how beautiful upon the mountains, are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings; that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good; that publisheth falvation; that faith to Zion, thy God respecth—not thy perverse will, nor thy adversary. The first preachers preached peace by JESUS CHRIST; he is Lord of all; and gospel minifters have now nothing elfe to bring to view but the preaching of Jesus and his apostles-If that was to publish peace and glad tidings of salvation, your doctrine of eternal condemnation is its opposite, and cannot possibly bring peace or glad tidings of falvation to any of the subjects of it: But seeing, God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself, not imputing. their trespasses unto them, may we be reconciled unto God.

II. To all for whom Christ died.

And bleffed be God, he tasted death for every man. For if there be any for whom he did not die, it would be mocking them to preach the gospel to them, to tell them that the law is answered, that justice is satisfied, and mercy flows freely in a sull consistency therewith, that the only living and true God is the just God, and the Saviour, and there is none else, to tell them of remission of sins, or call them to repentance, for certainly there could be no hope, if their sins were not remitted they never can be, for Christ dieth no more, there is no more facrifice for sin; but seeing the righteousness of God, which is by faith, is unto all, as well as upon all that believe all may be called to repentance.

First. Such as appear in a state of resolved infidelity and impenitence, and chose to live in profaneness and immorality, to such repentance and remisfion of fins, in the name of Jasus is preached: What though they deride the messengers, and the message, they shall be brought hereto, for First, Jesus Christ came to feek and fave that which was loft; to call finners to repentance. The feveral passages where this is mentioned. viz. Matt, ix. 13. Mark ii. 7. and Luke v. 32, have all referrence to publicans and finners; the phrase for abandoned characters among the Jews at that day: And were not they, and are not the fame characters now, though differently defcribed, wrong; are they not alienated from their rightful owner, are they not loft; if so, Christ came to save them; are they not finners—if so, he came to call them to repentance.

Secondly. Jesus fent his disciples to preach it in his name. And as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither again, but watereth the earth, so shall my word be, saith the Lord, by the prophet Isaiah, chap lv. 10, 11. That goeth out of my mouth, it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and prosper in the thing whereto I fent it.

Thirdly. Now he hath commanded all men every where to repent; and his commands shall be obeyed, for Pfalm exlviii. he commanded, and angels, fun, moon, and stars, the Heavens, and the waters above them were created. 2 of Corinth. iv. 6.—He commanded the light to shine out of darkness. Pfalm evii. 25. He commandeth and raiseth the stormy wind. Luke viii. 25. He commandeth even the winds and the waters, and they obey him.

Fourthly. He is exalted a prince and a Saviour, to give repentance to Ifrael, and remission of sins. Prophesied of Isaiah xxx. 18. Therefore will he be exalted that he may have mercy. But it was to give repentance to Ifrael. It was not then fully manifested that they were to go to the Gentiles: But from the time of Peter's vision, he was taught to call no man common, or unclean; and the Gentiles appeared to be fellowheirs, and of the same body; and that they were to preach among them the unsearchable riches of Christ.

Fifthly. The long fuffering patience of God is extended for this end, 2d of Peter, iii. 9, the Lord is long fuffering toward us, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance, agreeable to Isaiah xxx. 18, and therefore will the Lord wait that he may be gracious. Now put these things together, and shall the stout-heartedness and obstinacy of the unbelieving impenitent and prosane children of men, disappoint him. What will they do? He is wise in heart and mighty in strength: None ever hardened himself against him and prospered; there is no wisdom, nor understanding, nor counsel against the Lord, who would set the briars and thorns against him in battle; he would go through them, and burn them together.

Perhaps they would fain flee out of his hand; but where will they flee from his presence? What the Lord faith by the prophet Amos, may be here brought to view, Amos ix. 2. He that fleeth of them shall not flee away, and he that escapeth of them shall not be delivered; though they dig into hell, thence shall mine hand take them; though they climb up into Heaven, thence will I bring them down; and though they hide themselves in the top of Carmel, I will search and take them out thence; and though they be hid from my sight, in the bottom of the sea, thence will I command the scripent, and he shall bite them. From hence it appears weak, fruitless and contemptible to set the obstinacy of man against the end of the coming, the call, the command, the design of the exaltation, and the long suffering fuffering patience of JESUS CHRIST; especially if we consider Isaah xlv. 22, 23, where we have the divine oath that every knee shall bow; it may be added.

Sixthly. It is the defign of the fecond coming of JESUS CHRIST to convince all that are ungodly, of all their ungodly deeds, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly finners have spoken against him, Jude 14, 15. Then every eye shall see him, and they that pierced him and all kindred of the earth shall wail because of him, as we read Rev. i. 7. Compare this with Zech. xii. 10, and they shall look upon me, whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him as one mourneth for his only fon, and be in bitterness for him as one is in bitterness for his first Here is wailing, mourning, and bitterness at the fight of Jesus Christ, in the most expressive language we can imagine. See Jeremiah ix. 10, 18, 19, which perhaps none can form an adequate idea of, but fuch as have been called into the described circumftances; which yet cannot be viewed as the language of despair; for how then can we understand the following words, even fo amen. But if we may understand John as speaking of those who pierced him being brought every knee of them to bow to him, with the wailing of repentance, then the even for amen appears agreeable to the spirit of the gospel. Undoubtedly then every mouth will be stopped, and all the world guilty before God, which when the Apostle mentions, in Rom. iii. 19, he adds, in verse 21, But now the righteoufness of God without the law is manifest, being witnessed by the law, and the prophects, even the righteousness of God, which is by faith of Fefus Christ unto all, and upon all that believe: For there is no difference, respecting the purchase of CHRIST, who died for all; and respecting the divine will, who will have all men to be faved, and come to the the knowledge of the truth, which agrees with Romans xi. 32, he hath concluded them all in unbelief that he might have mercy on all. This doctrine must be shocking to tradition, and no wonder, for O! the depth of the riches both of the wifdom and knowledge of God, how unfearchable his judgments, and his ways past finding out. It appears to agree with the end and defign of Christ's prayer, for his own immediate disciples, and for them that shall believe through their word, as expressed, John xvii. 21, 23. That they all may be one as thou father in me, and I in thee; that they alfo may be one in us, that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. I in them, and thou in me, that the world may know that thou hast sent me. The very circumstance that the disciples were in, (verse 8) and have known furely, that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst fend me. The manifestation of this oneness I conceive to be what called the manifestation of the fons of God, which the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for. Every creature, both believers and unbelievers, are in fome way groaning and traveling together for this, as we see in Rom. viii. 32. For we know that the whole creation (in the Bible margin it is every creature. I am informed it is the same word used in Mark xvi. 15, Go preach the gospel to every creature) the whole creation, or every creature, groaneth and traveleth in pain together. I know not of one of the human race that is not in some way groaning under the bondage of corruption. Verse 23. And not only they, but ourfelves also, which have the first fruits of the spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, the redemption of our body—the whole body, of which Christ is the head.—This agrees with the design of Jesus being made under the law, that we might receive the adoption of fons.

II. Those of opposite character, that thank Gon they are not as other men, but pride themselves in their own religious characters, to the despising those abovementioned. To such repentence and remission of sins are preached in the name of Jesus. Alas, if they look for remission in their own name, or on account of any distinction in them, it will disappoint them; for, says the prophet, all our righteousness is as silthy rags: And Paul, speaking of his, says, what things I counted gain, those I count loss for Christ; but what has been already said on John's preaching,

III. Such as are distressed and perplexed for want of righteousness, wishing for some inherent qualifications, or to perform many external duties, to recommend them to the divine favour, or are ready to wish they were as fuch and fuch, who they apprehend to have high attainments, and great characters for piety; diffressed with the anxious inquiry, wherewithall shall I come before the LORD? Will he be pleased with coftly facrifices—thousands of rams, or ten thoufand rivers of oil, or my first born for my transgresfion;—the fruit of my body for the fin of my foul?— He hath shewed thee, O man, what good is the only all-fufficient one, to recommend thee to the divine favour, in the finished work of Jesus Christ, inwhich is full remission of fins, and a call to repent of seeking it any other where. God is love, and in this was manifested the love of God towards us, because God sent his only beloved fon, that we might live through him. GOD was in CHRIST reconciling the world unto himfelf, not imputing their trespasses unto them. Only view the character of the true God as manifested in Christ. (Elsewhere we cannot see him, for no man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten fon, who was in the bosom of the father, he hath declared him). Agreeable to Zechariah ix. 9. He is just and having salvation. Isaiah xlv. 21, I the LORD, and none beside me, a just God, and a Saviour, and none beside. If justice ice and falvation is united in the character of the only living and true God, and he calls to all the ends of the earth to look to him, and be faved, if it be rightly understood, it is enough to cheer the heart of the most forlorn and dejected in any corner of the earth.

IV. Those that believe that Jesus is the Christ. that he hath fully obeyed the precepts of the law in his life, and fuffered the penalty in his death, to the fatisfaction of justice, and thereby made full remission, as witneffed in his refurrection, so that their minds are at peace and rest in his finished work alone, as their only ground of hope-are hereby called to repentance, as those that are under the highest obligation thereunto, agreeable to Ezek. xvi.63. That thou may/t remember and be ashamed, and confounded, and never open thy mouth any more because of thy shame, when I am pacified towards thee for all that thou hast done, faith the Lord God. Every view of every time, place and company, wherein they have spoken or done secretly or openly, those things that were contrary to the law of God, or whereby they have been going about to establish their own righteousness, in opposition to the righteousness of God, is ever matter of shame and abhorrence, and of admiration of the grace that appears in remission and reconciliation; and the law of love, that the gospel binds on Christ's disciples to love one another, as he hath loved them, must ever open a fource of repentance when their conduct is counter thereto.

Howunsuitable is it for Christ's disciples to practice upon that old Pharasaick tradition, thou shall love thy neighbor, and hate thine enemy; when Jesus reconciled them when they were enemies, and taught them to love their enemics.

How unsuitable for those of them that have this world's goods, and see their brethren in need, to shut up their bowels of compassion from them, when Jesus though he was rich for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich; who has kindly told us, the poor ye have always with you, and when soever ye will ye may do them good: Especially when he has said, who soever shall give you a cup of water, to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward; in a smuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these my brethren,

How unfuitable to the above-mentioned ground of fatisfaction in the finished work of Christ, is every branch of conduct and conversation unbecoming the gospel, when it lays the believers of it under the most indispensible, eternal obligations to look upon themselves, their time, talents, interest and opportunities, as not their own, but belonging to their redeemer, and to be ever employed to his glory. If these things be duly considered, with the various thoughts they lead to, they will open up reasons for daily repentance to the believers of the gospel, with a full conviction they can have no considence in the sless, but their rejoicing must be in Christ Jesus alone, to whom be glory forever.

The Gospel thus Evidenced, preached to every creature.

SECTION III.

The Gospel Considered; and the Manner in which it should be preached; with an endeavour to shew from the scriptures, that election doth not militate with preaching the gospel to every creature: Several other objections considered.

"Go ye therefore into all the world, and preach the gospel to eve-

Not in words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth.

Not with wisdom of words, least the cross of Christ should be made of none effect.

IN attending to a fermon, fome things occurred which brought a passage in the epissle to the Colossians, to remembrance, "fay to Archippus, take heed to the ministry, that thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfil it; which produced an inquiry, who Archippus was; and comparing the epissle to the Colossians, with that to Philemon, it appeared probable, that Philemon, Epaphras and Archippus were ministers of the church of Christ, gathered from among the Colossians, which then met in Philemon's house; both epissles appear to be wrote and sent at the same time; however, Archippus was a minister of the church of Christ, who received his ministry in the Lord, and yet was the subject of this exhortation: Hence it was concluded that no minister of Christ is above receiving a similar exhortation from the brethren.

The next inquiry was, what was the ministry he received in the LORD, or which the ministers of CHRIST receive in the LORD; supposing they receive the same now, as the ministers of the first churches did?

In answer, it may be said, that their commission was, "to go into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." It is agreed that the word gospel, signifies good news, glad tidings: The prophets and apostles agree herein. The prophet Isaiah saith, "O Zion that bringeth good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem, that bringeth good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength, lift up, be not afraid: Say to the cities of Judah, behold you God. How beautiful are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace, that bringeth good tidings of good: that publisheth falvation; that faith unto Zion, thy God reigneth." And similar is the word which God sent to the children of Israel; with which Peter was sent to the Gentiles, "preaching peace, by

JESUS CHRIST, he is LORD of all."

The scriptures do not leave us at a loss, respecting these glad tidings, "for the scriptures foreseeing that God would justify the heathen *through faith, preached before the gofpel unto Abraham, faying, in thy feed, shall all the nations of the earth be bleffed;" the same gospel is repeated to Isaac, and confirmed to Jacob, and is proclaimed from the top of Facob's ladder, where the LORD stood above it, and said, " I am the God of Abraham, thy father, and the God of Isaac;" this was also shown to Moses at the bush, and when he was fent to the children of Ifrael, he was directed to say unto them, "I am the God of Abraham, the God of Isac, and the God of Jacob; this is my name forever, and my memorial unto all generations." It is my unchangeable name, the unchangable name; of the unchangeable Gon; insuring bleffedness in CHRIST JESUS, to all the nations, kindreds, and families milies of the earth. And a believer of this gospel preached to Abraham, enters into rest; although he is in himself a poor, lost, wretched, miserable sinner, and understanding himself blessed in Christ Jesus, can rejoice in him, though he hath "no confidence in the flesh."

The prophet Isaiah speaking of the Gentiles, in his 54th chapter, fays to them, " fear not, for thou shall not be ashamed, neither be thou confounded, for thou shall not be put to shame, for thou shall forget the shame of thy youth, and shall not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more: For thy maker is thy husband, and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Ifrael, the God of the whole earth shall he be called." The prophet Feremiah, in his 3d cahapter, speaking of Judah and Ifrael, faith, "turn O backstiding children, faith the LORD, for I am married unto you." And the prophet Isaiah, appears to be speaking both of Jews and Gentiles, when he fays, "as the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, fo shall thy God rejoice over thee."

If the nations, kindreds and families of the earth are bleffed in Christ Jesus, and both Jews and Gentiles acknowledged as married unto him, then he is " the God of the whole earth."

Again, the whole earth are repeatedly called to fing a new fong unto the LORD, as we fee in Pfalm, 96, 1, 98,1, Ifaiah 42, 10, 11. This new fong is deferibed, Rev. 5. 9. "thou art worthy, for thou wast flain and hast redeemed us to God, by the blood, out of every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people :" If all the earth are called to fing this new fong, furely all the carth are interested in the subject matter of it.

Again, the most opposed to the salvation of the gospel, and the preaching of it, are the subjects of prayer. The Pfalmist, speaking in the person of Christ, in the 42d Pfalm, where he complains of his reproachers, faving, "my tears have been my meat, day and night, while they continually fayuntome, where is thy God?" And adds, "when I remember thefe, I pour out my foul in me." This we fee verified when they faid, "he trusted in God, let him deliver him, if he will have him;" and hear Jesus Christ pour out his foul in him, in that prayer "Fother forgive them for they know not what they do;" he also directs his disciples "to love their enemies, and pray for them that despitefully use them." Did he direct them to love those whom he did not; did he not die that his enemies might be reconciled by his death; was not he always heard, and did he bid his disciples pray for what should not be granted?

Then furely the gospel also is to be preached to them, and this good news is to be published as a truth among such characters, "That God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them;" agreeable to the prophet Isaiah, "I have blotted out thy transgressions as a cloud, and thine iniquities as a thick cloud, return unto me for I have redeemed thee."

Defigned brevity, forbids the taking notice of many confiderations that offer themselves, to prove and illustrate this truth, that Christ's ministers, commission is, "To preach the gospel to every creature." Two or three things offer themselves as inquiries or objections, as

1st. If the nations are blessed in Christ Jesus, both Jews and Gentiles, so that they are married unto him, and he is the God of the whole earth, whence is it fuch a place of fin and mifery?

It may be faid, if the woman interested in the estate and honours of her husband, treacherously depart from him, every step of her way, must be going further into the fink of sin and misery.

That

That this was the case with ancient Israel, is plain from Jeremiah, iii. 20. " Surely as a wife treacheroufly departs from her husband, so have you dealt treacheroufly with me, O house of Ifrael," which will be evident to any one that reads the beginning of the chapter, to the 12 verse, and Ezekiel, xvi. 32, 45-and as this was the cause of the distress and misery, that befel ancient Israel, so it is the cause of all the calamities that befal us all, in copying after their wretched example. Certainly there is no want of bleffedness in CHRIST JESUS; no want of power, riches, loving kindness, and mercy, in our Maker, our husband, the God of the whole earth; but all our unhappiness arises from our alienation from him, and the further we perfue that path, the greater our mifery and calamity, whether we know the cause or not.

Now if the husband of the treacherously departing wife, own her to be his wife, call after her to return, is willing and ready to receive her on her return, without upbraiding her, she is certainly blessed in a husband * though she forsakes her own mercies for

* The gospel, the Apossles preached was, 'that God was in Christ,' reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them, I Corinthians, v. 19. Agreeable to the gospel preached to Abraham, that 'in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed,' Galations iii. 8, 16. The Psalmist saith, 'men shall be blessed in him,' Psalm lxxii. 17. The prophet saith, 'the nations shall bless themselves in him, and in him shall they glory,' Jeremiah, iv. 2. By the Apossle we are said to be 'chosen in him,' Ephesians i. 4. 'To be justified in him,' I Corinthians, vi. 11. 'To be gathered together in him,' Ephesians i. 10. 'To be rooted and built up in him,' Colossas, ii. 7. 'To be sanctified in Christ Jesus,' I Corinthians, i. 2. 'To be blessed with all spiritual blessings in Christ Jesus,' Ephesians, i. 3. 'To be made to sit together in heavenly places, in Christ Jesus,' Ephesians, ii. 6. 'All the promises of God are in him, yea, in him, Amen,' 2 Corinthians i. 20. 'And yea are complete in him,' Colossas, ii. 10. 'And we are in him, that is true in his son Jesus Christ,' I Jehn, v. 20. Being blessed in him, denotes union as members to their head, 'all men being drawn to him when he was listed up; and so one dying for all, all died; he tasting death for every man.' Therefore this gospel preached to Abraham, and preached by the Apostles is to be preached to those that are the most remote from blessedness in themselves, and when it is believed they are led to rejoice in Christ Jesus, though altogether destinute in themselves, unbested and alteration, being the source of all our in themselves. they are led to rejoice in CHRIST JESUS, though altogether destinue in themselves, unbelief and alienation, being the source of all our misery, believing the truth as it is in JESUS, we see our blessedness in him.

herfelf, while perfifting in her alienation.

I need only repeat two passages of scripture, to lead our minds from the similitude just mentioned up to divine mercy. Jeremiah, iii. 1. "But thou hast played the harlot many lovers, yet return unto me, saith the Lord, verse 12, return thou backstiding Israel, saith the Lord,* I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you. Isaiah xlii. 22; I have blotted out as a thick cloud thy transgressions, and as a cloud thy sins: return unto me, for I have redeemed thee." Thus Gospel Ministers have the testimony of God, by his Prophets, as well as the commission given to the Aposteles, "to preach the Gospel to every creature."

2 dly. It may be inquired, are not ministers to preach the law? Answer, "by the law is the know-ledge of sin, for what things the law saith, it saith to them that are under the law, that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God, having no hope but in the rightcousness of God by saith of Jesus Christ, revealed in the Gospel."—The direction therefore, is "to preach the Gospel to every creature."

There were some in the Apossles' day, that desired to be teachers of the law, understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm. The Apostle says, "the law was our school-master unto, or until Christ," (to bring us, is supplied by the translators) "that we may be justified by faith; but when faith is come, we are no longer under a school-master." When saith is come, that is when Christ is come, who is the object of faith, and hath sent forth his servants to preach the Gospel, which is called the hearing of faith: "Received ye the spirit by the works of the law," or by the hearing of faith? That is by the hearing of the Gospel preached."

Objection.

^{*} It is not return and I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you as a condition; the and is supplied by the translators, it is, return, I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you.

Objection. But doth not the scripture fay, "curfed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them?"

Answer. Yes, this is the language of the law, but the language of the gospel, is, "Christ hath delivered us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us," and Christ's ministers are to preach the gospel; perhaps fome one will fay, they are to preach it to the prepared subjects that are awakened by the terrors of the law, to feek falvation by Christ Jesus. They are to preach it to every creature, to tellevery creature "Christ hath delivered us from the curse of the law, being made a curfe for us." To tell it as a truth; what! to unbelievers? Yes, to unbelievers; what constitutes a man an unbeliever, but not believing the report of the gospel. He that believeth this truth is faved from the tormenting fear of the curse of the law, believing the report of the gospel; while he that doth not believe this truth, remains under felf condemnation or damnation, being in his own apprehension under the law, and under the curse: Man is denominated an unbeliever as not believing the truth.

If Christ's ministers wish to help unbelievers, let them keep close to their direction, tell the truth that is to be believed: Let them preach the "ministry of reconciliation, that God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing unto them their trespasses: That he hath made him sin for us, who knew no fin, that we might be made the righteoufness of Godin him," and fet forth the evidences of it in the refurrection of Jesus Christ, from the dead, that if Gon please to accompany the evidence to their minds, they may believe.

Earnest repeated exhortations to believe, are lost, only tending to confuse the mind that understands not what is to be believed, but when the truth to be believed, is understood, and the evidences appears undeniable, it gains credit in the mind, and what we give full credit to is believed; therefore let the gofpel be preached to every creature, tell the good news even to unbelievers, for "it is glad tidings of great joy to all people, tidings of a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

3dly. Doth not the doctrine of election, militate with the gospel's being preached to every creature? If the elect are only to obtain falvation to the rejection or reprobation of all others, how is it possible to preach the gospel to every creature?

For answer, it may be said, that this connecting of final rejection or reprobation with the doctrine of election, has no foundation in the scriptures. Election among men, chooses men to certain offices for the benefit of those that are not elected; and if we confider election in the fense of the scriptures, it will appear that it is defigned for the benefit of others. If we turn our attention, first to Jesus Christ, it will lead our minds to Ifaiah xlii. 1, ushered in with a note of attention, "behold! behold my fervant whom I uphold, mine elect in whom my foul delighteth," why is JESUS CHRIST called God's elect, see verses, 6, 7, " I the LORD have called thee in righte-ousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles, to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness cut of the prison-house."

Question. But isit not said in the same prophesy, that he shall be a "stone of stumbling and rock of offence to both houses of Israel;" and Peter "speaks of him as a stone of stumbling and rock of offence, to them that stumble at the word, being disobedient, whereunto they were appointed." Surely, Peter doth not intend to militate with the doctrine of "the restitu-

tution of all things, spoken of by the mouth of all God's holy prophets fince the world began," their thus flumbling, is to fulfil the purpose of Gon, who hath concluded them all in unbelief that he may have mercy on all, and thus open the blind eyes, and bring the prisoners from the prison and those that fit in darkness, out of the prison-house." Agreeable to the prophefy of Simeon, in his address to Mary, " behold this child is fet for the fall and rifing again of many in Ifrael, and for a fign that shall be spoken against." The apostles were chosen witnesses of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, and sent to the Jews; the 70 disciples were chosen after, and sent to the Gentiles, to every place whether he himself should come. "The apostles were chosen to be Christ's witnesses," chosen to this end, to go into all the world, and preach the gofpel to every creature;" JESUS CHRIST tells them, "ye are the lights of the world;" lights are to guide travellers in the way: for this end, the 70 were chosen and fent forth. "Tis expressly said of Paul, " he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before gentiles and kings; and the children of Israel;" and this chosen vessel was sent unto the gentiles, to open their eyes and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of fatan unto Gop."

Which evidences that their election was for the benefit of others. Even in the xi of Romans, where the apossle speaking of the Israelites, says, "the election hath obtained, and the rest were blinded," and speaking of the stumbling of the blinded, saith, "have they stumbled, that they might fall; God forbid! and shews it was to bring about the purposes of God, respecting the gentiles, which being accomplished, all Israel shall be saved as it is written;" and speaking of these stumbling Jews, he saith, "as concerning the gospel, they are enemies for your sakes, but as touching the election, they are beloved for the father's sakes for the gifts and calling of God are without repentance;" fhews them, " concluded in unbelief, that God may have mercy on all."

So when the apostle, to the Ephefians, speaks of their being predestinated to the adoption of children by Jesus Christ, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of his glory, he shews the divine design herein, that in the dispensation of the sulness of time, he might gather together in one, all things in Christ, both which are in Heaven and on earth in him.*

It is faid by the apossle James, " of his own will begat he us, by the word of truth that we might be a kind of first fruits of his creatures;" now the first fruits are not the whole harvest, only an earnest of it, as we see by "the hundred forty aud four thousand, that are sealed in the Revelations, and stand with the Lamb on the mount Zion, with the harps of God; " these first fruits are the "elect redeemed from among men, that follow the lamb, whethersoever he goeth.

Now it is observable both in the 7th and 14th chapters, that the sealed, the first fruits, or the elect, were not the whole of the saved, for the hundred forty-four thousand sealed, being mentioned, we read in the

^{*} The view that has been taken of election, being for the beneit of others, and not for their destruction, might be illustrated from the old testament scriptures. When it pleased God to select Abraham from among those that served other gods, and bless him, others were not excluded, for his blessing shines most illustriously in that part of it thus expressed, in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. The choice of Moses and Aaron, the Levites, the 70 Elders and the 12 princes, were all for the benefit of all Israel, and the blessings they enjoyed were conveyed to them, through the faithful attention of those various characters and officers, to their appointments, by whom they were led forward to the typical rest, or land of Canaan. So are God's elect under the gospel dispensation, chosen as instruments, in their places, to bring to view from the scriptures, the glad tidings of the gospel, shewing Jesus as the way to the heavenly Canaan, the rest that remains to the people of God, where the leaves of the tree of life shall heal the nations, and there shall be no more curse, but the throne of God and the Lamb, shall be in it, and his fervants shall serve him, and they shall see his face agreeable to the prayer of Jesus Christ, John, xvii. 24, "father, I will, that they also whom thou hast given nie, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory.

9th verse, "after this I beheld, and lo a great multitude which no man could number, of all nations and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the Throne, and before the Lamb, cloathed with whiterobes, and palms in their hands, and cried, sulvation to our God, and to the Lamb.

This was fo wonderful, to fee this innumerable multitude, beside the sealed, the elect, the first fruits. that the inquiry is, what are these, and whence come they? The answer is, " these are they that come out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb," therefore are they before the throne, &c. These are they that came out of great tribulation: What greater tribulation can we suppose, can be fall the children of men, than what arises from an apprehension of a possibility of being reprobated to eternal damnation? And being on this account, all their lifetime subject to bondage through fear or death; for fuch to find themselves before the throne, in virtue of the blood of the Lamb, no wonder they cry with a loud voice, falvation, &c. no wonder they feel their obligations to ferve him: day and night in his temple, "having him that fitteth on the throne, to dwell among them, delivered) from hungering or thirsting any more, and having God to wipe away all tears from their eyes." If we look into the 14th capter, after the description of the hundred forty-four thouland, standing with the Lamb, on the mount, Zion, with the harps of God, and finging the new fong, we find, verse 6, another angel. "fly in the midst of Heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell in the earth; even to every nation, tongue, and people:" Thus I think if the doctrine of election were rightly understood, it can be no objection to preaching the gospel to every creature.

The Apostle Paul gives the sum of the gospel which he preached in the beginning of the 15th chapter of the first epistle to the Corinthians, contained in the death and resurrection of Christ with the evidences of it, and speaking of the other Apostles, he saith, verse 11, "whether I or they, so we preach and fo ye believed.

Not fo we preached, but fo we preach, they continue to preach the fame doctrine, in their writings handed down to us, and bleffed be Gov, we have the fulfilment of that prophecy, (in that we have the free use of the scriptures of truth) recorded in Isaiah xxx, 20, " yet shall not thy teachers be driven into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers, and thine ear shall hear a word behind thee, saying this is the way;" the gospel always finds us with our backs to it, pursuing another way, and points out the way into which we are to return, is not this turning, repentance unto life? Is not the preaching the gospel, included in Paul's exhortation to Timothy, "my fon be strong in the grace, that is in Christ Jesus;" the same Apossle tells us what this grace is, "ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, though he was rich for our sakes, became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich; this is the grace made manifest in the gospel, the tidings of it are to be told to every creature; this is the grace whereby we ferve God acceptably, which our Apoltle exhorts to hold fast, we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved; we read it, let us have grace, but the margin reads it agreeable to the original, " let us hold fast the grace whereby we may ferve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear," for our God is a confuming fire; every thing in the fervice of God, that hath not respect to the grace that is in Christ Jesus, is wood, hay, stubble, and must be burnt up.

The

The apostle Peter drawing to a close in his first Epistle, speaking of what he had been writing, says, "I have written briefly, exhorting and testifying that this is the true grace of God, wherein ye fland;" if we look back into the Epistle, we find him writing of the grace, that is in Christ Jesus, who his ownfelf bear our fins in his own body on the tree, for Christ hath once suffered the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, by whose stripes ye were healed. Much hath been faid about marks and evidences of true grace, in the hearts of men; but the voice behind us, reminds us of the true grace of Gon, and the evidences of it manifested in Christ Jesus, this is the grace, the Apostle exhorts the Hebrews to look diligently, least they fall from, we read it "looking diligently, least any man fail of the grace of Gon," but according to the margin, agreeable to the original, it is, least any man fall from the grace of God. From the grace of God to the grace of mian; from the grace that is in Christ Jesus, by which alone, we are accepted to grace, in our own hearts, which cannot procure our acceptance with God: Can any one in the exercise of reverence and godly fear, approach the divine presence, in his own name, making mention of the grace, that is in his own heart, as that whereby he may ferve God acceptably, it brings to mind, Isaiah, xxvii. 4. " Who would fet the briers and thorns against me in battle, I would go through them, I would burn them together, or let him take hold of my strength, he may make peace with me, he shall make peace with me;" peace is preached by Jesus Christ.

The fcriptures testify of Christ, both in the law of Moses, the Prophets, and the Psalms: The great error of many preachers, has centered in their apprehension, that the scriptures testified of good men, and in proportion as this error has prevailed, we have heard of the virtue and piety of Abraham, David, the Prophets, and other pious men, whom we have been excited to follow, in hope of divine favor, if we could come to their attainments; but the light discovers this to be a species of idolatry, putting the Creature in the place of Jesus Christ, or at least between us and him, while the gospel calls us " to behold the lamb of God, that taketh away the fin of the world." The light discovering this error, in the place of it, there has crept in, perhaps a more undifcernable one, when preachers have been led to speak excellently of the character and finished work of CHRIST, they have known fomething elfe besides JESUS CHRIST, and him crucified, having a great part of their discourses, taken up about the excellency of believers, their experiences, attainments, devotions in their closets and families, and at public worthip, and in their conduct in moral civil life, to the flattering of their pride and importance, causing them to conceive themselves the chief of faints, to the abasement of those that have not these attainments. But let it be confidered whether it would not be more advantageous to the believers of the gospel, as well as nearer their pattern, if they were put in mind of the various apostolic exhortations to them, and put upon inquiring how much cause they have for shame and humiliation, that these exhortations have so little influence on their minds and conduct, which if attended to with fobriety of mind, would tend to excite them, to take rank with the chief of finners, and to glorify Cop, for mercy, upon a level with the vilest. Such preachers as are above described, draw the minds of their hearers from the one object, having two to prefent before them; whereas the Prophet Isaiah, proposes one object, "The glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all slesh shall see together. Look unto me and be faved, all the ends of the earth." John fays, fays, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the fin of the world;" and Paul determins to know nothing among them, fave Fesus Christ and him crucified. Let Peter close with his testimony of Christ, as recorded in his ist Epistle, 2d chapter, 24 verse, "Who his ownself, bear our sins in his own body on the tree, that we being dead to sin, might live to rightcousiness, by whose stripes ye were healed."

Should the mind of any, suggest the old objection,

Should the mind of any, fuggest the old objection, to preaching the gospel to every creature, that was brought in the apostle's days and is kept up, down to our day, that it endangers morality, and will excite to continue in fin, that grace may abound.

It may be answered, that the morality of the gofpel is founded on divine love, both by JESUS CHRIST and his apostles; when Jesus Christ gave the golden rule, as it is deservedly called, it was founded on the love of God, set forth in a most striking sigure, " what man is there of you, who if his fon ask bread, will he give him a stone?" Is there such a man among you that are evil, prone to covetousness, anger and various other evils? Is there one among you, who, if his fon ask bread, will he give him a stone, and thus mock his hunger? What heart, among you that are evil, can do this? If ye then being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more shall your father who is in Heaven, give good things to them that ask him? Therefore all things whatsoever ye would, that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; you never need defraud or over-reach one another, to obtain any good you may think you want, because your heavenly father is more ready to give good things to them that ask him, than the best of you are to give bread to your children, let his love constrain you in all things, to do one to another, as ye would they should do to you: when Jesus bid his disciples love their enemies, he gave the example in his love to them.

When

When he bid them pray for them that faid all manner of evil of them fallly for his name fake, he gave his example on the cross, " Father forgive them, for they know not what they do."

He faith to his disciples, a new commandment I give unto you, " That ye love one another, as I have loved you," mark that, and consider, how did he love his disciples? Let one of them answer, " herein is love, not that we loved God, but he loved us, and fent his fon the—propitiation for our sin," (he adds) " beloved, if God so loved us, we ought to love one another," the love of God and our neighbour, contains all morality, and we love him because he first loved us, and when we believe the love of God to our neighbour, as well as to ourselves, we shall see the only foundation of loving our neighbour as ourselves.

The morality of the gospel is founded on divine love by the Apostles; they preached the gospel to every creature, those who were gathered to the faith of the gospel, they collected into churches, and taught them to observe all things whatsoever Jesus Christ * commanded; they exhorted, comforted, and charged every one of them, as a father doth his children, that they would walk worthy of God, who hath called them to his kingdom and glory. Let any one whose mind is concerned about the preaching of the gospel to every creature, endangering morality, look over the epifiles, wrote to the churches, collected by preaching the gospel, and they will see in the former parts of those epistles, the riches of divine grace, contained in the doctrine of Christ, then, the obligations the disciples are under to adorn this doctrine, in their lives and conversations in the various places and relations that they fultain; that they which have believed in God, be careful to maintain good works, not merely to talk of them, with approbation, but be at the cost of maintaining them. If these things be foberly foberly attended to, it will appear to any impartial inquirer, that the interest of morality is not endangered by preaching the gospel to every creature.

Having inquired who Archippus was, and what was the ministry he received in the LORD; the next inquiry is, in what manner is this ministry thus received of the LORD, to be delivered to the people? The answer to this inquiry is given by the apostle. "Not with wisdom of words least the cross of Christ should be made of none effect," ist of Corinthians, xvii. to the end. "And I brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God, for I determined not to know any thing among you, fave Jefus Christ, and him crucified," 1st of Corinthians ii. 1 to 5. "And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the spirit and of power, now we have received not the spirit of the word, but the spirit which is of God, that we may know the things that are freely given us of God, which things we freak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teachcth, comparing spiritual things with spiritual." Verses 12, 13. That is, I conceive comparing the types and prophefies of the Old Testament, with their fulfilment in the antitype, as recorded in the new.

If it should be inquired, why were the apossles of Christ thus cautious to thun the enticing words of man's wisdom? the two reasons the apossle gives, may be brought as an answer; —First, the corruption of the doctrine of Christ, in these words, "not with wisdom of words, least the cross of Christ, should be of none effect, the preaching of the cross, or of Christ crucified, is to the Jew a stumbling-block, and to the Greek soolishness," now there have not been wanting those who sought by wisdom of words, to make the offence of the cross cease from the apossles days,

down to our own. The false teachers in the apostles days, laboured to reconcile the stumbling Jew to the gospel, by adding the ceremonies of the law, teaching the Gentile believers, " except they be circumcifed after the manner of Moses, they cannot be faved, making by their wildom, the cross of Christ, of none effect," for faith the apostle, " whosoever is circumcised, he is a debtor to do the whole law, Christ is become of none effect," feeking thus to be justified by the law, they fall from the grace of the gospel. The false teachers from the apostles days to our own, have in like manner studied by wisdom of words, to reconcile the doctrine of CHRIST to the wife Greek, who held it foolish to build the hope of falvation on CHRIST crucified, as the only exclusive foundation; faving it is foolish for an ungodly finner, to look for justification by the work of Christ, unless he have repentance, faith, obedience, &c. which are brought in as props to the work of Christ, as though it were not alone all-fufficient; faith, as it is thus confidered, is not the belief of the gospel, which reports our bleffedness in Christ Jesus, but is something we must have wrought in us, or exercised by us, in order to our being interested therein. Repentance as it is thus confidered, is not a turning from ourselves, and all creature dependence, where we have been feeking life, to Christ, who is our life; but is a certain forrow, for our open heinous, and even fecret fins, to qualify us for obtaining forgiveness by CHRIST JESUS. Obedience is likewise confidered a necessary qualification for our acceptance; not as a testimony of our gratitude, that he hath made us accepted in the beloved.

And in this mistaken view, faith, repentance and obedience, being added to the work of Christ, are calculated to bring the doctrine to the wisdom of the Greek, who always suppose God will be propitious to the believing penitent and obedient. Every species of false religion, of what ever name or denomination, will agree here, while every true christian will agree with the apostle, that it is * a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Jesus came to save sinners, of whom I am chief; but that Christ came to seek and save that which was lost, died for the ungedly, came to save sinners, even the chief, will not do to mention alone, it is too weak and soolish.

It is true, fay they, that Christ came to fave that which was loft, and no finner will miscarry, who seek him sincerely, earnesly and perseveringly; but the text says, "he came to seek and to save that which was lost," it true say they, "Christ died for the ungodly," and all of that discription shall be benefited thereby, that will come to him; but they will not come that they may have life; but read the text, "my people shall be willing in the day of my power."

Yes, fay they, but who are his people, who are given to him? Let the feriptures answer, "the father loveth the fon, and hath given all things into his hands, he hath given the heathen his inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth, his possession, and all that the father giveth, shall come."

Thus we have contemplated how the wisdom of words, is employed, to endeavor to take away the stumbling block from the Jew, and the imputation of foolishness from the Greek; and that every attempt of this kind, is making the cross of Christ of none effect. The second reason, the apostle draws from the effects on the hearers; where the doctrine of Christ is maintained, there should be a constant care to use great plainness of speech, because the poor have the gospel preached to them, and if it is preached in language above their capacity, although it may be very good, and easy to be understood by the learned, yet if there come in one that is unlearned, how shall he say Amen, at thy giving thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest; except (says the apossle) ye utter by the tongue, words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken, for ye shall speak unto the air; and he says, I had rather speak five words with my understanding, that I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue.

Although tongues have ceased, yet these expresfions of the apostle, may at this day be improved as a guard against language above common capacities, and when such language is familiar by use, to any of the preachers of the gospel, such would do well to attend the exhortation of the apostle, let him that speaks in an unknown tongue, pray that he may interpret? let him pray that he may be able to come to the capacity of the most unlearned of his hearers, when preaching the gospel of Christ; it seems as if this was what the aposse meant, by faying, "brethren be not children in understanding, in understanding be men," as it immediately follows his faying, he had rather speak five words with his understanding, that he might teach others, than ten thousand that could not be underflood; for faith he, if I know not the meaning of the voice, I shall be to him that speaketh, a barbarian, and he that speaketh a barbarian unto me.

Upon the whole, the apostle appears to aim at inculcating the delivering of the gospel with plainness of speech for the above reasons, which appear weighty and worthy of attention; and says, "feeing then we have such hope we use great plainness of speech, and not as Moses, who put a veilover his sace;" and in another place neither of men sought we glory, neither of you nor of others.

Let gospel ministers imitate the apostle herein, let them attend the express declaration of scripture, both of the Old and New Testament, that unite to publish falvation falvation, to the ends of the earth, and to the evidences of the truth of these glad tidings, of great joy to all people; that being convinced of the truth of this good news, they may tell it as a truth to their hearers, even to unbelievers, in as plain, intelligible a manner as may be, that if it please God to accompany the truth with divine evidence, they may believe, and believing have life through his name.

Let the hearers, whose minds are at a loss about the truth of the Gospel, bend their attention to the search of the scriptures after the example of the Bereans, to fee if thefe things are fo.

And those that are satisfied of the truth, from scripture evidence, abound in thanksgiving for the manifestation of the exceeding riches of the grace appearing therein, and make it their constant study to live as the grace of God, which hath appeared, which bringeth salvation to all men, teacheth, viz. "denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously and godly in the world, looking for the blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ, who gave himself for our sins, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works."

Let the words of the apossle Peter close, "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God, if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability, that God giveth; that God in all things may be glorified thro' Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever, AMEN.

A Sober Attention to the Scriptures of Truth, &c.

SECTION IV.

A SOEER ATTENTION to the SCRIPTURES of TRUTH, for a Satisfactory Answer to the Most Important Question that ever Exercised the Minds of Men.

To the Law and to the Testimony. ISAIAH. If Baal be a God let him plead for himself. JUDGES.

My respected and beloved FRIEND,

IT appears very unfuitable to the spirit of the gospel to engage in any religious controversy in a way of striving for the mastery, therefore when you pointed me to the 330th page of the 2d volume of letters on Theron and Aspasso, the 3d edition; where the author speaks of two worlds, Christ hath his world, and Satan hath his world, &c. Were it not for an apprehension that the glory of him who has faid the world is mine and the fulness thereof; and that the peace and comfort of every creature, and their obligation to their rightful owner, is concerned in knowing whose they are, and whom they should serve; I should pass it over unnoticed; but, persuaded that this is the case, and that you yourself have much perplexity of mind on this fubject, and have made me acquainted with a repeated with, that I would give you my thoughts upon it; I have been excited to read the passage and the scripture text alluded to in fupport of that opinion: And fat down to collect a plain simple view of the scriptures, in order to get a just idea from them on the subject. When I recollected that I had already done it feveral years ago, at the defire of a female friend, who requested me to look into a pamphlet she had lately read, in opposition to the doctrine of Universal Salvation, under the signature of Adelos, in which there appeared to her some arguments unanswerable. This anonymous writer may be supposed to take his sentiment on this subject by tradition from the passage you pointed me to, in the aforementioned author: Therefore, I concluded it would comport with your request, to shew you a copy of that letter, which I now send you as follows:

Copy of a Letter fent to a Gentlewoman at Halifax, December 9, 1787.

MADAM,

YOU requested me to look into a pamphlet you have been reading, in opposition to the doctrine of Universal Salvation, under the fignature of Adelos, in which you think are some arguments unanswerable; and to give you my opinion, I have at length found and read it. It is introduced with a presace, in which he speaks of Truth as a pearl of inestimable worth; or a chaste virgin of heavenly birth, and immortal charms; and in the first chapter, shews that men are generally uncertain where to look for it, and have a salse direction given to their minds, by their wish, by parents, teachers, the public, the great, the ancient fathers, &c.

Now, endeavoring as much as may be to avoid these salse directions, and attend to the infallible standard, I shall proceed to say that which strikes my mind, and which, I mean chiefly to attend to is page 42, margin, "Out of all nations, and kindred, and people, and tongues, and so are part of the nations only, and yet are God's whole world, of the redeemed, dftinguished from Satan's world, for which Jesus neither prayed nor died." The whole discourse turns upon this as its main hinge; let us look into the scriptures and see if these things are so; If we begin to look for Satan's world, although he told our Lord Jesus, Mark, iv. 5, 6. after shewing him all the kingdoms of the world in, and saying, all this power will I give thee, and the glory of them, if thou wilt fall down and worship me, all shall be thine: And although he is called, 1st of Corinthians, iv. 4. The God of this world, and it is said, 1st John, v. 19. the whole world lieth in wickedness, or in the wicked one; yet I know of no text of scripture that speaks of any part of the world as his, by creation, or by purchase, or by gift, or in any other way, that makes him their rightful owner, or makes them his, or leaves them without rebuke in obedience to him, which they would be if he were their rightful LORD.

He is represented as their deceiver, 1st Tim. ii, 14. the woman being deceived, was in the transgreffion. Deut. xi. 16. shews that the heart must be deceived, to turn aside from the true God. In Rev. xx. 10, we read of the Devil that deceived them, and in Rev. xviii. 23. we read of the means made use of to this end: For by thy forceries were all nations deceived; and as their deceiver, he leads them captive, 2d Tim. 2, 26. who are taken captive by him at his will; having deceived them into his snare, and led them captive, he exercises an usurped dominion over them, and is called, the fpirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience. Being deceived and infinared, they have fallen from obedience to their rightful owner and LORD, so are denominated children of disobedience, while they follow the dictates of Satan, the ruler of the darkness of this world. were his property, if he were their creator, preserver, or redeemer, they would owe obedience to him, and not be stiled children of disobedience in their subjection to him, the Devil with the principalities and powers powers in his confederacy, are called, Ephefians, vi. 11, 12. the rulers of the darkness of this world, and Satan, who is called the God of this world, is said to blind the minds of them that believe not, 2d Corin. iv. 4. yea, they are represented as delirious, distracted, mad. See the man among the tombs, Mark, v. 15. Luke viii. 35.

But this is not confined to an individual; it will be found universal, not only in the spiritual whoredom of the house of Israel, but of all nations. 'Tis said of Babylon (that is the abomination of the whole earth, Rev. xvii. 5.) That all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornications, Rev. xviii. 3. and Jeremiah saith, the nations have drunken of her wine,

Thus we find Satan's world a deceived, deluded, enfnared, captivated, enflaved, distracted, mad world. That he usurps a dominion over, who are absolutely wrong in their obedience to him, acting against their rightful owner, so as to deny his right to them, and his dominion over them; described by the Apostle Peter, as denying the Lord that bought them; and bringing npon themselves swift destruction; and by Jude, as turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. This is a brief scriptural description of what is called Satan's world. But does this description of them alienate them from being the property of their rightful owner?

If Gon's chosen people should vaunt themselves that they were his exclusively, and the rest were Satan's world, would they not embolden and encourage the deceived captives of Satan, to continue in his service as their rightful owner and Lord? Would they not join with them in denying them to be the property of the Lord that bought them, in denying the only Lord God our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ?

power of the deceiver.

When God frake to the children of Ifrael, whom he felected from all other nations as his peculiar people in Exodus xix. 5. He fays, now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people, For all the earth is mine, Pfalm xxiv. 1. the earth is the Lord's, and the fulnefs thereof, the world and they that dwell therein, Ezekiel xviii. 14, all fouls are mine, hence he is called the God of the spirits of all flesh, Numbers xvi. 22, repeated, chap. xxvii. 16, and he faith by the prophet Feremiah, behold, I the LORD the God of all flesh, Jeremiah xxxii. 27, The God, of the whole earth shall he be called, faith the prophet Ifaiah, chap. liv. 5. (if fo, what world belongs to Satan of right, so as to be called his world?) and yet, notwithstanding a great part of the world are in the before-defcribed bondage, and flavery to Satan. But God fo loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that who focuer believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life; for God fent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world, through him might be faved, John iii. 16, 17, hence we read the Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand, verse 35, agreeable to what was faid in the fecond Pfalm, ask of me and I shall give the heathen thine inheritance, and the uttermost part of the earth thy possession.

Hence Jesus Christ says, all that the Father hath is mine, but why was this? The answer, is, John xvii. 2, that he should give eternal life, to as many as thou hast given him, consequently Jesus Christ saith, John vi. 37, 38, 39. all that the Father giveth me, shall come unto me, and him that cometh unto me, I will in no wife cast out; for I came down from Heaven not to do mine own will, but the will of him that fent me; and this is the Father's will who hath fent me, that of all that he hath given me, I should lofe nothing, but should raife it up at the last day.

Thus we see divine love hath given the world a Saviour, and hath given all things into his hand, that by his saving power, he many give eternal life, to all that are given to him.

Now if we review the state of mankind under the power of Satan, and view the character of the Saviour, we shall see their salvation in him. Have they lost the way of life, being deceived by salshood, into the way of death? He is the way, the truth, and the life. When he is made manifest, truth scatters deceit and salshood, reveals the way to the lost, and shews life to them that sit down discouraged in the region and shadow of death; he sent his apostles to turn from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God.

And as all the Father hath is given to him, the heathen his inheritance, and the utmost part of the earth his poffession, those chosen out of the world appear in character as his, while the world in distinction from them are lying in the wicked one; vet being his inheritance and possession. He shall break them with a rod of iron and dash them in pieces, as a potter's veffel. Their union in following the usurper in oppofition to CHRIST, shall be broken by his irresistible power, who is their rightful owner. For this purpofe was the fon of God manifested, that he might destroy the works of the Devil. In the passage mentioned in the 2d Pfalm, their appears an allusion to an inheritance, that as we fay, is all wild, uncultivated, and inhabited by wild beafts, taken in hand by the owner, broken up with instruments of iron, which the more speedily and effectually it is done, redounds to the honor of the owner.

There is another allusion to an husbandman, who when he had fowed good feed in his field, and the enemy fowed tares among the wheat, which fprung up and grew, that was able to separate them in the time of the harvest, so as not to lose the least grain of wheat, which was wheat when fowed, and when it grew, and when it was harvefled, though the tares grew with it twined about it and entangled it; yet had them all separated and burnt up, while the wheat was gathered into his barn.

Similar to this, is what we hope for from the Great Husbandman: To be finally freed from the power and tyranny of Satan; and from every thing that offends and works iniquity. But it is faid, the field, is the world, not the Church; but it is his field for the world faith the owner, and bleffed be his name, mine, and the fulness thereof.

Stain, the enemy who fowed the tares, has no right to the field in any part of it; he owneth no world. That world that lieth in him, is led captive by him, yet belongeth to him who is mighty to fave: who prayed for those who were thus drawn into disobedience, and enmity against him, on the cross, Father, for give them, for they know not what they do, and directed his disciples to imitate him, in praying for those that despitefully use and persecute them.

This direction being put in their mouths by him, and exactly agreeable to his prayer on the cross, undoubtedly will be answered; as well as that put into the mouths of the disciples by the Apostle, that prayer, supplication, and intercession be made for all men, because he will have all men to be saved, and come to the knowledge of the truth.

Adelos says, " That it means only all forts of men, is confirmed by this, that his will is as much that they should come to the knowledge of the truth, as that they should be faved; and it is plain he does not will every individual should come to the knowledge of the truth, fasts shew the contrary."

His reasoning is contrary to the faith of Abraham, who against hope, believed in hope, knowing what God had promised he was able to perform: And to the apostle Paul, who in the 2d of Hebrews, quotes a passage from the 8th Psalm, thou hast put all things under his feet, and to shew that all, in this place indisputably means all, he adds, in that he put all things under him, he lest nothing not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him, but we have the assurance of the accomplishment of it, in the sollowing words. But we see Jesus who was made a little lower than the Angels, for the sufferings of death, crowned with glory and honor, that he by the grace of God, should taste death for every man.

And, although Adelos repeats in another passage, "facts shew the contrary," as if a repetition of the expression, would shew the thing true; yet it appears contrary to Isaiah xi. 9. The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea, Knowing him, consequently all nations shall serve him, as, Psalm. lxxii. 11. Agreeing with Psalm lxxxvi. 9. All nations whom thou hast made, shall come and worship before thee, and glorify thy name. Daniel says, chap. vii, 14, and there was given him, dominion and glory, and a kingdom; that all nations, people and tongues, should serve and obey him.

And though we fee not yet their accomplishment, we know he is faithful that has promised, who also will do it. Therefore, let not Adelos be so sanguine in his conclusion, but if the vision tarry, wait for it, it will surely come, it will not tarry: Wait for the times of the restitution of all things, spoken of by the mouth of God's holy prophets, since the world began.

Adelos

Adelos fays, page 60th, "as to the nations, they may be compared to vast columns of water, moving a steady course down their channel, they cannot be diverted or turned back. I wish him to remember the red sea, the river Jordan, and the power of him that sayeth to the deep be dry, Isaiah xliii. 27, and I will dry up thy rivers, I wish him to read the cxivth Psalm, with the cxxvi. And because Simeon hath declared how God at the first, visited the nations, to take out of them a people for his name, let him not say, as at page x, "it was not the intent of Jesus to do more than to collect out of the nations a people for his name."

I shall take notice of one text that Adelos mentions, as coming from the whore of Babylon, Rev. xviii. 7, 6. I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no forrow, therefore shall her plagues come in one day; death and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burnt with fire, &c. And compare it with Isaiah xlvii. 8, 9. Thou fayest in thine heart, I shall not sit a widow, neither shall I know the loss of children; but these two things shall come on thee in a moment, in one day: The loss of children and widowhood, they shall come on thee in their perfection. Have not all nations drank of the wine of her fornication, and the kings of the earth committed fornication with her? and shall they not be turned to hate the whore, and make her desolate, and naked, and eat her slesh, and burn her with fire? And if the nations that have drunk the wine of her fornication, may be looked upon as her children, in whatever capacity, either as national churches, or any of the various denominations called christian, or antichristian, or what or whoever may be looked upon as her children, she shall be bereaved of them, fo as to have no fingle individual left, else the loss of children and widowhood come not in their perfection: And this, fays the text, shall come on her in a moment, in one day: She fhall fhall be destroyed with the brightness of Christ's coming; the kingdom of Satan and Antichrist, is a kingdom of darkness, which the light of the word confumes, by turning the slaves in that kingdom from darkness unto light, and from the power of Satan unto God. When the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth, as the waters cover the sea, or when the brightness of Christ's coming is made manifest, antichrist shall be destroyed. This is what we hope for, from him, who hath delivered us from the curse, being made a curse for us, that he will save us from the inbeing of sin; his name is Jesus, he shall save his people from their sins.

Further, as the Great Owner fays, the world is mine, and the fulness thereof; and the usurper owneth no world, but the Saviour and his Apostles, have directed the Disciples, to pray for those he has deceived, and led captive at his will, even the worst of them, Doth he not greatly err, to say, "that there is a world for which he neither prayed, nor died?"

The passage in the 17th of John, I think, if rightly understood, will not warrant his affertion in the beginning of the Chapter, he speaks of the Father's giving him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as he had given him.

Then he speaks of his immediate Disciples, to whom he had manifested the Father's name, and prays for those things for them, of which they stood in need of as his witnesses, that he did not pray for, for the rest of the world.

Afterward he prays for those that should believe on him through their word, then comes in the design of this prayer; verse 21, that they all may be one, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee; that they also may be one in us, That the world may believe, that thou hast fent me. Verse 23, that the world may know that thou hast fent me. In which Jesus prays that the world may know and believe that he is the fent of God; the same that distinguished the Disciples from the rest of the world, in verse 8th, the world hath not known me, but these have known me, and they have believed that thou hast sent me.

Thus Jesus prays that the world may be brought into the same circumstances, that distinguished the disciples from the world. We read in verse 24, Father I will, that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me to behold my glory.

What is the meaning of also? Is it not generally under stood to bring in something that had not before been particularly noticed, or discovered? As if Jesus had faid, I not only pray for my immediate disciples, and those that shall believe on me through their word, that they may be one, that the world may know and believe: But adds, Father I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me, where I am, to behold my glory. Any one that believes this to be true, may fay, Am I given to CHRIST! What a heathen! The most contemned: What, one in the utmost parts of the earth, the most neglected: And doth he will that those given to him be with him, to behold his glory. Oh! Language fails, to express the gratitude, and joy and obligation to obedience, that I, and every heathen, and every creature in the utmost parts of the earth, are hereby called to exercise.

We were given to him that he might give eternal life to as many as were given to him; verse 2d, and is it not the beginning of life eternal, to know the love of God in Christ thus made manifest?

And as Jesus prayed for the world, so he died for them; when he was lifted up, he drew all men unto him; and one dying for all, all died, as the Apostles judge, if one died for all, then were all dead: 2d Corinthians i. 14. And thus faith the gospel of reconciliation ciliation, God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them. He died for the ungodly, and tasted death for every man.

I thought to proceed to take notice of feveral truths which Adelos speaks, which his sentiments lead him to confine, but having exceeded the bounds of a letter, shall leave it to another opportunity.

Yours, &c.

SHIPPIE TOWNSEND.

Boston, Dec. 9, 1787.

THUS, my friend, I have shewn you the scope and substance (not having an exact copy) of a letter that was written sometime past, on the same subject, judge for yourself if it is not agreeable to the scriptures of truth. If I have not already wearied you, I will subjoin some further thoughts that were then written concerning the truth he speaks, which his sentiments lead him to consine.

Adelos speaks the truth "concerning the appearance of primitive christianity, and the distinction of

But why they were thus diftinguished, but to be his chosen witnesses, to bear testimony against the corruption of Antichrist, and bear witness to the truth and ways of Christ, amidst a crooked and perverse generation, among whom they were to shine as lights in the world? lights are not to hinder travellers from seeing, but to shew them the way in which they may walk with safety. The appearance of primitive christianity, and the first Disciples, were lit up to turn the attention of lost and bewildered travellers, to the new and living way, hear one of the primitive preachers express himself on this head, unto me who am less than the least of all faints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles, the unscarchable riches of Christ: And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, &c. Ephesians iii. 8.9.

Again, it is a truth which he takes notice of, that " Aaron as a type bears the names of the children of Israel on his breast plate, and on his heart, and not the names of the Egyptians, &c." But it is as true, that the Egyptians are included in the promise, as well as Ifrael; read, Ifaiah xix. from 13 to the end, and you will fee that though they were deceived and feduced, and were caused to err in every work of theirs, as a drunken man staggereth in his vomit. that day, verse 19, shall there be an altar to the Lord in the land of Egypt, verse 21, and the Lord shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the LORD in that day, &c. verse 22, and the LORD shall fmite Egypt, he shall smite and heal, and they shall return to the LORD, and he shall be intreated of them, and shall heal them; verse 24, in that day shall Ifrael be the third with Egypt, and with Affyria, even a bleffing in the midst of the land; verse 25, whom the Lord of Hosts shall blefs, saying, Blessed be Egypt my people, and Affyria the work of my hands, and Ifrael mine inheritance. The gospel corresponding with the prophecy shews, that he is the God of the Gentiles as well as the Jews: That the Gentiles are fellow-heirs, that as the name of Ifrael was on the breast plate of Aaron, the type and the children of Ifrael came to God, by the typical high-priest, fo the Egyptians, the Gentiles come to Goo, by the great high priest of our profession; for all nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, and glorify thy name, Pfalm xxvi. 9, fo, however true Adelos's remark is, that grand kingdoms at this present time are destitute of the words of eternal life, yet we are not at liberty with him to conclude that God has not a people among them, least we should deny the heathens were his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth his possession. Among men, that part of their inheritance that is not cultivated

plough-land, or even the garden.

Again, it is a truth, that the epiftles of the Apostles were written to believers, that composed the churches of the Saints. Yet it is true, that in them the Apostle wrote to the Disciples, of that falvation that respected the rest of the world. To the church in Rome, whom he addresses as beloved of God, called faints, he fays, chap. v. 18, as by the offence of one, upon all men to condemnation: Even folly the righteoufness of one, upon all men to justification of life. Verse 21, that as fin reigned unto death, even fo might grace reign through righteougness unto eternal life, by [ESUS CHRIST OUR LORD. If fin reigned unto death over the posterity of Adam, it cannot be even fo respecting grace reigning through righteoufness to eternal life, except it extend as far as the reign of fin. Adam is called a figure of him that is to come; now if their be more in the figure than in the substance, it is not a figure of that substance.

To the church at Corinth, fanctified in Christ Jesus, called Saints, with all that in every place call on the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours, he fays, 1 Epistle xv, 22, as in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive. Verse 49, as we have borne the image of the carthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly, and 2d Epistle, 5th chapter, 14, for the love of Christ constraineth us, because we thus judge if one died for all then were all dead: Hence verse 19, God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their tres-

To the churches in Galatia, he fays, in chapter iv. 4, in the fulness of time God fent forth his son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law; if we believe Jesus Christ is come in the slesh, we believe he accomplished what he came for; and as he came to redeem them that were under the law, we believe his redemption as extenfive as that description; and believing, may exult with the Apostle, in Chapter iii. 13, CHRIST hath deliverd us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us. To the Saints at Ephesus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus, he fays, Chap. i. 9, 10, Having made known to us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure, which he purposed in himself; that in the dispensation of the fulness of time he might gather together all things in CHRIST, both which are in heaven, and which are in earth in him, chapter iii. 8 g, unto me, who am less than the least of all faints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles, the unsearchable riches CHRIST: And to make all men fee what is the fellowfhip of the mystery, &c. To the Saints in Christ Jesus at Philippi. He brings to view the humiliation and exaltation of Jesus Christ, and his name above every name, that in the name of Jesus every knee should bow, not at the name, but in the name, which denotes true worship, 'tis agreeable to the exhortation of the Apostle to the Colossians, iii. 17, and is the same word that is there used, what fover ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the LORD JESUS: And here we may take notice, that the Apostle, speaking to them, says, chapter i. 20, and by him to reconcile all things to himself, by him, whether things in heaven, or things on earth. When the Apostle writes to the Evangelist Timothy, the same truths are inculcated, 1st of Timothy, 2, from one to the 6th verse; and Titus ii, 11, the grace of God, which bringeth falvation to all men hath appeared: We have already had occasion to mention, what he fays to the Hebrews, in chapter ii, 8, 9, Fames is fo far from fupposing the begotten by the word of truth, are God's whole world, that he calls them first-fruits:-

Of his own will begat he us, by the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first-fruits of his creatures. And Peter speaks of false teachers, who shall privily bring in damnable errors, even denying the Lord that hought them, and bring on themselves swift destruction; for destruction and misery are in their ways, who deny the Lord that bought them, who is the way of peace; but hath the Lord bought them? Then they are his, according to Isaiah xliii. 1, I have redeemed thee, thou art mine, and he will not lose the purchase of his blood; though they have destroyed themselves, in him, is their help. John, you know fpeaks of Jesus, as the propitiation for our fins, and not for ours only, but for the whole world, and in the Revelations, he fays, and every creature in Heaven, on earth, and in the fea, heard I, fay bleffing, and honour, and glory, and power, unto him that fitteth on the throne, and unto the Lamb for over and ever. Saw he not then in vision, every knee bow in the name of Jesus? Now when we confider the Aposlles and first disciples, the first churches, and those in after ages who followed the footsteps of the first flocks elected, chosen or predestinated, hereunto by Jesus CHRIST, according to the good pleasure of his will, to whom the mystery of his will is made known, according to the good pleafure which he hath purpofed in himself. Ephesians, i. 5. 9, We find it was that in the dispensation of the sulness of time, he might gather together in one, all things in Christ, verse 10, and 10 make all men see what is the sellowship of the mystery. (Think of the expression) Jesus Christ, fays Matthew, xi. 25, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wife and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes, even fo Father, for fo it seemed good in thy sight: 'Tis revealed to make all men see, not for those to whom it is revealed, to glory over their fel-R low low men, from whom it seems good in the fight of God, it should yet be hidden, by telling them they shall never see, "There are multitudes of them that belong to Satan's world, for whom Jesus neither prayed nor died? If he that hath mercy on whom he will, of his own will hath begotten them by the word of truth, that they should be a kind of first-fruits of his creatures, let them remember, that the whole harvest, even the latest part of it belongs to the same owner, and not be so ready to affert that a part belongs to his enemy, whom the Great Owner has cast out, and drawn all men unto himself. John will at an and drawn all men unto himself. John will at an

Now my beloved friend, let me ask myself and you a plain question, which, perhaps we have been often asked in our childhood: Who made you? Who preserves you? Who redeemed you? The answer will determine whose we are, and whom we should serve, for our Creator, Preserver, and Redeemer, is our Owner and Lord. To him we look to safeguard, and defend his own property, to provide for them, in sickness and health, to be with them in life and death; for even death itself cannot alienate his property; for living and dying, we are the Lord's. The Apostle in Romans viii. 38, says, I am persuaded, that neither death nor life, nor Angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. So that death can neither destroy the Divine propriety in us, nor his love to us. Glory be to his name.

THESE things being so, it is evident that obedience is due to our Rightful Master and LORD: And any man that acts under the Prince of darkness, the Prince of the power of the air, the Spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience, in opposition to Christ Jesus, must be self-condemned, as in rebellion to his Rightful Sovereign: But if the contrary were true, and any part of the world belong to Satan, as their rightful owner and LORD; they have to look to him for protection, and owe their obedience to him, and cannot be deemed rebels in their subjection to him; shocking consequences of attempting to prove that any part of mankind belong to Satan, see how it opens the slood-gates to all impiety and wickedness. And as we are every one of us under every possible obligation of obedience to him, so we are to consider ourselves members of his Great Family; and to love one another, as he has given commandment, and as we have opportunity, do good to all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith.

To what hath been faid, there arifes the following objections; namely, Jesus Christ fays, of the Jews, ye are not of my sheep, as I. said unto you. In answer, it may be faid, the Prophet Isaiah faith, all we like sheep, have gone astray: And the Apostle Peter, describing the disciples to whom he wrote, says, ye were as sheep going astray, but now are returned to the shepherd and bishop of your souls: But those Jews that rejected him, did not yetappear in that character, therefore, he saith, ye are not of my sheep; my sheep hear my voice, and they follow me; as if he had said, they believe me to be their shepherd; you are not of that character, and do not appear as my sheep; yet he saith in the same Chapter, other sheep I have that are not of this fold, in which expression he appears to describe those that are yet in unbelief, and do not appear in character as his sheep, are not yet brought into the fold. Them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice, and there shall be one fold and one shepherd. Mark the expression, I must, they shall, I must bring, they shall hear my voice.

Again Jesus Christ faith to the unbelieving Jews, that fought to kill him, John viii. 44, ye are of your father the Devil. In this passage, Jesus Christ appears to denominate them, by the influence they were then under, as when he called Peter Satan: when speaking under his influence, we read, Matthew xvi. 21, Jesus began to shew his disciples, how that he must go into Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priefts, and fcribes, and be killed, and be raifed again, the third day: Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, faying, that be far from thee, LORD: This shall not be unto thee: But he turned, and faid to Peter, get thee behind me Satan; take notice, it follows in the forementioned, John viii. 44, and the lust of your father ye will do, he was a murderer, and abode not in the truth, when he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own, for he is a liar and the father of it. As though he had faid, while you refuse to admit the truth, testified of me, you cherish a lie, and that lie thus cherished, prompts you to feek to kill me. Thus you appear in character as the children of the Devil, as being influenced by him, to ly, ing and murder. Agreeable to Ist of John iii. 8, he that committeth sin is of the Devil, influenced by him thereunto; but this notwithstanding, there is this confolation, that JESUS CHRIST prayed for those thus influenced; even for his crucifiers; Father forgive them, for they know not what they do. And John faith for this purpose, the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the Devil.

Again it is faid, 2d Thessalonians, i. 6, to the 10th, seeing it is a righteous thing with God, to recompence tribulation, to them that trouble you; and to you that are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven, in slaming fire, with his mighty Angels, taking vengeance of them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction, destruction, from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power. Hence the inquiry is, doth not this text militate with what has been faid. For answer, let it be considered, the LORD JESUS CHRIST shall be revealed in flaming fire, doth not that manifest his Deity? For our God, is a confuming fire. With febriety and reverence let it be confidered, what this everlafting confuming fire destroys: The foregoing words in Hebrews, xii. 28, 29, are: Wherefore, we receiving a kingdom that cannot be moved, let us hold fast the grace whereby we may serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear, for our God is a confuming fire: the grace whereby we may ferve God acceptably, is the grace that is in Christ IESUS. Every thing afide from this, offered as an attempt to ferve God acceptably, will not abide the fire, will be confumed and destroyed, agreeable to 1st Corinthians iii. from 11, to 16, for other foundation can no man lay, than that which is laid; which is JESUS CHRIST. Now if any man build upon this foundation, gold, filver, precious stones, wood, hav, stubble: Every man's work shall be made manifest, for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work; of what fort it is. If any man's work abide which he has built thereon, he shall receive reward. If any man's works shall be burnt, he shall suffer loss; but he himself shall be faved: Yet so, as by fire. Gold, silver, and precious stones will abide the fire, like the grace whereby we may ferve God acceptably; but wood, hay, stubble, is fuel of fire, and must be burnt up, agreeable to Isaiah ix. 5, where every battle of the warrior is contrasted with this: for every battle of the warrior is with confused noise, and garments rolled in blood; fometimes one prevailing, and fometimes the other; but it doth not destroy the enmity: But this shall be with burning fuel of fire (not burning and fuel fuel of fire: the and is supplied) for unto us a child is born. The prince of peace, and the government shall be on his shoulders.

Thus we fee what the flaming fire is to confume, when the LORD JESUS shall be revealed in slaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not Goo, and obey not the gospel of our LORD JESUS CHRIST, who shall be punished with the everlasting destruction, of all their hopes and prospects of standing in disobedience to the gospel: and of all the wood, hay, and stubble, that foolish buildershave built on the foundation: Of all the tares that entangle the wheat, and the chaff that cleaves to it, of every thing that is fuel of fire. Of every thing afide from the grace that is in Christ Jesus, the grace whereby we ferve God acceptably: While bleffed be his name, even the foolish builder himself shall be saved yet so as by fire. This view of taking vengeance appears agreeable to Isaiah xxxiv. 4, fay to them of a fearful heart, fear not, behold your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompence, he will come and fave you. And Pfalm xcviii. 8, thou wast a God that for gavest them, though thou tookest vengeance on their inventions, which last passage, I suppose, refers to those who came out of Egypt and did not enter into the earthly Canaan, for whom Moses prayed, Numbers xiv. 19, and was answered, I have pardoned according to thy word. * Who though they were cut off from entering into the earthly Canaan, were not cut off from pardoning mercy.

This brief view of these three texts, is brought to shew that no divine dispensations in reproof, or correction, dissolve the relation of the Father of the family of the whole creation: His name is unchangable, according to Mica iii. 6, For I thee LORD, I change not; therefore ye fons of Jacob are not con-

* Note. According to thy word, what word did Moses use, or what name did he pray in. See verses 17, 18, 19, according to the creatness of thy mercy, and as thou hast done from Egypt until now.

fumed. He is still the just God, and the Saviour, Father and REDEEMER is his name, from everlasting, and will remain so to everlasting. Therefore, see the prophet Isaiah, chap. xlii. 10, 11, 12, sing unto the LORD a new fong, his praise from the ends of the earth! Ye that go down to the fea, and all that is herein; the isles and the inhabitants thereof. Let the wilderness and the cities thereof, lift up their voice, the villages that Kedar doth inhabit: Let the inhabitants of the rock fing: Let them shout from the top of the mountains. Let them give glory to the LORD, and declare his praise in the islands. Let us look over the various expressions, and find any if we can, that are excluded from joining herein; and if there should still remain a doubt, let us turn to Pfalm xcviii. from 1, to 4, O fing unto the Lord a new fong, * for he hath done marvellous things: his right hand and his holy arm hath gotten him the victory. The LORD hath made known his falvation; his righteousness liath he openly shewed in the fight of the Heathen: He hath remembered his mercy and his truth towards the house of Israel; all the ends of the earth have feen the falvation of our God. (In his mercy and truth towards the house of Israel expressed in his promise to Abraham, all the ends of the earth are included) make a joyful noise unto the LORD, all the earth: Make a loud noise, and rejoice and fing praife. Let the prophet Isaiah, close the fubject, see chap, xliv. 22, 23, I have blotted out as a thick cloud thy transgressions, and as a cloud thy fins: Return unto me, for I have redeemed thee. Sing, O ye heavens; for the LORD hath done it: Shout ye lower parts of the earth: Break forth into finging, ye mountains, O forest, and every tree therein: For the LORD hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himfelf in Ifrael.

Several Objections against the Extent of the Gospel Salvation considered.

SECTION V.

Some Remarks on a Pamphlet, entitled, all Mem Will not be saved forever: Wrote by Samuel Mather, Paftor of a Church in American Boston, in answer to one, entitled, salvation for all Men; in which there is an endeavour to clear several passages of Scripture, which appear very much darkened by the Writer, and the several Authors referred to in that performance: By comparing Scripture with Scripture, or attending to the Scripture as its own interpreter. Addressed to Mr. Mather: Together with some Remark on the insidious Pamphlet (so called, by him.) To which is annexed four Inferences from the above Remarks.

To the law and to the testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no morning in them.—Prophet INAIAH.

For I determine to know nothing among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified; for though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh, for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God, to the pulling down of strong holds, casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalts itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Jesus Christ, which things also we speak, not in the words, that man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth, comparing spiritual things with spiritual.—Paul to the Corinthians.

To Mr. MATHER.

SIR,

As the subject before us is the common salvation, I take liberty to lay aside your addition, as that which no way belongs to the point in controversy, and consider myself as on a perfect level with you, (your (your fuperiority in years excepted, to which I mean ever to have a due regard) that I may write with that freedom and plainness, that becomes one, contending for a truth, which I Judge, of equal importance to all the descendants from apostate Adam. I remember to have heard this observation, that while we are attempting to pull down our neighbour's one idol, we are in danger of fetting up two of our own; but I hope I am not so ignorant of the pride of the human heart, and the devices of the grand adversary, as to think myself not equally liable with others engaged in controversal writings, to contend for victory and triumph, rather than truth; and of being influenced by the vanity of my carnal mind, rather than the meekness and gentleness of Christ. To him who is able to keep me from falling into the condemnation of the devil, I now commit myself, and proceed to the remarks proposed; may they be made with that meekness that becomes the man who fears God, loves his truth, doth not despise, but love his neighbour.

Notwithstanding the many objections I have against your performance, I must acknowledge there are some things in it that justly demands one's attention, in the premonition to the reader; your bringing up to view, Matthew vii, 13, 14, the exhortation to enter into the straight gate—and to beware of false prophets; was very agreeable as you present it to viewas coming from the great light of the world, the only and true way to God and happiness;" and it fixed my thoughts the more, as it is a passage of scripture, that has many years engaged me in the inquiring what is the true import of it, as not knowing but that I might profit by your interpretations thereof, which indeed did not appear satisfactory to my mind, more than any thing that I had been before acquainted with; therefore I fet myself to inquire into the meanng of those words of the LORD and SAVIOUR, with other parts of the divine word, by compairing scripture with scripture, as it is undoubtedly the best, and is its own interpreter.—When I consider Jesus CHRIST, as made under the law, and speaking as under the law to those that were also under it, and that it was his defign to manifest himself as the true Mesfiah, the antitype of what took place under that difpensation, I apprehend in this exhortation he has the fame thing in view, and speaks of himself as the antitype of what was faid of the gate in the Old Testament scriptures; perhaps in Ezekiel, chap. xliii. 4, and 4, 2, 3, and 45, 19, which passages were they well understood, perhaps would illustrate this matter; but I shall only take notice of what is faid in Psalm cxviii. 19, 20, where the Messiah is brought in, faying, open to me the gates of righteousness; I will go in to them and praise the LORD; this gate of the LORD, into which the righteous shall enter.—Here we have the mediator in virtue of his own righteousness, calling for the opening the gates of righteousness, which may be illustrated by John x. 2, he that entereth by the door is the shepherd of the sheep, and he enters the gate of righteousness as head of his body. By his own righteousness, his persect obedience to the law, and his full satisfaction to divine justice, in which the fa-ther is well pleased: So entering by him, is entering into the straight gate, into the narrow way, the only way leading to life; JESUS CHRIST admits no competitor, no rival with him; nothing to be made mention of but his righteousness and his only; not merely for the entrance into the gato; but all along the narrow way, and fo jealous is he of his honor, that he allows of no subjection to any other Lord;—this appears to me, the most likely meaning of the straight gate and narrow way, which it is manifest, there be but few that find; as it is natural for us all in some way or other, besides him, to go about to establish our own righteoufness righteousness and seek to ennter in thereby, which though many feek thus to enter, they never shall be able; for eminently he is the way, the truth and the life; whilst the body of the Jewish nation were seeking righteousness by the works of the law, the LORD lets them know the master of the house was about to rife up and thut the door of that dispensation; and when he shall have so done, their knocking and pleading, what they had been done, and the many advantages they had enjoyed, would not avail them, while they rejected the straight gate and narrow way, and they with their pleas utterly rejected; while he should fay to them, I know ye not, while others, i. e. the Gentiles, should come from the east and west, north and fouth, and fit down with the patriarchs, and thus it would appear that the great faviour according to the good pleasure of his will, was found of them that fought him not, thus Ifrael that followed after the law of rightcousness hath not attained to the law of righteousnels; wherefore, because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law; if the two passages that speak of the straight gate be con-sidered and compared, I think these thoughts must appear agreeable to the scope of them. Matt.vii.13,and Luke xiii. 13,24—and it must be acknowledged that it was not more the error of the people under the old dispensation by many deceitful ways, to be endeavour-ing to establish their own rightcousness, than it is for those who call themselves christians, and the uncertainty and perplexity which arises from that painful question, Whatlack I yet, will forever torment them, till the straight gate and narrow way is wide opened to them; wherefore, woe to them who pretend to another gate or way befide Jesus Christ, the true way; he warns against false prophets, that come in sheeps cloathing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves, and fays, by their fruits ye shall know them;

do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thiftles; the fruits by which Mr. Mather judges of them " is their own irregular, worldly and fenfual lives and conversations;" and the same fruits of their doctrine, but as this is not a fatisfactory discovery, because men of such lives and doctrines don't come in sheeps cloathing, but appear outwardly and inwardly alike, and there does not feem much danger of their deceiving; it may then be inquired, who are the false prophets? I answer, our LORD who hath warned us against them, has not left us without their distinguishing marks, by which to know them, therefore looking for the meaning of JESUS CHRIST, let us compare the passage with the apostle Peter, 2d epist, ii. chap. beginning who fays, there were false prophets among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable errors, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction, &c. Denying the Lord that bought them; as in the straight gate and narrow way: the gospel admits of no competitor, no rival with JESUS CHRIST, nothing to be made mention of but his righteousness, no subjection to any foreign lord; so the false teachers are those that privily bring in something besides, and cannot trust the finished work of Christ alone, as the exclusive ground of hope towards God, without fomething wrought in us, or done by us to recommend us to the divine favour; and though these teachers will with much plausible language speak honourable of Jesus Christ; yet will warn of the danger of holding his character and finished work as witnessed in his resurrection, as the fole foundation of hoping for divine mercy to eternal life; is not this privily denying the LORD that bought them.—Again, when the scriptures affert, that he gave himself a ransom for all; that he tasted death for every man; that he is the propitiation for the whole world:

world; that he will have all men to be faved, and come to the knowledge of the truth: (or even as some read, coming to the knowledge of the truth, and being saved) the love of Christ constrained the Apostle thus to judge; that if one died for all, then were all dead; and that he died for all, that they which live should not hence forth live to themselves, but unto him that died for them and rose again; that as sin reigned to death, even so might grace reign through righteousness to eternal life, by Jesus Christ our Lord. Is it not denying the Lord that bought them, to affert this cannot be scripture doctrine, because is leads to licentiousness; when the Apostle truly says, he died for all, that those that live should not henceforth live to themselves, but to him that died for them and rose again: and another Apostle tells us—we love him because he first loved us; and this is the love of God that we keep his commandments; let God be true, and every man a liar.

The doctrine of Christ leads to himself as the true vine, the cause of all fruitfulness; the root of the righteous that yieldeth fruit agreeable to Hosea xiv. 8, from me is thy fruit found;—and to John xv. beginning; as the branch cannot bear fruit except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in me;—I am the vine, ye are the branches, he that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit, for without me ye can do nothing. Now when obedience is urged from other motives, and to other ends by salse teachers, we may as well gather grapes of thorns, or sigs of thisses. I must here make a pause, that I may acknowledge the great satisfaction you gave me in your remarks upon Mr. White, the full testimony you have given to the doctrine of the great God and Saviour.

bottom-" but you fay there is one thing that follows, that is quite inexcufable;"-" mark fays, he who is this faviour, i. e. of all men; it is God, not Christ." " Let us look into the 1st of Timothy, 2. 3, and we shall see who is God our Saviour, and we shall see that in the Greek it runs, in the fight of the Saviour our God, and servants are enjoined to shew all good sidelity that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things, in Titus ii. 10, but it is in the Greek, that they may adorn the doctrine of the Saviour our God in all things; and how contrary is this to the interpretation of Mr. White, as well as other Arians. However, it is the truth as it is in Jesus the Saviour our God, and worthy of all acceptation." And in page 14, line 8 from the top, you fay, " if the words be justly translated, the sense will be, there is one God and one mediator of God and man, the man CHRIST JESUS, and so it fignifies that the mediator is both Gop and man; but we note, that the learned Bitterfield, has proposed this translation of the words, which it must be owned answers word for word to the Greek; the one God, the one who is alfo mediator of God and man, is the man Christ JESUS; fo then the man CHRIST JESUS, who is the mediator, is God as well as man, fo that he is God and man united." The above quotation is what strikes my mind with satisfaction, as the truth, as it is in Jesus the Saviour our God; and were I capacitated to recommend them to every ones confideration, I would do it; though I cannot, I dare not, for any other paragraph in your whole performance; and what follows immediately hereupon, is as shocking as that quotation was pleasing; to which you add, "but although this mediator has given himself a ransom for all; for it must be granted that he has given a sufficient ranfom and propitiation for all; and he will not cast abroad any, who penitently come to him as he requires, to gain and enjoy the benefit of it; yet it is no where faid, that they who will not come to him for life and happiness, shall enjoy the benefit of his ransom and propitiation;" the fum of which is, that though our Saviour be God, and has given himfelf a ranfom, a fufficient ranfom and propitiation for all, yet it depends upon the will of man, whether any shall enjoy the benefits of it; I would ask you, fir, Did you ever read Feremiah 31, 31, 34, and chap. 32, 38, 40, and chap. 33, 8, with the Hebrews 8, from 8 to the end, and Hebrews 10, 16, 17, 18? You feem, indeed, Sir, as if you thought the new covenant might be broken as the old one was; but it must be from your inattention to the Scriptures, I will be their God, and they shall be my people; I will cleanse them from all their iniquities whereby they have finned against me, and I will pardon all their iniquities whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me; the ground of which is the sufficiency of the ranfom and propitiation—I will forgive their iniquities and remember their fins no more; alluding to the facrifice of Christ, where the remission of them was, Hebrews 10, 17, 18, and the Apostle fays, Having therefore brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus-their boldness did not arise from their own repentance, their own good dispositions; but came in by the blood of Jesus.— Would it have been possible for you to have expressed yourself as you have done, if you had attended to Ifaiah 45,22,3,4, Look unto me and be ye faved all the ends of the earth, for I God and none elfe; I have fworn by myfelf, the word is gone out of my mouth in rightcoufness, and shall not return, that unto me every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall fwear, furely Shall fay, in the LORD have I righteousness and strength, to him shall come, and all that are incensed against him shall be ashamed; in the LORD shall all the seed of Israel be justified and shall glory. Sir.

144 OBJECTIONS TO THE EXTENT

Sir, if you could accept advice from one, but a few years younger than yourfelf, it would be to lay afide your numerous train of commentators and ancient fathers, (about five and twenty of which have been called in to your aid in your little piece) and leave the scriptures to speak for themselves; for instance, stippose we should lay aside Messrs. White, Austin, Beza and Grotius, upon 1st of Timothy, ii. 3, 4, and betake ourselves to the scriptures for to find the meaning. I exhort therefore that first of all, supplication; prayer, intercession, and giving of thanks, be made for all men, for kings and even all in authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life, in all godlines; and honesty; and the ground and reason upon which the Apoltle founds his exhortation is as follows; for this is good and acceptable in the fight of God our Saviour, who will have all men to be faved and come to the knowledge of the truth; for the one Gon, the one who is also mediator of God and man, (as you fay it is in the Greek) gave himself a ransom for all. Here we see the prayer of faith in the public assembly was to be made for all, according to the will of God, and to which the people of God could heartily fay, Amen—for there is ground of faith, in prayer for all men.

For kings, it is faid; Pfalm lxxii. 10, 11, the kings of Tarshish and the Isles shall bring presents; the kings of Sheba and Seba, shall offer gifts; yea, all kings shall fall down before him: All nations shall serve him. Pfalm cii. 15, So the heathen shall fear the name of the Lord, and all the kings of the earth thy glory. Pfalm cxxxviii. 4, All the kings of the earth shall praise thee, when they shall hear the words of thy mouth (or come to the knowledge of the truth)—but doth not the kings of the earth set themselves, and their rulers take council together, against the Lord and against his anointed? and have not many of them been the basest of men? Yes, verily: How then shall it be accomplished? because he has said it it in his word, and he has given himself a ransom for them; it is he that giveth falvation to kings; -hence there is ground to pray for kings, ground of faith in prayer for them, because it is good and acceptable in the fight of God our Saviour, who will have them to be laved ;-and is there not the same ground of faith in prayer for all men? Was there not an original bleffing pronounced upon them all in their head their first parents, in the day they were created? When God bleffed them; Genefis v. 2, And though the bleffing was forfeited, it was not revoked or recalled, for the gifts and callings of God are without repentance; if he gives commandment to bless it cannot be reversed, Numbers, xxiii. 19, God is not a man that he should lie, neither the son of man that he should repent; hath he said it, and shall he not do; or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good? behold! I have received to blefs, and he hath bleffed, and I cannot reverse it :- Therefore on the fall of our first patents the ferpent was curfed, and the way in which the pronounced bleffing flould take place, is revealed in the promised seed of the woman, and afterwards to Abraham—In thy feed shall all the nations of the earth be bleffed; and afterwards in the priesthood, facrifices, types and shadows of the Jewish dispensation—in the Prophets and in the Pfalms; concerning him who is mighty to fave, God over all, bleffed forever: When I confider that for the accomplishment of this great and comprehensive truth full of bleffing -God was manifest in the flesh, the one God, the mediator of God and man, the man Christ Jesus; the brightness of the divine glorg, and the express image of his person, in whom the fulness of the godhead dwelt: I inquire, did not the sulness of the human as well as the divine nature, dwell in him also? Is he not not the head of the whole human nature as extensive. ly as Adam was? I think it is impossible to conceive the Apostles meaning in Romans v. from 14 to the end, in any other light: Indeed, Sir, I am at a loss for what purpose you bring this passage into view in page 15, and filling a paragraph with it, and then saying nothing about it; let it be attended to with fobriety; and it will prove that CHRIST is the head of every man, in which Adam was a figure of him; and that as head of every man he gave himself a ranfom for all, therefore to pray for all men, is good and acceptable in the fight of God our faviour, who will have all men to be faved and come to the knowledge of the truth ;-but you fay, page 13, " May they expett to be brought to this faving knowledge in a land of darkness and misery; we have no warrant for thinking any fuch thing from the word of God." How shocking is this, where God hath said by his messenger, he will have all men to come to the knowledge of the truth;—it favours of the same impious infidelity that the people of ancient Ifrael were chargeable with; Pfalm lxxviii. 19, yea they fpake against God; they faid, can God prepare a table in the wilderness? verse 20, Can he give bread also; can he provide flesh for his people; hath he faid and shall he not do it? hath he spoken, and shall he not bring it to pass? The Lord gave the word, and great was the company of those that published it, for with God all things are possible.

Now as Christ was the head of every man, when he was lift up, he drew all men unto him; and fo when one died for all, then were all dead—Pleafe, fir, to look into the text in 1st of Cointhians, v. 14, in y ur Greek testament, and see if it is not there, if one

Is not Paul to be thus understood, when he says, I was crucified with Christ? Was it his privilege* only, or did Christ by the grace of God taste death for every man? Agreeing with 1st of John, ii. 2, And he is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but for the whole world; which is agreeable to his giving himself a ransom for all; and therefore, will have all men to be faved and come to the knowledge of the truth;—therefore, there is ground of faith in prayer for all men.

There is another text mentioned, (which though my mind has been much exercifed, and it may be, have not yet, that understanding of, as I could wish) your illustration thereof, not being fatisfactory upon it by any means. Let us look for the meaning of it by comparing it with other scriptures; -but first I would take leave to lay afide Meffrs. Foscph Nicol Scot, Samuel Clark and Lebnitz, with the other learned men mentioned.-2d. I would read both verses, the text is Ifaiah lxvi. 23, 24, And it shall come to pass from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another stall all flesh come to worship before me faith the Lord, and they shall go forth and look on the carcasses of the men that have transgreffed against me, for their worm Shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched, and they shall be an abhorring to all flesh. You mention Ifaiah Ixvi. 24, and fay, " Allowing the words of our Lord in Mark ix, to be taken from them, this interpreter does not appear to have observed, that just before this passage, it is written of the eight worshippers of God our faviour, and they shall go forth and look on the carcasses of themen that have transgressed against me." I suppose the eight worshippers to be an error of the press, putting eight for right; but if so, then the right worshippers are all slesh, for all flesh shall worship—but as this was not your design, here is an evident error, that when you appear to endeavour to correct another with the scripture, you do not cite the text as it stands.

^{*} It was Paul's privilege indeed to be acquainted with this grace, to enjoy the comfort of it, and to be influenced to fruitfulness by it; while it was not the divine good pleature to manifelt himself to the world; but John xvii. 21, 22, 23, informs us, There is a time coming, when the world fball know and believe that Jefus Christ is the fent of God; know and believe the same truth that the disciples know and helieved, verse 8, Which then, distinguished them from the world, and this is what Jefus had in view in praying for his immediate disciples, and those that should believe through their word.

3dly. Having read the text, would proceed to look for the meaning of it by comparing it with other scriptures; here we shall agree that all flesh have transgressed; and the text says, all slesh shall worship, and the carcasses of the transgressors shall be an abhoring to all slesh. Now the inquiry is, what is meant by the carcasses of the men that have transgressed; if we compare some other scripture prophesies, particularly Jeremiah xvi. 18, And first I will recompence their iniquity and their fin double, because they have defiled my land and filled mine inheritance with the carcasses of their detestable and abominable things. Ezekiel xliii. 7, 8, 9, And he faid unto me, fon of man, the place of my throne and the place of the foles of my feet where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel forever, and my holy name shall the house of Israel no more defile; they nor their kings by their whoredoms, nor by the carcasses of their kings in their high places, in their fitting their threshold by my threshold, and their post by my post; -they have even defiled my holy name by their abominations, wherefore I confumed them in mine anger; now let them put away their whoredom and the carcasses of their kings far from me, and I will dwell in the midst of them forever .- What is here called carcaffes, is their whoredom, their going aside from the straight and narrow way he had prescribed, and worshipping in ways of their own or others devifing, which is spiritual whoredom, and abomination

tton to him, and when these abominations so prevailed, as to be established by the kings, as the form of worship ordered to be observed as the religion of the kingdom, they are called the carcaffes of their kings, and as this profane worship was paid in high places, it was called the carcaffes of their kings, in their high places, and as it took the place of the worship of the true Gon, it is called their threshold, by my threshold, and their post, by my post, by which they profane his holy name;—Now as this is very evident, if we look over the history of the kingdoms of Judah and Ifrael, to a little attention would fhew that this is applicable to all flesh who have corrupted their way, all agreeing in going aftray; though every one turns to his own way, every one's own way in this view, is the carcase of his abomination, and when ever any are turned from idols, to the living God, their way of going aftray from him, becomes to them an abhorrence, because it is an abomination to the LORD, against which our God, who is a confuming fire, a jealous Gon, has declared, and will eternally manifest his difpleafure. When all flesh shall come to worship before the LORD, the carcasses of the men that have transgreffed, will be abhorrent to them.

I offer these my thoughts freely, if any one upon comparing these scriptures, shall give a more probable meaning of them, than I have advanced, I hope it will be candidly received, if I was to inquire into the meaning of what God our saviour says, when refering to this passage in the 9th of Mark, I should take notice of the occasion of his writing these words, in order to understand them, and if I mistake not, they are addressed to his immediate disciples, who had been disputing which should be greatest; from the 33d, to the end of the 37th verse; then in verse 38, John answered him (as not yet cured of this fondness for pre-eminence) saying, master we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and we forbad him, because he followed not us.—Now the whole from the 30th verse, to the end, appears addressed to the disciples upon the very subject in answer to John, who spake in behalf of himself, and his sellow disciples, master we saw one, Omitting what might be observed in the preceding verses, I shall take notice of the 43d verse, If thy hand, thy foot, thine eye offend thee, if you find a disposition to despise one of these little ones and to prefer yourselves above them, because your eyes have discovered truth and duty beyond them, or because your feet have carried you further in your master's cause than they are able to go, or because your hands have laboured therein, or have dealt out to the poor and necessitous beyond what they ever were, or are ever like to be able; this pride of heart is afide from the narrow way, it is taking a step into the broad way, it leads to destruction; in the narrow way, CHRIST is all, his wisdom guides, his power supplies, his feet was ever employed in going about doing good; were it not better you had no foot, nor hand, nor eye, to enter into life, halt or maimed, being wholly hopeless, helpless, and destitute in yourfelf, nothing to hope for but mere mercy as manifest in CHRIST JESUS; than having two feet, hands, and eyes, to abuse these gifts to the purposes of your own pride, and so to fall under the divine displeasure, who scorneth the scorner, resisteth the proud, and knoweth them afar off; for what can strike the mind of any person with more darkness, perplexity, and distress, than to have the apprehension that our God who is a confuming fire, a jealous God, is displeased with him.

When pride of heart and despising little ones, take place, the savor of the knowledge of Jesus Christ, the salt of the covenant of God, is lacking; for every one shall be salted with fire;—may not this receive illustration illustration from Matthew, iii. 11. He shall baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire—Is it not the fire of love, love to him and to the least of these little ones for his fake; and every facrifice shall be falted with falt, that you now offer; looking for pre-eminence one above another has no favor in it; it doth not favor of the knowledge of myfelf, and therefore it is not accepted; every facrifice shall be falted with falt-have falt in yourselves, and peace one with another. I am satisfied that these thoughts are agreeable to the scope of the passage; though being but an inquirer, am not able to comprehend the full meaning of them, or to speak of every sentence in them; but this feems evident that those things that Jesus Christ meant for the instruction and warning of his disciples, are now made use of as though they were only intended for the profane and openly vicious among mankind.

In taking notice of the title page, you fay, " Event the title page is not without its errors; it is this, falvation for all men illustrated and vindicated as a scripture doctrine; had the writer intended, and faid, falvation for all men revealed and offered in the gofpel; this would have paffed well enough for a fcripture doctrine; but that all men shall actually obtain falvation fooner or later, which is the intent and meaning of this writer, this cannot be fairly illustrated from the facred writings, nor can it be fairly and honestly vindicated as a scripture dostrine." Let us look of this a little: "Salvation for all men revealed a scripture doctrine;" then it is a truth, a revealed truth it could not be, if it were not an original, eternal truth, I think I need fay no more on this. "Salvation for all men ,e revealed and offered in the gospel;" that Jesus CHRIST or his falvation are offered in the gospel, is without any foundation in the scriptures, and conveys an idea very dishonourable to him, and very exalting to human pride; if any thing be offered to me I am at once in some respects upon a level with the offerer, and may receive or not as I please; the gospel rereals Jesus Christ and his falvation, and where the evidence of the truth strikes the conscience, the light discovers that however incensed against him, I have been, I must be entirely beholden to him for salvation, and must be subject to his authority, or fall under his displeasure, I cannot quit his dominions. Ads iv. 11, 12, The various passages, where the call and invitation of the gospel are spoken of, such as, took to me and be ye faved all the ends of the earth, come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden. and I will give you rest, calls the attention of the lost bewildered children of men that are grouping in the dark after falvation and rest, to the object where salvation and rest is to be found; for as Moses lift up the ferpent in the wilderness, so must the son of man be lift: ed up, that who foever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life; he is brought to view that whofoever believeth the truth concerning him that has his mind satisfied on divine evidence of the truth. testified of Christ and his salvation, should not perish, but have eternal life, the faith of the gospel is the belief of the truth, not the accepting of an offer: But were it that falvation was offered to all, it could not be fincere if it was not for all; but God fent not his fon into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be faved.

Sir, one thing more I would take notice of, is this, that as the title of your piece is, "All men will not be faved," the defign of your piece is to prove the title; and the reason is given in page 25, line 7, from the top—"On the other hand, it is plain and evident to all found and considerate minds, that the broaching of it (viz. the doctring of universal salvation) has a very dangerous tendency; and hence it should not be admitted admitted for a fcripture truth." When at the fame time you say, page 24, line 9 from the bottom, "Nor is there the least reason to believe, that their sufferings will make them the willing people of God, as the fufferings of punishment naturally excites an aversion in the Infferer, to the inflictor of the punishment; and as the fufferings and torments increase and go forward, the enmity and rage of those that endure them, proceed and encrease against their punisher." If this be true (as undoubtedly it is) it is easy to see the dreadful tendency of your endeavours, through your whole performance. Indeed, Sir, you have here out-done me, for I want words to express the inconsistency and impiety, appearing in the passages put together, especially when I take into view the last sentence—" And let all the human race, as we are required, ferve 7ehovah, our Lord and Judge, with fear and trembling before him, from consideration of his holiness and righteousness, his terrible majesty, and consummate truth and faithfulness; and let us scasonably repent and give glory to God in Christ Jesus that we may not be vexed in his fore and perpetual displeasure, but that we may he helded in him and much him completely. be bleffed in him and with him compleatly and forever? Such an affront upon the human race, at least on that part of them that will not be faved, according to your title (fuch an affront on Jehovah our LORD our God, and Judge, God our Saviour, is here offered, that repentance is here put in his place, as that which will go beyond the ranfom he paid, so that though all men will not be faved thereby, yet if they repent and give glory to God in Christ, they may) that though they will not be faved, they are called to repent, that they may. Was poor creatures ever more tantalized.

But that I may not indulge myself too far, I will sum up what I have to say in the language of scripture. You seem to me to appear here, as the Jews, who being ignorant of Goo's righteoufnefs, and going about to establish their own, have not submitted to the righteousness of God.

One would think both your extractor and your-felf, were better acquainted with the weapons that are carnal, and not mighty thro' God, by your opposing learned and pious men, to learned and pious men, and fitting imaginations, and high things, that exalt themselves against the knowledge of God; and had the extractor been led by the spirit of the truth, he would appear to vindicate, he would have seen himself upon a perfect level with his sellow-sinners, beholden to mere mercy with the viless, and not, in considence of his own superiority, set at nought a stranger, by ignorantly endeavouring to slur his doctrine, which he himself, as yet, appears unacquainted with: But he makes himself a preacher—is not made so as we are—he followeth not us.

When John in the name of the rest of the disciples, said to Jesus, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and we forbade him, because he followed us not, he knew they were set apart to their work by Jesus Christ himself, yet he was rebuked, and got the repeated warning against offences that we have taken notice of in the 9th of Mark, from the 43d.

How unbecoming then must it be for those who have any ground to question the truth of their being taught of God to know Jesus Christ, and of their being divinely called to preach him, to treat those that preach Jesus Christ in such a manner, because they followed not them.

It would become us whenever we find ourselves disposed to offend any of those little ones that believe in Jesus, or at least for whom he died, to attend soberly to the above-mentioned 9th of Mark, and when we come to understand and practice the exhortation in the 50th verse, have falt in yourselves, it will lead us to peace one with another.

I would

I would also take notice of the extractor's endeav. ouring to distinguish himself, by bringing in the state of unutterable mifery that many of the fons and daughters of Adam will pass through, before they are prepared for, and admitted to, the joys of God's prefence in heaven.

If he intends this as the legal penalty they are to fuffer for fin, he fets afide the atonement, and puts fufferings in its room, as you appear to put repentance in the place of the great propitiation, in your last paragraph; I think there is an obvious distinction between the punishment of fin and the punishment for fin, held up in the scriptures.

punishment FOR fin, it is thus:

Isaiah liii. 5, He was wounded FOR our transgressions, bruised FOR our iniquities. Verse 8, FOR the transgressions of my people, was he stricken.

Romans iv. 25, He was delivered FOR our offences.

Rom. v. 6, Christ died FOR the ungodly.

When they speak of the When they speak of the punishment OF fin, it is thus:

> Leviticus xxvi. 41, 43, If then their uncircumcifed hearts be humbled, and they accept the punishment OF their iniquities. And they shall accept the punishment OF their iniquities.

Lamentations iii. 39, Why doth a living man complain, a man for the punishment OF his fins. Chap iv. 6, For the punishment OF the iniquity of the daughter of my people is greater than the punishment OF the fin of Sodom.

The punishment for fin, is what the law demands of the transgressor, for the satisfaction of law and justice; the foul that finneth shall die, every man shall die for his iniquity. Now Jesus Christ being made under the law, was to redeem them that were under the law, he took the fullness of the human nature in its fallen state, and became its universal head in as extenfive a fense as the first Adam, Romans v. 14, to the end. The Prophet Isaiah says, All we like sheep have gone aftray-And the LORD laid on him the iniquity of us all—And he bear our fins in his own body to the tree. When he was lift up he drew all men unto him; fo that they were all confidered in him, and as the head of every man, the fword of justice awoke against the man, God's fellow, and he died for our offences; and by his death finished transgression and made an end of fin, and brought in everlafting righteoufness, and made full reconciliation for iniquity, which is abundantly witnessed in his resurrection, for he rose again for our justification; his resurrection is the evidence and affurance, that law and justice is fatisfied, that the father is well pleased for his righteoufness sake.

We may then adopt that language; he bore our griefs and carried our forrows; was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and by his stripes we are healed. Is not this the scripture view of punishment for fin?

The punishment of fin, is that which is inseparably connected with it, and consequent upon it: Darkness, distress, perplexity and misery, is ever attendant upon transgression, and forever follows upon it.

To illustrate my meaning, let us view any person led by his lusts, by the God of this world, to the grossest acts of abomination.

Suppose a man led by the lusts of the sless to fornication, then to hatred of the person seduced and abused by him; then to neglect and despise the fruit of his body, to take no care for its support, maintenance or education, unless by compulsion of the law. and then to wish it dead: Here we see the punishment of fin inseparably connected with it. Proverbs vi. 33, A wound and dishonor shall he get, and his reproach shall not be wiped away. There we fee the transgressor, not only bearing the contempt and scorn of the world, painful enough to a tender mind, but smarting under those wounds of the spirit which are intolerable in those horrors of mind, from the fearful apprehension of the displeasure of him, who has faid, fornicators shall not inherit the kingdom of God: and he has reason to fear his being among those that shall rife to shame and everlasting contempt. we fee femething of the punishment of fin, but it has nothing of the nature of the punishment for fin, it doth not fatisfy justice, it doth not make atonement. this man be relieved from the fear of everlasting punishment, it must be the knowledge of Christ, the lamb of God, who taketh away the fin of the world, who died for our offences, and role again for our justification; that must give him a living hope towards Goo; it is not his sufferings, his sense of guilt, his present or dreaded future misery, while he expects that justice will feek fatisfaction from him in his own person. But the knowledge of the truth concerning Jesus Curist, is his exclusive, all fufficient relief.

The same might be observed of pride, and a haugh. ty contempt of such as the scripture calls little ones; the scripture fays, Prov. 29, 23, A man's pride shall bring him low; fo low as that nothing can cheer and raife the spirit to consolation and peace, but the hope that arises from the abasement and humiliation of JEsus Christ;—and, indeed in the view we have of our own vileness, or the fins of others, we shall see that fin naturally, as well as by the righteous judgment of God, brings us low, and leads to darkness, confusion, perplexity perplexity and mifery; and it would be profitable for us all to reflect on our own ways of transgressing, and judge ourselves, to the humbling of the pride of our own uncircumcifed hearts, and except the punishment of our own iniquity, with our months stopped, guilty before God, nothing to encourage or give us hope, but the gospel report concerning Jesus Christ -this would be more decent, becoming and profitable, than to exercise ourselves about the theory of the eternal punishment of some vile men much more wicked than ourfelves; alas! where would fuch be found, if our consciences faithfully laid before us the aggravations of the guilt we are chargeable with; besides if we view the state a man is in before the knowledge of Jesus Christ, under the fearful apprehensions of fuffering in his own person, the demerit of his crimes, it is ever accompanied with hatred of Gov, till his true character which is love, is made manifest, and we love him, because he first loved us; and what atonement can that make for past offences.

I would further take notice, that the extractor appears as one ashamed of the doctrine of the common falvation as revealed in the scriptures, and therefore chose to venture an acknowledgment of it, in company with eminent divines; and fo not the authority of scripture testimony held up; but the scriptures as held and explained by eminent men, is by him brought to view, that our faith might stand in the wisdom of men, not in the word of God, and thus has cause of shame, especially that he should extract the one thing that you justly say is quite inexcusable-" and mark you, who is this Savior, it is God, not CHRIST." But why is this distinction, we know nothing of God, but as he manifests himself in Christ? When Philip said to Jesus, Lord shew us the Father and it sufficeth us; Fesus faith unto him, have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip?

Philip? He that hath feen me, hath feen the father; and how fayest thou, shew us the Father; believest thou not that I am in the Father and the Father in me; and no man knoweth the Son but the Father, neither knoweth any man the Father but the Son, and he to whomfoever the Son will, revealeth him; and Jesus Christ says, I have manifested thy name to the men which thou gavest me out of the world, and I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it, that the love wherewith thou hast loved me, may be in them, and I in them.

I do not conceive how men can have a fatisfactory apprehension that they worship one God, that make fuch distinctions, unless they mean to set aside Jesus CHRIST as the object of worship, if he be not God our Saviour; if God, not Christ is this Saviour; then JESUS CHRIST is not the object of worship; and if this be the real fentiment, I need no longer wonder to hear men pray to God, without any mention of the name of JESUS CHRIST, till they are one quarter or one third through their prayer, or in some instances, not till the close of their prayer: it is enough to draw forth the lamentation of Mary from the worshippers of Jesus, or them that call on that name: They have takenaway my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him. Jesus Christ says, John x. 9, I am the door, by me, if any man enter in he shall be saved, and go in and out, and find pasture. John xiv. 6, I am the way, and the truth, and the life, no man cometh to the father, but by me: But these seem to have access without the door; by some other way.

I know nothing of God, but as he reveals himself in Christ Jesus. If I view the creator, I must view him in Christ, for all things were created by him, and without him was not any thing made, that was made. If I view the preserver, I must view him in Christ; for by him all things consist, upholding all things by the word of his power. If I view the redeemer, the faviour, I must view him in Christ; for as much as ye were not redeemed, but by the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb, without blemish and without foot, God was in Christ reconciling the world. There is not any one thing in all the feriptures, that is mentioned as an attribute perfection or operation of Gon, but the same is manifest in CHRIST JESUS. If I had capacity and opportunity, this might be illustrated from all the works of Jesus Christ, when he was upon earth, and from his doctrines; for inflance, is it the peculiar prerogative of God to forgive fins, and to heal diseases, as attributed to him in Pfalm ciii. 3, This we see thus manifested in IESUS CHRIST. Matthew ix. 2d, to the 8th. Mark ii. From 5th to the 12th. Luke v. 18th, to the 25th, He faid, thy sins are forgiven thee: And to prove he had power on earth to forgive fins, he faith to the fick of the palfy: Arife, take up thy couch, and go into thy house, and he arose immediately, &c. For my part I cannot conceive of any relation that God stands in to us, as our God, but in Christ; if Jesus Christ bids his disciples when they pray, say, Our Father, it is as confidered in him, by whom we have the adoption of children; Jesus, after his refurrection, bid Mary Magdalen, in John xx. 17, Go to my brethren, and fay unto them, I afcend to my Father and your Father, and to my God and your God: And as the elder brother, not ashamed to call them brethren, he fays, in verse 21, Peace unto you, as Father hath fent me, fo fend I you. To add no more, the true character of God, or the character of the true God, is, Isaiah xlv. 21, I the Lord? and no God else beside me; a just God and a faviour. : none beside me. This is the character of Jesus Christ. Zechariah ix. 9, He is just and having falvation, Ifaiah lxiii. 1, I that speak in righteousness, mighty to fave: And no where else is the the just God and saviour made manifest; how then could one, prosessedly pleading for the salvation of all men, extract such a passage, as if he would plead for salvation, and set aside the saviour? But I am persuaded, that every one, that have their minds led into the spirit of the dostrine of universal salvation, will rejoice in that explanation of Isaiah vii. 14, which we have in Matthew i. 23, His name shall be called Emanuel, which being interpreted, is God with us.

I would add the quotation, from the 1st of Corinth. xv. from the 24th, to 25th verse, has rather excited my attention, than fatisfied my mind, from all that hath been faid in both pieces, by the various authors. Therefore as an inquirer, I would attend to the chapter, if perhaps, it may please him, from whom comes wildom and understanding, to enlighten my mind to understand a passage, which through my life has been among the things, hard to be understood; the first part from the beginning, to the 11th verse, is clear and plain, and holds forth the death and refurrection of Jesus Christ as the gospel of salvation, that all the apostles united in, that the first disciples believed, and by which they were faved with the evidences of it: From the 12th, to the end of the 19th verse, he inquires, if Christ be risen from the dead, how say some, there is no resurrection, and argues in a manner, that shews the union of Jesus Christ with the human nature, as members of his body;—If the dead rife not, then is Christ not raised-if the body rise not, then is not the head raised—and if Christ is not raifed, then is our preaching, and your faith vainand we false witnesses, and you in your sins. From verse 20th, he says, But now is Christ rifen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept: The first fruits is the joy, the glory, the foretaste, the earnest of the harvest and fanctified the whole. Since by man, death, by man, the refurrection from the dead; -For For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ, shall all be made alive. How came death by Adam? Because he was head and representative of his offspring, and they considered in him, and so universally in him all die: Even so in Christ, shall all be made alive, because he is head, as universally as Adam; and all are made alive as extensively, esse, it could not be even so. But every man in his own order, Christ the first fruits; the head, the first born among the many brethren, that mall things he might have the pre-eminence, the first begotten from the dead, the prince of the kings of the earth, unto him that loved us, &c. After that, they that are CHRIST's at his coming.

If we inquire who are they? it may be answered, there are many among those that are Christ's, who are called the first fruits unto God and the lamb, as we read in the Revelations, a kind of first fruits of his creatures, as James expresses it, such as have been fet apart by Jesus Christ according to the good pleasure of his will, to bear witness to his name, truth and ways before the world, to whom it hath been given in behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake; and the Apostle fays, if we fuffer we shall also reign with him. And we read of those that had not worshipped the beast, nor his image, nor received his mark in their forehead, nor in their hands, and they lived and reigned with CHRIST a thousand years. These are those spokeri of in Rev. xiv. Beginning the hundred forty and four thousand, that John beheld standing with the lamb on the mount Zion, who are expressly called the redeemed from among men, the first fruits unto God and the lamb. If the apostle is supposed to speak of them as they that are Christ's at his coming, yet not to the exclusion of those that are Christ's, according to other scripture texts, for certainly he knows how to fulfil his promifes to his faithful witnesses, without excluding cluding the rest of the purchased possession, for we find in the 6th verse of the xivth of Revelations, after the mention and description of the first fruits, the hundred forty and four thousand: Another angel fly through the midst of Heaven, having the everlasting Gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, even to every nation, and kindred and tongue and people, agreeable to what we read in the feventh chapter, where the hundred forty and four thousand that were fealed, are spoken of: We read in the 9th verse, after this I beheld, and lo a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations and kindred, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the lamb, cloathed with white robes and pfalms in their hands, and cried with a loud voice, faying, falvation, to our God, &c.

So then if we inquire who are Christ's in a more extensive sense, it may be answered, those the father gave him: The Jews, the Gentiles, the ends of the earth, Isaiah xlix. 5, 6, the heathen his inheritance, the utmost parts of the earth his possession. Those he came to save, John iii. 17, Those for whom he tasted death, Heb. ii. 9, Those for whom he gave himself a ransom, 1st of Tim, ii. 6, Those for whom he is the propitiation, John ii. 2.

They are Christ's. Yes, they are, even when de luded by fatan, and led away by their own lufts, to prodigality and disobedience: The prodigal was a son when dead and lost; he will not leave them there, if they are Christ's, they will rise in their order after him.

Then the end: What end? The end divine wifdom had in view, through the whole of fatan's reign as the god of this world: That Jesus Christ should destroy the works of the devil, and put down all rule, all authority and power; all the rule, authority and power in the kingdoms of this world, and in the hearts of men that have been in opposition to him, under the god of this world, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience: For he must reign till all his enemies be made his foot-stool.—The last enemy shall be destroyed—Death. Death is the last enemy, and it shall be destroyed; it is a conquered enemy—For he hath put all things under his feet. The Apostle in Hebrews ii. 8, says, Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him. But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the sufferings of death, crowned with glory and honour, that he, by the grace of God, should taste death for every man.

And when all this

And when all things shall be subdued unto him; when this shall take place, then shall the son also himfelf, be subject to him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all. By the Son, I underfland, the one new man; that Jesus Christ makes in himself of all nations, kindreds, people and tongues; that in Adam, their first head had been in a state of rebellion, and were never as one in subjection before; never unitedly called God, Father: It feems to be that state, that every creature groans and travels in pain together for; and not only they, but those that have the first fruits of the spirit, groan within themfelves, waiting for the adoption; viz. the redemption of our body. Romans viii. 23, When the whole body of which Christ is the head, are subject to him, are redeemed from fin and fatan; it is called the adoption. When Adam, who was the fon of GoD; called the fon of God in his relative capacity, as head of the human nature, turned prodigal with all the disobedience, shame, forrow, guilt and misery attendant thereupon, is recovered by the fecond Adam to favour, to fubjection, and to the adoption; the son himself is subject to him that put all things under him. It cannot mean Jesus Christ, confidered in himself; he ever did the things that pleased the Father, never was in a state of rebellion and disobedience; besides, Jesus Christ says, John x. 30, I and the Father are one; and when he says, all things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which did put all things under him: But the Son in the above sense, was never in subjection before.

That God may be all in all: While the rebellious fon plays the prodigal, captivated by Satan, his will, his various lufts, whether it be in a way of profaneness, uncleanness, religious pride, or covetousness, he is purfuing not the will of God in Christ lesus, concerning him, but appears to be pursuing his lusts as if they were his all; but when brought home to subjection, God is all in all: Not God as distinct from CHRIST, but GOD in CHRIST, EMANUEL, GOD with us, the just God and the Saviour, there is none else:-This view, is consistent with Jesus, the same yesterday, to day, and forever: And with what the Apostle in Heb. i. 10, 11, 12, quotes from Pfalm cii. 25, 26, 27, and applies to Jesus Christ: And thou Lord in the beginning, laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the work of thy hands. They shall perish; but thou remainest; and they shall wax old, as a garment; and as a vesture, shalt thou fold them up; and they shall be changed. But thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail.—And with Isaiah, ix. 6, and Luke i. 33, And he shall reign over the house of Israel for ever, And of his kingdom there shall be no end. To which the worshippers of the one, only living, and true God, manifest in Christ HEsus; will unitedly add their Amen, and here find a fource of eternal fecurity and joy.

But to draw to a close—1 would take notice of your last page; but indeed it puts me in mind of the repeated direction in the 8th of Ezekiel, Turn thee yet again; thou shalt see greater abominations. You fay, " If it be inquired, why God should continue any to be the instances of his extreme and perpetual vengeance." In reply you fay, "That the just sudge of all the earth, has an undoubted right to support the dignity of his government." And is not the dignity of his government effectually supported by the obedience and facrifice of Jesus Christ, who died for the ungodly. You add, " And not fuffer any contempt to be cast upon him, by the bold transgressors against his holy will and laws:—How is that to be prevented according to you? It is by making them examples of his extreme displeasure, and perpetual vengeance; that is, according to your own words, page 24, line 9th from the bottom, " As the fuffering of punishment naturally excites an aversion in the sufferer, to the inflictor of the punishment; and as the sufferings and torments increase, and go forward, the cumity and rage of those that undergo them, proceed and increase against their punisher." To put them in a state, where they will eternally be increasing their enmity and rage against God!-Indeed, Sir, I want words to express the horridness of your evil communications. What! A great part of the dominions of the King, the LORD of hosts, to be in eternal rebellion, in increasing enmity and rage against him, as the only way to prevent contempt to be cast upon him, by bold transgressors of his laws. I believe it is the divine defign, not to suffer any contempt to be cast upon him by the bold transgressors against his holy will and laws; but how? I shall endeavour from the prophet Isaiah, to shew unto you a more excellent way; he lets us know, that every knee shall bow to him.

Thus I believe the contempt of bold transgressors will cease, being brought to bow to him. See an example of a bold transgressor being thus brought to bow in Saul, of Tarsus, who went to bind all that call on that Name; but behold he prayeth—he calleth on the Name he perfecuted before: There can be no acceptable prayer but in that worthy name.

But I suppose it will be objected, that this bowing will be the bowing of an overcome victim of justice, in order to his confinement, trial and execution. In answer to this, I would beg your patience, till I again repeat the passage in the 45th of Isaiah, from the latter part of the 21st verse, just as it stands, without the italick word, supplied by the translators, and make fome observations upon them. Ithe Lord, and no God elfe beside me, the just God and the saviour, none beside me: Look unto me, and be ye faved, all the ends of the earth; for I God, and none elfe, I have fworn by myself—the word is gone out of my mouth in righteoufness, and shall not return that every knee shall bow,* and every tongue shall swear, furely shall say, in the Lord, have I righteousness and strength—unto him shall

* It is faid, that the true reading of the Apostles quotation of this text in Philippians ii. 10, is, that in the name of Jesus, not at the mane, (as it is faid) that is the true reading, and that it is the fame with Coloffians iii. 17. Do all in the name of the Lord Jefus. If you pleafe, you may look in your Greek Testament, and see it it is not so. Now when we consider this, it obviates the objection that has been railed, after this manner: Yes, every knee shall bow at the name of Jesus: One day they shall all be brought to own him Lord; to their extensis consustant the states are not formally to their eternal confusion, they shall bow at his name, as a poor criminal at the eterna confusion, they shall bow at his name, as a poor criminal at the name of the Judge, that is just going to pronounce a sentence of death, from which there is no appeal, nor escape.

But the text says, That in the name of Jesus, every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. As when a poor woman, who hath no riches, no worthness, nothing by which she can attain any thing in her own name, is married to a Prince, the is intitled to his name, his person, his riches, his honour, and now appearing in his name, she is regarded as him. So when in the name of Jesus, every knee shall bow, it is in this view, exactly similiar to the Prophet Isaiah, to which the Apostle here alludes; the very matter of what every tongue shall swear. is. Surely ludes; the very matter of what every tongue shall swear, is, Surely shall say, in the Lord have I rightcousness and strength, to him shall come; Surely shall say, the mind shall be as satisfied of this truth, as ever any person was of any thing to which he was called to swear; these things being so, we have the joint evidence of both Testaments to this truth, confirmed by the blood of the New Testament, by the death of the testator, and witness in his resurrection : So however dark, ignorant, miserable, we are in ourselves; when we come to the knowledge of Jesus Christ, to bow in his name, we may sing; Thou come, and all that are incenfed against him, shall be ashamed: In the Lord shall all the feed of Israel be justified, and shall glory.

I the Lord, and no God beside me; the just God, and the faviour, none beside me. The character of the true God, is the just God and the faviour, there is none else; no God beside; then certainly, the just God, that is not the faviour, is not the only, living and true Goo; but is such a one as is spoken of in verse 20, A graven image, a God that cannot fave:-No matter whether graven on wood, or in the imagination of those that pray unto a God that cannot fave; and as he is the fame yesterday, to day and forever, with whom there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning; confequently, whenever any come to the knowledge of him; they know the just Gon and the faviour, there is none else, no God beside; and this is his true character, whether we know it or not: -So then, when the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of Gon; as we are affured it shall, it will be with knowledge of the just God and the saviour.

Look unto me, and be ye faved, all the ends of the earth.—Here is a call or command, to all the ends of the earth, it is his pleasure that it should be so; and what the Lord pleaseth, that he doth: For I God, and none else, I have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth in rightcousness.—That unto me, every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall swear.—Then

Thou art our wisdom, Thou our guide, Thou art our righteousness; We're blind and guilty, thee besides, Thou art our holiness.

From flavery and bonds to fin, Thou us, alone can'ft free; From captive state, where we have been, Redemption we shall fee.

For he is made to us, of God, wisdom, righteousness, fanctification and redemption: He hath a name above every name, That in the name of Jesus, every knee shall boto, every tongue surely shall say; In the Lord hasten it, in his time.

follows the matter of the oath, that every tongue shall fwear, Surely shall fay, in the Lord have I righteoufnefs and strength: This being considered, will invalidate the objection; for if every tongue shall furely fay, in the LORD have I righteoufness and strength, they shall furely be faved by him, they shall have no lack of right-outness nor strength.-Unto him shall come—And furely the comers, are the true worshippers, they are so described, under the Old Testament dispensation, as Hebrews x. 1, Could never make the comers hereunto perfect; that is the worshippers under that dispensation, and under the New-Testament dispensation. In 1st of Peter, ii. 4, the worshippers are described by coming to Jesus Christ, who has promifed rest to the weary and heavy laden, on their coming to him, Matthew xi. 28, Coming is also synonymous to believing: He that cometh unto me, shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me, shall never thirst. So then, in this view, when it is said, unto him shall come, it intends they shall be worshippers of him, believing on his name.

And all that are incenfed against him, shall be assumed—Who have been incensed against him? Surely all, Isaiah liii. 3, He was not despised and rejected of men; He was despised, and we esteemed him not—Surely, you and I have been incensed against him, and it is high time for us to be assumed of the carcasses of our whoredoms and detestable things—it is time for us, with our sisters, Sodom, Samariah and Jerusalem, to be assumed and consounded, and never open our mouths any more, because of our shame; when he hath revealed himself in Christ, pacished towards us for all that we have done.

In the Lord shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory. By Israel I understand Jesus Christ. Who are his seed? Those that are blessed in him; that is all the nations of the earth. Gen. xxii. 18,—

Pfalm xxii. 27, All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord; and all the kindreds of the nations skall worship before thee; for the kingdom is the Lord's, and he the governor among the nations: A feed shall ferve him; it shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation; they shall come and declare his rightcoufness unto a people that shall be born, that he hath done. The chosen feed that in every age are brought to the knowledge of him, are a specimen, an earnest, the first fruits unto God and the lamb, and are chosen for this end, as we may see in the first of Ephefians, from the beginning to the 10th verse. Sec verse 5th, Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jefus Chrift, to himfelf, according to the good pleafure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace. Verse 9th, Having made known unto us the mystery of his will according to his good pleasure, which he hath purposed in himself; For this end, verse 10th, That in the dispensation of the fullness of times, he might gather together in one, all things in Christ, both which are in Heaven, and which are on earth in him.

This being the case, way is made to call upon "all the human race, as we are required, to serve Jehovah our Lord, our God and judge, with sear, and rejoice with trembling, and seasonably repent and give glory to God in Christ Jesus;" not as you express it, "that we may not be vexed with his sore and perpetual displeasure," but because he has blotted out, as a thick cloud, our transgressions, and as a cloud, our fins, we are called to return, for I have redeemed thee. Isaiah xliv. 22.

But I would further take notice of another particular you mention.

You fay, that the same epithet is used for the punishment of the wicked, as for the life of the righteous, and why must a two-sold meaning be given to it?" Page 22, line 14 from the top.

The

The reason I would offer, is in the words of the Apostle, Sin reigns to death, but grace reigns through right cousiness to eternal life by Jesus Christ, who say, because I live, ye shall live also: But death, which is the wages of sin, and the extent of its reign is to be destroyed and swallowed up in victory, when the Lord God, with his own benign hand shall wipe tears from all faces.

Now, Sir, keeping in view, James v, 19, 20, If any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him, let him knowthat he that converteth a finner from the error of his ways, shall fave a foul from death, and hide a multitude of fins. As the only way to this end, I have endeavoured faithfully to discover some of your errors, from the word of God; and as I have no design to offend you, I am not conscious of any thing to that end; I rest in the truth of that word, he that rebuketh a man, afterward shall find more favour than he that slatteresh with his tongue. So devoting my labour to the honor and glory of God, our Saviour, to whom be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever.—AMEN.

I fubscribe myself, your Servant, for Jesus sake, SHIPPIE TOWNSEND.

INFERENCES.

UPON reflecting on the truth contained in the foregoing letter, there arises to view these reflections, as resulting therefrom, viz. 1st, The obligations to love: 2dly, Submission; 3dly, Gratitude and obedience; and 4thly, Thanksgiving.

1st. Love to him who hath thus loved us. We love him because he first loved us: God is love, and he that

dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him; and this commandment have we from him, that he that loveth God, love his brother also; if God fo loved us, we ought to love one another. How? JESUS CHRIST told his disciples, John xiii. 34, that ye love one another as I have loved you: How doth he manifest and we perceive his love to us? John iii. 16. Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us, and we ought to lay down lives for the brethren; but whose hath this world's goods, and feeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?— When we see him, who was rich, for our sakes become poor, that we through his poverty, might be rich, it ought to excite us to lay afide prospects and endeavours to lay up treasure on earth, and to engage us to lay down these gay prospects of life, for the brethren to minister with liberality to them; to the necesfities of the poor that are always left with us, to prove the fincerity of our love: The poor ye have always with you; and whenfoever ye will, ye may do them good; and if our means are fmall, we ought to ply the greater diligence in our callings. For this very end, the gospel motives are, 1st of Thessalonians, iv. 11, 12, That ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and work with your own hands; that ye may walk honestly towards them that are without, and that ye may have lack of no man.—2d epistle, 3d ch. p. 11, 12, For we hear there are some which walk disorderly, working not at all; now fuch we command and exhort by our Lord Jesus Christ, that with quietness they work, and eat their own bread.—Ephesians iv. 28, But rather let him labour, working with his hands, the thing which is good, that he may have to give him that needeth. These are gospel motives.

Next the gospel examples. We have already hinted at the example of Jesus Christ, who went about about doing good, healing the fick, relieving the afflicted, feeding the hungry; came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and give his life a ranfom for many. We have the example of Paul, Alls xx. 34, Yea, your felves know that thefe hands have miniftered to my necessities, and to them that are with me. Then the example of Paul and his companions, 1st of The salonians, ii. 9, For ye remember, brethren, our lubour and travel; for lubouring night and day, becaufe we would not be chargeable to any of you, we preached unto you the gofpel of God. And his exhortation to the Ephefian elders, Alls xx. 35, I have shewed you all things, how that so labouring you ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jefus, how he faid it is more bleffed to give than to receive.

For shame let none under such obligations as divine love lays, with such examples, motives, precepts and exhortations, excuse themselves for want of ability, while they live in idleness; and let every one thus obligated, directed and exhorted, remember we are to love one another, saith Jesus, as I have loved you. His love sought us as well as saved us: Our duty then is to seek out the objects of distress, agreeable to the character of the virtuous woman, the spouse of Christ, Prov. xxxi. 20, She spreadeth out her hand to the poor,: Yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy.

Again: Jesus Christ loved us when enemies—Rom. v. 10. Then its our duty to love our enemies, and to do good to them that hate us, and pray for them that despitefully use us. Prov. xxiv. 21, If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink. Again: Jesus Christ having loved his own, which were in the world, needing the constant exercise of his love, in his care of and kindness to them, he loved them to the end. And would we love one another according to his rule, rule, as I have loved you, we must attend to the exhortation—Gal. vi. 9. 2d of Thess. iii. 13, But ye, brethren, be not weary in well doing.

2dly. Our obligations of submission to the will of God our Saviour in what he alots to us in his providence. When we consider God is love, and has a design of love in all his dispensations towards us; if in his providence, vanity is wrote on our outward estate we can't be brought so low, as he who was rich and became poor in love to us for our sakes; and it is ordered by his wisdom, who knows what is most needful to subdue our covetousness and sondness for a hope in this life, and our pride of living independent, &c.

If we imagine our honour is struck at, in some things, that we fay, flesh and blood cannot bear, we cannot be fo abased, as he, who being in the form of God, and thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but made himself of no reputation, was despifed and rejected, derided, blindfolded, buffetted, fpit upon, and fuffered ignominy, till he could fav, Pfalm 69, 20, Reproach hath broken my heart-yet he failed not, nor was discouraged, but went through his undertaking till he could fay, it is finished; and hath in his wifdom and love, ordered this very circumstance to subdue our pride, and teach us our honor lies in denying ourfelves and following him, in conformity to his example of meekness, who when he was reviled, reviled not again. And to his precepts, and to the precepts of his Apostles: But I fay unto you that ye refist not evil: but if any man smite thee on the one check turn to him the other also: Recompence to no man evil for evil; be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.

If he is pleased to bereave us of relations, even those that had the chief place in our affections, it is ordered in wisdom and love by him, who gave his own life a ranfom for us, and knows what we need to cure us of idolizing them, and to fliew us that he alone is our chief good—(a person who had repeatedly been bereaved, upon inquiring what have I done, that I must be so afflicted, had his mouth stopped by this reply-what have you not done?) for every Babel tower we build upon our children, to make us a name; every spreading gourd, that our imaginations bring up in a night, of which we are exceeding glad-our towering imaginations of future greatness, and worldly happiness in our relations, are known to him, and he fees when it isneceffary to take them from us; who corrects us for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness. If our troubles were greater than these, and we have living afflictions, and of long continuance in our relations, there is a history in Mark 5th, from 1st to the 19th, defigned for the consolation of such relations. home to thy friends, and tell them how great things Tesus hath done for thee, and had compossion on thee. He is the same, and has the same designs in view in his dispensations.

The fickness of Lazarus was for the glory of Gon, that the son of God might be glorified thereby-This man was born blind, that the works of Goo flould be made manifest in him; yea, a tribute of glory is raifing to him who cast out seven Devils from Mary Magdalen, and fet the adulteress free, with direction to go and fin no more. If I could paint out greater affliction than any I have mentioned, it must be the distressed case of poor prodigal children, from their sather's houses, ladened with guilt, oppressed with shame, afflicted with a stubborn loathness to return, pinched with hunger, going with reluctant steps towards the place where the fwine are fed, to look for relief from thence—Even this painting hath a bright fide, when we consider that in all the distress into which their wilful

wilful, shameful folly hath plunged them; there is a design of love in over-ruling all this misery, as a means to bring them to themselves and return them to their father's house: What, though they may not yet have come to this length, and are resolvedly guarding against this depth of distress and poverty, that hath been described; though they choose to continue in the way leading thereunto; there is this consolation, that every knee shall bow, and the lostiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of man shall be made low, and the Lord alone shall be exalted, and the idols he shall ut-

I would further fay, we are the property of our Creator, Preferver and Redeemer, and obliged to glorify him in our fpirits, and bodies, which are his; then furely, we are not our own, nor at our own difpofal, and it is our indifpenfible duty to keep the place he allots, and do what he bids us, till he calls us away. To suppose our lives at our own disposal, is a strong delusion to believe a lye; and as this delusion has obtained in the minds of those that have professed a high sense of honour and honesty in their dealings, among men, I would endeavour to shew, 1st. that it is the most contemptible sentiment that can be embraced—2d. it is the most knavish and dishonest, beyond high-way robbery—3dly. it is the most ungrateful:

1st. The most contemptible, not only as it tends to brand the name and memory of a man from age to age, among men, but first, as it is the evidence of murmuring and discontent with the allotments of a wise and kind providence, it is a delusion that has its rise from enmity to God.—2dly. As it tends to a foolish, fruitless attempt to run away from our rightful owner; I say, fruitless because it is impossible, for If I ascend unto heaven, thou art there: If I make my bed in hell, behold thou art there: If I say, the darkness shall cover me, even the night shall be light about me: yea, the darkness hideth not from thee, but the night shineth as the day; the darkness and the light both alike to thee—And what is more foolish, and contemptible than a runaway, who finally runs right into the hands of his master.

2dly. It is the most knavish, as it tends to an attempt to rob God at once of all his property that is in our power.

adly. It is the most ungrateful, as it is directly contrary to all that love, grace and mercy that is made manisost in the gospel, and to our duty consequent thereupon: For the grace of God, which bringeth salvation unto all men, hath appeared; teaching us, that denying ungodlines and wordly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world—looking for that blissed hope, even the glorious appearing of the Great God, even our Saviour Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself, a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

3dly. A fense of obligation to gratitude and obedience, results from the belief of this truth; whoever knows it, knows they are not their own, but bought with a price, and under undisputable, indispensable, eternal obligations, to glorify God in their spirit and bodies which are his. Then surely we ought always to keep our eye on his will, as our rule in all our actions, and look on our interest, our time, and all our talents as his, and at his service, and be frequently inquiring of ourselves, whether what we speak and do, is agreeable to the will of God in Christ Jesus, concerning us, agreeable to the exhortation, Colossans, iii. 17, Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Fesus. And when we act contrary thereto, we are guilty of base ingratitude.

What is worse than to call a man ungrateful? Yet, black as it is, we are guilty of it every time we hearken to the temptations of Satan, and walk after our own lusts. What can be conceived of, so ungrateful, as when the grace of God, that bringeth salvation to all men, hath appeared, instead of hearkening to what it teaches, men curse, and damn one another, bite and devour one another?

When he feeds and clothes us, the tendency of our hearts is, to make empty the foul of the hungry, and cause the drink of the thirsty to fail, devising wicked devices, with lying words, even when the needy speaketh right. Isaiah, xxxii. 6, 7. O our ingratitude! The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib; but my people doth not know, Ifrael doth nat confider. Isaiah, i. 3. But is there hope for us? Yes; 1st of John, iii. 5. And ye know that he was manifest to take away our fins. 1st of John, iii. 8. For this purpose the son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the Devil. Well may we cry out with the prophet Micah, vii. 18, 19. Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and paffeth by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his anger forever, because he delighteth in mercy: He will turn again, he will have compassion upon us: he will subdue our iniquities; and thou will cast all their sins into the depths of the sea. Yea, saith God, by the prophet Isaiah, chap. xliv. 22, I have blotted out as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and as a cloud thy firs, and calls upon us to return, for I have redeemed thee.

Surely then we are called, 4thly, to thanksgiving. Isaiah, xliv. 23. Sing, O ye heavens, for the Lord hath done it: Shout ye lower parts of the earth: Break forth into singing ye mountains, O forest, and every tree therein: For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and gloristed himself in Israel.

This

This is a subject that would lead our minds from eternity, to eternity, back to the fource and fountain of mercy, which the Apostle John speaks of, when he fays, God is love; and forward to the fruit of the purchase of Jesus Christ, the reward of his righteousness, to the hope laid up in heaven, to what eye hath not feen, nor ear hath heard, nor hath entered into the heart of man to conceive: For which all the dispensations of providence are over-ruled in the present life; which, if rightly understood, would lead the mind to an understanding of that exhortation to the disciples, 1st of Theffalonians, v. 19, In every thing give thanks, for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus, concerning you. But as this opens a large field, and I have already been more lengthy than I intended, I shall close with that short, comprehensive exhortation, we have in Pfalm, cxvii, O praise the Lord all ye nations; Praise him all ye people, for his merciful kindness is great towards us, and the truth of the Lord for ever: Praise ve the Lord.

To the Singing Choir, by whom I have been fever at times enter; ained as an hearer.

BELOVED YOUNG MEN,

WHEN we take a view of what we are in ourselves, in our fallen nature, and of the darkness, distress and misery we are exposed to from the dread apprehension of the execution of the curse of the law upon us as breakers of it, that we can have no gleam of hope from ourselves; and are enabled to see our deliverance in Christ Jesus, who took our nature into union with himself, as our head, our second Adam; and being made a curse for us, hath delivered us from the curse of the law, hath sought and saved our lost nature, and fent the glad tidings to every creature. So that though we have not any ground of hope in or from ourselves, the scriptures set before us the LORD [ESUS CHRIST; who is our hope, as abfolutely all-sufficient for us in our character as lost, destitute, ungodly sinners; for when we were without ftrength, Christ died for the ungodly. When this is understood as the only, and at the same time as the all-fufficient hope, how must our minds filled with gratitude burst forth into songs of praise! How calculated is it to ravish our hearts, to hear the gracious calls to all the earth, and every part of it, with such as go to fea, and all that are therein, to celebrate his praise. What a divine claim is hereby laid upon every one of us, to love him who first loved us, and to love one another as he hath given commandment. That a fense of these things may abide on our minds whenever we join to fing the praises of God, and that it may excite us steadily to aim at a conversation becoming the gospel, is the hearty wish of your very obliged friend, who prefents you the following view of a most august Singing-Choir.

Bosto n, May 10, 1793.

A VIEW

A UNIVERSAL CALL to THANKS-GIVING.

A univerfal Call to THANKSGIVING for the glad tidings of the GOSPEL thus evidenced and promulgated in a VIEW of a most MAGNIFICENT SINGING-CHOIR, presented to the SINGING SOCIETIES of every denomination, and to all lovers of Music.

Pfalm xlvii, 7, Sing ye praifes with understanding.
Solomon Song, ii. 12, The time of singing is come.
Pfalm exlviii. 11, 12, 13, Kings of the earth and all people, princes and all judges of the earth, both young men and maidens, old men undehildren—let them praife the name of the LORD.

HAVING been fundry times admitted to a Singing-Choir as a hearer, my thoughts extend beyond the bounds of that small fociety, to view a more extensive one. This turned my thoughts to the Psalms, to find the chief musician; and sinding above forty of them dedicated to the chief musician, I found in a translation printed in 1613, they were inscribed to him that excelleth.

A learned writer endeavours to show from the Hebrew words, that these Psalms are dedicated to Jesus Christ. It is he that excelleth, or is most excellent. O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth! In him I find the head, the director and preceptor of the Choir of musick I was looking after.

I would next endeavour to find of whom it is composed, and here it may be said none are to join therein but such as he calls; and all that he calls are made welcome, and cannot be excluded. Who then doth he call?

Answer. All the earth, Psalm, lxvi. 1, 4, Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all the earth, all the earth shall worship thee, and sing unto thee, they shall sing unto thy name. Psalm xcviii. 4. Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all the earth; make a loud noise, and rejoice and sing praise. Psalm c. 1, Make a joyful noise unto the Lord all ye lands. Come before his pre-

But not the earth alone, he calls Heaven and earth, faying, Pfalm lxix. 34, Let the Heavens and earth praife him. Ifaiah, xliv. 23, Sing, O heavens, for the Lord hath done it. Shout ye lower parts of the earth, break forth into finging ye mountains;* O forest, and every tree therein. So that all the earth is not only called, but lest any from their local fituation, or particular circumstances, should imagine themselves not included, it is said, Isaiah xlii. 10, 11, 12, Sing unto the Lord a new song, his praise to the end of the earth. Ye that go down to the sea, and all that is therein, the isles, and the inhabitants thereof. Let the wilderness and the cities thereof, the villages that Kedar doth inhabit. Let the inhabitants of the rock sing, let them shout from the top of the mountains, let them give glory to God, and declare his praise in the

When we view the various expressions here used, can we find one exception? And if all without exception are thus called upon to praise God for the redemption by Jesus Christ, included in the new song all are included in that redemption that Jesus hath obtained as the head of every man, who when he was lift up drew all men unto him; and tasted death

^{*} O forest, and every tree therein. The fruit trees are not mentioned; the forest trees are unfruitful. If the design of the Holy Spirit is to call on every destitute creature that hath no ground of encouragement in himself, to sing the praises of him who hath said, Hosea, xiv. 8, From me is thy fruit found. The grace appears how great. Which shews our obligations to shew forth his praise by our speech, our songs, and our whole conduct.

for every man. Dying even for the ungodly, and ri-fing again for our justification.

For we cannot suppose that any are called upon to praise God for what they are forever excluded from, without the most dishonourable thoughts of God that can be conceived of.

By these various expressions we see the Choir is composed of the heavens and earth, every part of earth, the ends, the lower parts, the mountains, the inhabitants of the rock, the wilderness, the islands, they that go to sea, and all that is therein: And the LORD at the head of them.

We may next inquire how the Choir is to be employed, or exercised under the direction of him that excelleth.

They are to make a joyful noise unto the Lord, fing, unto the Lord, a new song, and his praise to the end of the earth. Unto him and his praise; there it is to centre. They are to shout, to give glory to God, and declare his praise.

. The next inquiry, why they are to be thus exercifed?

We have the answer in Pfalm, xviii. 2, and Isaiah xliv. 22, The Lord hath made known his salvation, his righteousness hath he openly shewed in the sight of the heathen. I have blotted out as a thick cloud thy transgressions, and as a cloud thy sins. Return unto me, for I have redeemed thee.

Thus we see for what we are to rejoice, and fing praise, namely, the Lord's salvation, his righteousness, the blotting out of transgression, the work of redemption, which leads to the next inquiry.

What is the new fong?

Here it may be faid, the Pfalmist speaking of Christ in Pfalm xl. 3, brings him in saying, and he hath put a new fong into my mouth, praise unto our God. His being heard and brought up out of an horrible pit, and miry clay, and his feet fet on a rock, and his goings established, and the new song put in his mouth, is the soundation for the new song to be sung by the united Choir, who are sive times called upon to sing a new song to the Lord, brought to view in the new and living way, by the new covenant or Testament inforced by the death of the testator.

In Rev. v. 9, we read of the new fong that was fung by the four living Creatures, and four and twenty elders, to the Lamb, which was, thou art worthy, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, and hast made us to our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on earth. And Rev. xiv. 3, The hundred forty and four thousand sung, as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four living creatures, and the clders, and no man could learn that song, but the hundred forty four thousand which were redeemed from the earth.

Perhaps that part of the fong, "and hast made us to our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on earth," may be peculiar to those described as the fruits to God and the Lamb, who were redeemed out of every kindred and tongue, and people, and nation, when God visited the nations to take out of them a people for his name: The great multitude which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and tongues, which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb, cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth on the throne, even to the Lamb.

We have ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands of angels, saying with a loud voice, worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power and riches, and wisdom and strength, and honour and glory, and blessing. In Rev. v. 13, John saw the whole Choir joined in one. And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and fuch as are in the fea, and all that are in them, heard I, fay, bleffing and honour, and glory, and power, unto him that fitteth on the throne and to the Lamb for ever and ever.

Upon a review of the extent of the call to join herein, which of us but must wonder with great admiration? Am I included? What I, at the end of the earth, in the lowest part of it? What I, out of fight, on the top of the mountains? I, that am hid in the rock, I, that go to fea, with all that go with me, or were there before? And are we that dwell on the islands to declare his praise? Yes, in welcome, however unworthy in ourselves, by Jesus Christ we may offer the facrifice of praise continually; the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name. Only observe the call and the welcome expressed in the repetition of the word Let five times in the passages mentioned. Let the Heavens and the earth; let the wilderness, and the cities thereof; let the inhabitants of the rock fing; let them shout from the top of the mountains; let them give glory to God, and declare his praise in the islands. This let is a most efficacious word, removing every hindrance that is cast in the way, by fatan, fin, and law, which unite to object against finging the divine praises, by terrifying our consciencies, and representing God, who is love, to be irreconcilable hatred, by which we are shut up in hopeless despair; which causes us to think that these extensive expressions do not really mean what they say. But when the testimony is believed, I have blotted out as a thick cloud thy transgressions, and as a cloud thy fins. Return unto me, for I have redeemed thee; and we thus come to understand the ground of this efficacious let, all these hindrances are removed; and though we cannot find encourage.

ment in our own character, we find it in his. By him therefore let us offer the facrifice of praise continually; the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name. Constrained with all our hearts to fing the song of Moses and the Lamb, saying, great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints; who shall not fear thee and glorify thy name? Similar to the exhortation in the forementioned passage is Isaiah, let them give glory to God, and declare his praise in the islands.

It is undoubtedly incumbent on every member of this Universal Choir, to make it the study of his life, that his thoughts, his speech, and the whole tenor of his life be devoted to the glory of God. The inconfistency of a contrary conduct is so obvious, that it is hoped that every one whose mouth is employed in bleffing Gon, even the Father, will most determinately watch against profaning his name, or cursing men that are made after the fimilitude of God. Every one's mind and confcience must give in to the truth of what the apostle James says, my brethren, these things ought not fo to be. We praise him as the just God, and the Saviour. One fober thought will show the inconfistence of giving way to the temptation that would urge us at every fret, with a fellow-fervant, a child, or neighbour, to call on Gon, to damn them; as though the divine character was the destroyer, instead of the Saviour. His call is, look unto me, and be ye faved; his name is Father and Redeemer, from everlasting. How shocking the thought, how great the indignity offered, to call on him to do the work of him, whose name is the destroyer; damn our brother who is his offspring. What greater affront can we give our fellow-men, than to call on them for any thing contrary to their character and station, which would debase them below the character of men. The thought is enough to fill those of us with everlasting lasting shame and contempt of our own character and conduct, who have indulged such conversation; especially if believing him to be the Saviour, and may now sing his being pacified towards us, for all that we have done.

Remembering the words of the Apostle Paul, with them I now close, Ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your spirits and bodies which are Gon's.

UNIVERSAL PRAISE.

O HEAVENS, fing your highest praise, While we attend to hear; And let us see what numbers are Joined together there.

Ten thousand times ten thousand do
With voices loud proclaim;
Thousands of thousands join to sing
The Lamb's most worthy name.

Let earth exceed with higher praise Expressing of it thus:

The Lamb is worthy that was slain, For he was slain for us.

From earth, from the remotest ends, Come join to sing his praise;

And ye that occupy the fea,

Your voice together raise, From mountains' tops give ye a shout,

Shout from earth's lowest parts; Let those who dwell within the rock, Join here with all your hearts.

The wilderness and villages
Their voice together raise, While dwellers on the islands to

While dwellers on the islands too, With joy declare his praise.

Hark! and attend to unison. When all together join; From every part with all their heart, The music is divine. For every one in heav'n and earth, And those within the sea; And all therein, and under earth, Most cordially agree. In bleffing, honor, glory, power, With union; ceafing never; To him that fitteth on the throne, Even to the Lamb, for ever.

The ends of the earth. Ifa. xxiv. 16. From the utmost ends of the earth have I heard fongs, glory to the righteous.

 $m W_{HILE}$ thousands, thousands are employed Of the angelic host, In finging worthy is the Lamb, Sure men should praise thee most. For thou for guilty men was flain; Hast bought us with thy blood, From ev'ry nation, kingdom, tongue, Redeem'd us all to Gon. From ends of earth the most remote, Thy praise should ever sound; For to the utmost coasts thereof. Doth grace and love abound. While you lament your lonely state, Distant from fellow-men; Lo, Christ is there the source of joy, There praise him ever then. His love be ever on your mind, His highest praises sound; Your fatisfaction will increase, Your joy will thus abound.

And in their straits of ev'ry kind, They joy and finging know. The glory thus of Lebanon Is given unto it; Carmel and Sharon's excellence Doth then upon it fit. For they now fee with great delight The glory of the LORD; The excellence of our God Doth fongs of joy afford. For the passengers i'th' wilderness Behold he makes a way: Refreshing streams in deferts flow, Their parching thirst to lay. Both wilderness and cities too Are called to rejoice: And in the new fong take their part, Uniting heart and voice.

Kedar, with the lower parts of the earth.

KEDAR was the fon of Ishmael, who was anoutcast from his youth, yet beloved of his father Abraham, who prayed, O that Ishmael might live before thee; and was answered, I have heard thee, I have bleffed him. (If God bless, it cannot be reversed.) I will make of him a great nation; consequently that nation is blessed in Christ Jesus, according to the gospel preached to Abraham. Though Kedar signifies blackness or forrow, though Kedar inhabited villages, and dwelt in tents, and might be reckoned with the lower parts of the earth, yet the villages that Kedar doth inhabit, with the lower parts of the carth, are called upon to take their part in the new song.

YE

YE who in lower parts of earth,
By providence do dwell;
Redeemer's praises you are call'd
With shouting forth to tell.
Kedar though black and forrowful,
Is called to rejoice
In Christ, in whom all nations are Bles'd by Jehovah's voice.
Kedar, thy slocks shall gather'd be,
And with acceptance meet;
With joy then in Immanuel,
Come worship at his feet.
When earth and seas, and islands too,
Are called to rejoice,
And sing a new fong to the Lord,

Let Kedar join his voice.

From the top of the mountains, and the inhabitants of the rock. Ifa. xlii. 6, 7, 10, 11.

And from the mountains there's a shout,

And from the rock a song;

Why? what's the cause of music heard,

As thus we pass along?

Jesus, the people's covenant,

Light to the Gentile world;

The pris'ners from the prisons freed,

And darkness from them hurl'd.

When this is known, the new song's sung

O'er all the earth abroad;

Dwellers in mountains, and in rocks,

May join with one accord.

Proclaiming praise with joyful sound,

To his most worthy name;

Ascribing honor, glory, power,

To the redeeming Lamb.

The isles, and the inhabitants thereof.

YE who upon the islands dwell, Your thankful voices raise, To him who kindly says of you, Let them declare my praise.

LOOK in, look out, look round about, Where'er I turn mine eye, I foon defcry Profaneness, lewdness, pride and guilt; In yonder lane, the man profane, The woman very lewd; The standers by, most scornful proud. And though I flart, for my own part, And ftop, and look, and ftare, In looking in, I find the fin In all its parts is there. My filence broke, and thus I spoke, Profane he, and lewd she, With proud we, and guilty me, Must all agree, to bow the knee To Jesus, Lord of all. Both guilty, proud, lewd and profane, · Must kneel, and on him call: To think to stand in these is vain, Our loftiness must fall; For by himself he sware it shall. But prais'd be grace, that's found a place, Where he and she, and I and we, May fee his reconciled face. Though we have destroy'd ourselves, And fink in guilt and helpleffness, In midst of all our deep distress, Our help in him is found. So when we pray, we fure may fay, I in the Lord now find, Both perfect righteousness and strength, To ease and heal my troubled mind.

When this we fee, let's all agree, His highest praise to sound; Instead of hate, fill'd with debate, Let Love and Peace abound.

On the Crowing of a Cock.

As I lay musing on my bed, I heard the Cock crow twice; My finful shame of Jesus' name, Reproach'd me more than thrice. That he, for me, should bear the cross, And quite despise the shame; Who have before my fellow men, Refus'd to own his name.

Jews and Gentiles) the Kings of the earth, and the rulers, in the second Psalm; and the many, the increased multitude, in the third Psalm: He breaks forth in verse eighth, in an ascription of Salvation to the Lord: Thy blessing upon thy people.

SALVATION in thy counfels, LORD, Was perfect wifdom's plan; Defign'd in Jesus Christ for us, Before the world began. Salvation! O the pleafant found! Mine ears attend the voice; It comes thro' perfect righteousness, Then let my heart rejoice. Salvation wrought in Jesus' life, And finish'd when he died; And witness'd when he rose again. I know no hope beside. Salvation then belongs to him, Who wrought it out alone; 'Tis not our act or wish, but is Thy bleffing freely flown.

A Practical

A Practical Essay, designed for General Use---In Three Parts.

The Consequent Obligation of the Believers of the Gospel, A PRACTICAL ESSAY, Defigned for GENERAL Use, in Three Parts—Part I. Addressed to Husbands and Wives: Being an answer to two Inquiries, the 1st, "What is the most obvious meaning of the word Church, in the New Testament? The 2d, How doth MARRIAGE convey, as in a mystery, the Union of Christ and the Church? Improved to illustrate the honorable Relation, endeared Affection and mutual Duties of HUSBANDS and WIVES. With a Song on MAR-RIAGE. To which is added, an APPENDIX, with Some Thoughts suggested by the provisions of the Table.—Part II. Addressed to PARENTS: Being Some Thoughts on Education.—Part III. An Inquiry concerning the Case of Children, with an Exhortation to them.

"For the Grace of God, that bringeth Salvation, hath appeared to all men." Or, as in the former translation, "The Grace of God, that bringeth Salvation to all men, hath appeared, and Teaches us, that we should deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and that we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world." TITUS 11.12.

TO HUSBANDS AND WIVES.

THE words of the Apostle, in Ephesians v. 32, "this is a great mystery, but I speak concerning Christ and the church," naturally lead to two inquiries.

1st. What is the most obvious meaning of the word

2d How

2d. How doth the marriage union convey, as in a mystery, the union of Christ and the church?

For the most obvious meaning of the word church in the scriptures, we may look into the various texts where it is mentioned.

I do not recollect that the word is any where used in the Old Testament. The apostle, in Asts vii. 38, uses it for the Old Testament church, "this is he that was in the church in the wilderness with the Angel," &c. The words that are used in the Old Testament are assembly and congregation; Exodus xii. 6, "the whole assembly shall kill it in the evening," that is, the whole church of Israel, that were bound to keep the passover; Psalm xxii. 22, "In the midst of the congregation will I praise thee," which the Apostle, in Hebrews ii. 12, calls the church, "in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee."

In the New Testament, the first mentioned place I recollect, is Matthew xvi. 18, "upon this rock will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Upon this rock, the truth Peter had made confession of, "thou art the Christ, the son of the living God," is the rock on which the church is built, against which the gates, the power and policy of hell, shall not prevail.

Then in the xviiith of Matthew, 17, in which fo far as I understand, Jesus Christ is instructing his disciple's their duty in their particular connection, those believers of the apostles doctrine collected in the prosession of the name of Jesus, meeting together in one place, was called the church in that place. In Acts viii. 1, we read of the church which was at Jerusalem, the first church gathered by the apostles after the descent of the Holy Ghost; Acts xiii. 1, of the church at Antioch; Acts xx. 7, and Revelations ii. 1, of the church of Ephesus; Romans xvi. 3-5, and 1st of Corinthians, xvi. 19, we read read of the church in the house of Priscilla and Aquilla; in Colossians iv. 15, of the church in Nymphas's house, and of the church in Philemon's house, in the 2d verse of that epistle.

These particular churches, gathered by the apostle's doctrine, was governed by the will of Jesus Christ, as taught by them; and so far as that can be understood from the scriptures, are the rule by which particular churches of Christ are to be governed in all ages; but as that would be too lengthy to be here considered, must be passed over.

We read also of the church of the first born, written in heaven, Hebrews, xii. 23; of the church for which Christ gave himself, "that he might sanctify and cleanse it, by the washing of water through the word, that he might make it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it might be holy and without blemish." E-phesians v. 26, 27.

Hence I collect, 1st, That JESUS CHRIST is the foundation on whom the church is built.

2d. That those that were brought by the Apostolic doctrine concerning him, to believe that Jesus is the Christ, in the first ages of christianity, were by apostolic authority collected into distinct, particular churches, in such places where there were a sufficient number of believers for that purpose, and were called the church in that place. There is little said about the place of their meeting: I suppose any place that they could obtain, that was convenient for that purpose: The church of Troas met in an upper chamber; Als xx. 7, 8, the church of the Colossians in Philemon's house, as may be seen by comparing those two epistles.

These churches appeared as a representation of the universal church, in their holding the one truth, that Jesus Christ is the son of God, by which they were all gathered together, this being the fole foundation on which the universal church is built, and in their professed subjection to the authority of Jesus Christ, the head of the church, and head over all things for its good.

3dly. That there is a univerfal church, which will confift of all that are included in that glorious church for whom Jesus Christ gave himself; the full meaning of which is the general affembly and church of the first born, written in Heaven; Jesus Christ is the first born among the many brethren brought to glory. Pfalm lxxxix. 27, "I will make him my first born, higher than the kings of the earth;" Romans viii. 29, "the first born among many brethren;" Colossians i. 15," who is the first born of every creature," verse 18, " the first born from the dead." It is his church, the church of the first born; this church, this general affembly, called Pfalm evii. 32, " the affembly of the people, the congregation of the elders," Pfalm exi. 1, " the affembly of the upright, and the congregation," Pfalm clxix. 1, " the congregation of the faints," that are represented to John, Revelations v. 8, by the four living creatures and four and twenty elders, and chap. vii. 9, by a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations and kindred, and people and tongues, in addition to the hundred, forty and four thousand, that were sealed in the former part of the chapter, of all the tribes of Ifrael. The same sealed number are represented, in chap. xiv. 1, to 5, standing with the lamb on the mount Zin;" which did not exclude the preaching of the gospel to every nation and kindred and tongue and people, verse 6; which gospel or word shall not return void, but shall accomplish what he pleases, and shall profper in the thing whereunto he fends it.

Of this church every believer of the Apostles testimony, or every one that believeth that Jesus is the

Christ, according to Peter's confession, appears, upon the confession of this faith, to be a visible member. And it is the duty of every fuch person, who can find a particular church built on this foundation, and who in subjection to his authority, make the apostolic churches their rule as to order to join with them in the profession of his name, with them observing all things whatfoever he has commanded, walking together in love, as he hath given commandment; for this they are chosen and called to the faith of the gospel, 1st of Peter, ii. 9, Such are made use of for the ingathering of others, 1st of Thessalonians, i. 8, " for from you founded out the word of the LORD;" Ephefians i. 9, 10, having made known to us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleafure, which he hath proposed in himself, that in the dispensation of the fullness of times, he might gather together in one, all things in Christ, both which are in Heaven and which are on earth, in him." But the Ephesian church being chosen in him before the foundation of the world, to be holy and without blame before him in love, being predestinated to the adoption of children by JESUS CHRIST, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace, was not to the final exclusion or reprobation of others, but as a means made use of by him, that in the difpensation of the fullness of times, he might gather together all things in Christ; chap. ii. 7, "That in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindness towards us through CHRIST JESUS." The church then is to hold forth the word of life; the word is to found out from them. 44 As oft as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do shew forth the Lord's death till he come:" Thus they boldly bear his name, in opposition to earth and hell; shew that he is precious, and hold forth to the world, that there is no other name under heaven. given given among men, whereby they must be faved. Such are the means the great head of the church makes use of as he pleases, to the conviction of others: But be the confequences what they will, it is their duty to testify to his name, truth and ways, looking for the time when he will gather all the fruit of his purchase into one in himself; for every one for whom CHRIST died, shall certainly, in his time and way, come to the knowledge of him, and to partake in his falvation, as those who have been or are visible members of his church.—For doth not the scriptures shew the connexion of the human race with JESUS CHRIST, as their head, in as extensive a view as their connexion with the first Adam, see Romans v. 14, to the end; Hebrews ii. 9, "we fee Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the sufferings of death, crowned with glory and honour, that he by the grace of God, should taste death for every man." Ist of John, ii. 2, " he is the propitiation for our fins; and not for ours only, but for the whole world." And the apostle says, 2d of Corinthians, v. 14, to the end, "we thus judge, if one died for all, then all died; and he died for all, that they which live, should not henceforth live to themselves, but to him that died for them, and rose again." This appears to be the defign of the manifestation of this truth, or of persons being brought to the knowledge of the truth, and to life in Curist thereby, that they which live should not henceforth live to themselves, but to him that died for them, and role again; * verse 16, " wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh:" before they knew the Jews after the flesh, as those

^{*} The thought of this is enough to clothe with shame, as a garment, those who have hope of life by Jesus Christ, that this design has been no more attended to. For myself I can say, to me belongs shame and confusion of face. Praised be his name, to the Lord our God belongs mercies and forgiveness. Though we have rebelled against him, may the hope of forgiveness ever keep us from despair, and be a fresh spring of excitement to live to him him that died for us, and rose again.

"to whom pertained the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the fervice, and the promifes, whose were the fathers, and of whom concerning the sless Christ came, who is over all, God blessed forever. Amen."

The gospel was first published to them, beginning at Jerusalem; upon their rejecting it, the apostles are fent to the Gentiles, and are taught to call no man common or unclean; what God hath fanctified, call not thou common, which the apostle explains, Alts x. 28, "God hath shewed that I should call no man common or unclean." Why? Because Gon hath cleansed them; I view them cleansed, in that CHRIST died for all, and defigns in his time and way to bring them all to the knowledge of himself, and manifest his sanctifying and setting them apart for hindelf. This deftroys all diffinction between Jew and Centile, and not only as the nations of Jews and Gentiles, but of all men in every age, that on some account or other, besides the atonement, would prefume to be in, or near, or have a claim upon the divine favour before some of their fellow creatures.-Henceforth know we no man after the flesh, " yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more;" Jesus CHRIST was a minister of the circumcifion, was made under the law, fulfilled the righteousness of it, came to his own, fent his gospel first to the Jews; but when his death and refurrection were fully made manifest, and the promifes understood, that all the families of the earth were to be bleffed in him, that the Gentiles were to glorify God for mercy; when these things were made fully manifest, the apostle fays, "yea, though we have known CHRIST after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more; therefore if any man be in Christ a new creature, these old things are paffed away, behold all things are become new:" There

There is not a fragment of the old dispensation, or of the righteousness of our own, can have any admission as recommending us to the divine favour, "all things are become new, and all of God, who hath reconciled us to himself;" us, the apostles and first disciples, with the church of the Corinthians, to whom he wrote, who were together vifibly reconciled to himfelf by JESUS CHRIST, " and hath committed to us the word of reconcilation;" that is, the word of reconciliation committed to the apostles, " that God was in Christ reconciling the world to himfelf, not imputing their trespasses unto them." Now then, if God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himfelf; if he be the propitiation for the whole world; if he tafted death for every man; if Adam was a full figure of him that was to come, and the connection of the human race with JEsus CHRIST as their head, as extensive as their connection with the first Adam, then we must conceive that the church of the first born, the church for which CHRIST gave himself, will finally confist of all nations, kindreds, tongues and people; and in this view, the defign of mercy forbids calling any man common, and lays a fure foundation of univerfal love and benevolence to all the human race, and of faith in prayer for them; while those brought to believe that Jesus is the Christ, professing their faith in, and subjection to him, and appearing influenced thereby, are fubjects of that gospel charity, which the Apostle enjoins, when he fays, " have fervent charity among yourfelves," and which I think appears evidently diffinguishable from the universal benevolence due to the whole human race.

Thus from the most obvious meaning of the passages where the word church is used in scripture, these things have been collected. 1st, That JESUS CHRIST is the soundation on which the church is built. 2dly, A collection of believers professing his name, and in subjection to his authority, observing his laws, in any place, are a visible church there, or a visible representation of the universal church. 3dly, The universal church will finally have gathered into it, or be made up of all for whom Christ died.

The second inquiry is, How doth marriage convey, as in a mystery, the union of Christ and the church?

Attention to this inquiry will lead us to compare this passage in Ephesians, with the beginning of *Gene*s, and various other passages, one with another. In Gen sis i. 27, we read, "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him, male and female created he them." There appeared to be male and female created in the one man: The particular formation or building of the woman, was from man, of which we have the account, Genefis ii. 21, 22, " And the LORD GOD caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept *; and he took one of his ribs and closed up the slesh instead thereof; and the rib which the LORD GOD had taken from man, builded † he a woman, and brought her unto the man." Thus the woman " is of the man, and for the man," 1st of Corinthians, xi. 8, 9, So is the church, in every view, of and for Jesus Christ .-Romans xi, 36, " for of him, and to him, and through him, are all things." Coloffians i. 16. "all things were created by him and for him." As the woman was created in him, was of him and for him, fo they are called by one name, or she bears his name, Genesis v. 2, " male and semale created he them, and called their name Adam." When she was brought to him, he fays, " she shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man." She shall be called by a name derived from that of man. So the church is called by the same name with Jesus Christ; Fere-miah xxiii. 6, and xxxiii. 16, "he and she are called, the Lord our righteousness." Yet so as to be denominated from him, "he shall be called a Nazarene," they "the sect of the Nazarenes;" he is called Christians at Antioch;" names derived from him shewing, that without him they were nothing; that he is their all, and that in him they possess and enjoy all good.

We have the reason of this name, "This is now bone of my bone, and slesh of my slesh; she shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man." "So ought men lo love their wives as their own bodies; he that loveth his wife loveth himself, for no man ever yet hated his own slesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church, for we are members of his body, of his slesh, and of his bones." The circumstances of the church with Jesus Christ, are similar to that of Adam with his wife, bone and slesh. "For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and be joined to his wife, and they two shall be one slesh: This is a great mystery, but I speak concerning Christ and the church.

"This is a great mystery;" the mystery, that in marriage conveys the union of Christ and the church, appears herein: That the woman was created in the man, was united to him before she was distinctly builded a woman: When she was thus builded and brought to him, there appeared the visible marriage union; he said, "This is now bone of my bone, and sless of my sless." Therefore shall a man leave his sather and mother and cleave to his wife." Therefore because of the previous union that was the ground of it, "But I speak," says the Apostle, "Concerning Christ and the church," this holds forth the union between Christ and the church, prior to the visible marriage union which takes place upon any of the children of men, being brought to Jesus Christ; who fays, " For no man can come to me, except the Father which hath fent me, draw him."

In Romans xvi. 7, Andronicus and Junia, are spake of as in Christ before the Apostle, though they were together chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world. Thus is the whole church in CHRIST, in the most universal sense: He stands anfwering fully to the figure of him that was to come, the head of every man, as univerfally as Adam was. In this view there is a union or connection of head and members, even before the members actually appear. " And for this cause shall a man leave father and mother and cleave to his wife." Jesus CHRIST left father and mother in cleaving to his wife; 70hn xvi. 28, "I came forth of the father, and am come into the world." In Matthew xii. 47, to 50, and Mark iii. 32, to 35, His attention to what he had to do for his church, was not diverted by his mother.* Jesus took the churches circumstances as his own; took her debts upon himself; undertook to look after her when loft; and in pursuance of his undertaking, gave his life for her. "Even as Christ loved the church and gave himfelf for it," fhe wears his name, is complete in him, " who of God is made unto her wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption." It is visibly so with respect to those that are brought by the gospel to the knowledge of, faith in, and subjection to, him: It was really so in the purpose and purchase of Jesus Christ, before they came to the knowledge of him, and is really fo respecting those who yet know him not, live in unbelief and disobedience; for, says the Apostle, Hebrews ii. 8, "Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet; for in that he put all in subjection, he left nothing not put under him; but now we see not yet all things put under him: But we see Jesus for the sufferings of death crowned with glory and honor, that he, by the grace of God, should taste death for every man." And the prophet Isaiah gives us the divine oath for this, chap. xlv. 22, "Look unto me," (the just God and the Savior) "And be ye saved, all the ends of the earth, for I God and none else; I have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth in righteousness, and shall not return, that to me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear, surely shall say, in the Lord have I righteousness and strength, to him shall come;" which must make all that are incensed against him assamed.

The name of the visible church is, "The Lord our righteousness." All that are brought to him call him so, and are denominated by it, "tis the name whereby she shall be called." But we have the divine oath, that "every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall swear, surely shall say, in the Lord have I righteousness and strength." The time and manner is with him, who saith, "I will work, and who shall let it;" "Who will have all men to be saved and come to the knowledge of the truth; for there is one God, even one mediator, of God and man, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time."

In Christ Jesus, God manifest in the sless, we have the fullness of the divine nature, as is expressed in Hebrews i. 3, "Who being the brightness of glory and the express image of his person." Colossians ii. 9, "For in him dwelleth all the sullness of the godhead bodily;" who could say, "I and Father are one."

Is there not the fullness of the human nature also in him? The Apostle says, "we are members of his body, of his sless, and of his bones," Who does he mean? Doubtless the church, the apostless, the first disciples, the church of the Ephesians, who were vifibly fo, and those who should believe through their word, in every age; yea, all for whom Jesus Christ gave himself. The church, in the most extensive fense, are in this union, and are represented traveling together in pain, till the manifestation of it. Romans viii. 22, " For we know that the whole creation," it is the same word we have in Mark xvi. 15, "preach the gospel to every creature;" therefore every creature that the gospel is to be preached to, "groaneth and traveleth in pain together; and not only they, but we ourselves that have the first fruits, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, the redemption of our body." By the redemption of our body, I conceive the idea of the body of which Jefus is the head, as captivated, enflaved, fold, and groaning under this bondage; and those whose minds have been led to an understanding of redemption by Christ, though their minds are thereby relieved, yet groaning, waiting for the adoption, the redemption of the whole body.

Now that in Jesus Christ there is the fullness of the human nature, is it not evident from the consideration of Genefis v. 2, where we read of our first parents in their primitive state, " male and female created he them, and bleffed them, and called their name Adam, in the day they were created." Whom he bleffes are bleffed; for his gifts are without repentance. So when we have the account of their being feduced from their allegiance, brought under bondage, and led captive by fatan, the curse is denounced upon the ferpent, Genefis iii. 14; but the way opened through which the original bleffedness, pronounced in the day they were created, should be accomplished, verse 15, although they could not fin without smart and forrow; to the woman, I will greatly multiply thy forrow; in forrow fhalt thou bring forth children," &c.—to the man, " curfed is the ground for thy fake;

in forrow shalt thou eat it all the days of thy life,"&c. And as the way in which the original bleffing that was forfeited was to be restored and confirmed, was brought to view in the 15th verse; so it is repeated and illustrated in Gen. xii. 3, xviii. 18, xx. 18, and xxvi. 4, " In thy feed shall all the nations of the earth be bleffed." This the apostles call "preaching the gospel to Abraham," Galatians iii, 18, "Tis agreeable to Deuteronomy xxxii. 43, " rejoice, O ye nations, his people;" Pfalm lxxii. 11, " all nations shall serve him," verse 17, " all nations shall call him blessed;" Pfalm Ixxxii. 8, " arise O God, for thou shalt inherit all nations;" Pfalm ii. 8, " ask of me, and I will give the heathen thine inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth thy possession;" Pfalm lxxxvi. 9, "all nations shall come and worship before thee, and glorify thy name." Pfalm c. all the earth are called upon to make a joyful noise to the Lord, on account of his making us his people, and the sheep of his pasture: "Know ye." Who is to know? Answer, all the earth. Know ye that the LORD, he God, *he hath made us, and not we ourselves, his people and the sheep of his pasture. Agreeable to Pfalm exvii. "O praise the Lord." Who? All ye nations; praise him all ye people." Where are any exempted? "For his merciful kindness is great towards us." Towards who? All the earth, as extensive as the call to praise him.— " And the truth of the Lord forever; praise ye the LORD." His merciful kindness; how is the greatness of it made manifest, and how doth the truth of the LORD appear to endure forever, but in him, " who is the mercy and the truth," in him "in whom all nations are bleffed," in him " in whom thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob and the mercy to Abraham, which thou hast sworn to our fathers in the days of old.

Now this bleffedness of the nations, of which these passages speak, was to have its accomplishment in the feed of Abraham. " In thy feed;" which is CHRIST. Galatians iii. 6. Now if all the nations of the earth are included in the bleffedness in Christ Jesus, they are in him as their head; there is the fullness of the human nature in CHRIST JESUS; fo they were confidered in him before the evidences of it appeared in or upon any of them; and because of this union, he is engaged in all he doth for them, to bring them to himself. "This is now bone of my bone, and slesh of my flesh; she shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man." " Therefore," because of the previous union, "fhall a man leave his father and mother and cleave to his wife, and they shall be one flesh: This is a great mystery, but," fays the apostle, "I speak concerning CHRIST and the church." "This is now bone of my bone, and flesh of my slesh: she shall be called woman;" she shall wear my name, come into a visible connection and intercourse with me, be interested in what I am and have, &c. So in consequence of this union shall the church, in the most extensive sense, even every member, from all the ends of the earth, be brought to Jesus Christ, in his times, who is the bleffed and only potentate; shall bear his name; be called by the name which the mouth of the Lord doth name: 'Tis by his authority we are affured, fhe shall be called "the Lord our righteousness." These things shall be made manifest when Pfalm xlv. 15. 15, and Pfalm lxxii. from the 9th to the end of the 15th verse, have their accomplishment.

Against what has been brought to view, particularly in the several quotations from the Psalms, arises this objection, that the apostle appears to apply such passages to those gathered by the gospel from among the Gentiles; not to the Gentiles, in so extensive a manner manner, as is expressed in the Psalms; and so those passages are to be understood in the limited sense used by the apostles, who direct their epistles to the believers of their testimony, collected from among the Gentiles.

To this it may be answered, that the epistles of the apostles were wrote to visible churches, and visible believers, for their express direction in their conduct towards God, and one another, and are left on record for the same end, to all believers in all ages, as none but such as are led to the knowledge of Jesus Christ, were capable of understanding the grace there made manifest, and the obligations thence arising to glorify him in their spirits and bodies which are his; but yet it is evident they were designed as a means of communication of the knowledge of Christ to mankind in general. See Ephesians i. 9, 10.

to mankind in general. See Ephefians i. 9, 10.

Ephefians ii. 4 to 7, "But God who is rich in mercy, for his great love, wherewith he hath loved us, even when we were dead in fins, hath quickened us together with Christ, and hath raifed us up together, and made us fit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." For what end? "That in the ages to come, he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace in kindness towards us, through Christ JESUS." And in the 3d chapter, from the 2d verse, we have the end of the dispensation of grace, given to the apostle towards the Ephesians, " how that by revelation he made known unto me the mystery, which in other ages was not made known unto the fons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the spirit, that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise, in Christ by the gospel unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ, and to make ALL MEN, fee what the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world, hath been hid in God, who created all things by JESUS CHRIST."

God, who created all things by Jesus Christ."

Here we have glad tidings to All MEN; to ages to come; to all things in Heaven and earth, in what divine grace did for, and among the apostles and Ephesians. The 5th Romans, from the 14th to the end, and 1st of Cor nthians, v. 15. 19, shew the same thing, but have been already mentioned and need not be repeated.

Thus the fecond inquiry has been attended to, viz. How doth marriage convey as in a mystery, the union of Christ and the church?

From what has been brought to view, we fee the obligations those are under, that are brought to the faith of the gospel, to collect together in the profession of his name, and subjection to his authority, after the example of the first disciples in the first churches, to the same end, which will, I conceive, be the duty of the disciples till the second coming of Jesus Christ, or till all things are put under his feet; till which time, he will use the same means to the same end.—

Much might be said here, "but except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it."

And not only their obligations to stand forth in the profession of his name, observing the order of the gospel, as practised by the first churches, but their obligations to an attention to all the precepts of the new testament, concerning their conduct in every relation they sustain; particularly that of husband and wise, which the apostle has in view in the passage before us, beginning with the wives, verse 22, "Wives submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord." Col. iii. 18, "as it is fit in the Lord." Titus ii. 4, "That they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children, discrete, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their husbands, that the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed." Ift of Peter, iii. to the end of the 6th verse, "Likewise ye wives in subjection to your own husbands; that if any obey not the word, they also may without the word, be won by the conversation of the wives, while they behold your chaste conversation, coupled with fear."

In these passages, the duty of the wives is made plain; inculcated and enforced from the obligations to JESUS CHRIST, "as unto the LORD, as it is fit in the LORD;" which shews the duty of the wife to flow from the authority of Jesus Christ, and to be directed by his will: So that in all her attention and fubmission to her husband, the authority and directions of Jesus Christ are ever to be kept in view, as the first motive the apostle uses, and truly it is no barren one, but full of excitation. The believing wife may thus think with herfelf, While I am attending my duty to my husband, the ever bleffed Jesus, in his adorable condescension, is pleased to accept me as attending to him: Therefore, as to the LORD, will be mufical in her mind, and excite to chearfulness therein. The second motive, if it be a distinct one, is, "that the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed." Titus ii. 4, 5, "That they," the aged women, " may teach the young women to be fober, to love their hulbands, to love their children."-Wives are not only taught fubmiffion to their husbands from a fense of duty, but "to love their husbands, to love their children;" which will excite them, from inward affection, ever to be fludying and purfuing their comfort and happiness, while their own is increased by the comfort of love: And when to the motive, "as unto the Lord," is joined the "love of hulbands and children, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed," will follow; will follow, follow, did I fay! is it not inseparably interwoven? O my lesus! is thy name and doctrine concerned in my love and duty to my husband and children; how happy hast thou made me, in making love, which is my happiness, my duty; and bringing thy name and doctrine to my continual view, may it never be blasphemed by my evil conduct towards my husband and children; methought I moved in a low fphere in attending daily to them, but now I find I am exalted to wait on my LORD; he has been pleafed to commit his name and doctrine to my daily care: Angels have not higher employment than is appointed me, in the very place where he hath placed me; and when I dwell in love, I dwell in him. The third motive, "that if any obey not the word, they also may, without the word, be won by the conversation of the wives, while they behold your chaste converfation with fear," must also be a powerful one, in the minds of believing wives, to an attention to the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the fight of Gon of great price. If by the hidden man of the heart, we understand Christ dwelling in the hearts of believers by faith, we are led to that which is not corruptible, and to the pattern, fountain, and foundation of a meek and quiet spirit, which indeed, in the fight of God, is of great price. In Matthew xi. 29, Jesus Christ fays, "Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly, and ye shall find rest to your souls." The believing wives understand Jesus Christ to be the green olive-tree, from whence this fruit is found. So did their examples in the old times; "The holy women who trusted in God, and thus adorned themselves, being in subjection to their own husbands. even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him Lord. whose daughters ye are as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement." What doth that import?

import? So long as you are influenced by your duty to Jesus Christ, to attend your duty as wives, you appear to be the children, the followers, or imitators of the holy women who trusted in GoD; to belong to that family; and need not be afraid with any amazement; for if our hearts condemn us not, then have we confidence towards God. But if instead of attention to the directions of the Apostles of Christ, there is giving heed to temptation, not contented in " modest apparel, with shame-facedness, and sobricty," but giving way to a prevailing folicitude for "the outward adorning of plating the hair," and of "wearing of gold, pearls and costly array," you will appear to be under the influence of your lusts; to be walking according to the course of this world; according to the prince of the power of the air, the spiritthat now worketh in the children of disobedience; and the tendency of it will be to darkness and sear with amazement, more especially at times when there is most need of consolation. It certainly doth not become women professing godliness, to be thus adorned; but it becometh them to be adorned with good works. Certainly there appears ability for the good works of the gospel; such as feeding the hungry and cloathing the naked, at least as far as the price of the gold, pearls and costly array beyond modest apparel, that they wear; when the wearing it can be of no use, except evidencing their inattention to the scripture, which prohibits their wearing it; or what is worse, opposition to them. In which case they may be advised to read James v. 1, 2, 3, with fober attention, which will shew such a conduct to tend to fear with amazement; which christian women ought to turn from; to walk in love to Jesus Christ, to their husbands and children, according to the directions of the apostles of Jesus Christ, which tends to cast out the fear that has torment. E e Verle

Verse 24. "Therefore, as the church is subject to CHRIST, folet the wives to their own husbands, in every thing." Which shews the duty of wives to submit to and feek to pleafe their husbands, in every thing that is not contrary to the mind of Jesus Christ, "as it is fit in the LORD." When the wife makes this the rule of her conduct, she pursues her own happiness in connection with her hufband's. When his will is contrary to the mind of CHRIST, or would wish his wife to do that she is afraid will incur his displeasure, fhe is then only to point out her reasons from the word, and to perfevere in attention to the will of IEsus Christ. But when fhe fets up her own will in opposition to her hulband, and glories in a victory over him, however she may feem to gratify herfelf, fhe will find it leads to future fhame, and fear with amazement.

We have also, in the passage before us, verse 25, " Husbands love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it," &c. Verse 28, 29, and 30, "So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies; he that loveth his wife loveth himself: For no man ever yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the LORD the church. For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones." From this pasfage, together with Colossians iii. 19, and 1st of Peter, iii. 7, we may colled the mind of Jesus Christ, as fignified by the apostles, concerning the duty of huf-'Tis comprehended in love. "Husbands love your wives." Love is the fulfilling of the law, and the rule or measure of the love of the husband to the wife, is, "as CHRIST loved the church, and gave himself for it, that he might fanctify and cleanse it, with the washing of water by the word; that he might make* it to himself a glorious church, not having fpot or wrinkle, or any fuch thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish."

"JESUS CHRIST loved the church, and gave himfelf for it." "Hulbands love your wives, even as CHRIST loved the church." Did JESUS CHRIST give himself; and am I, or have I any thing that is for the comfort and happiness of my wife, that thro' covetousness or felf-will I may withhold from her, and yet manifest I love her as Christ loved the church? Jesus Christ paid the church's debt, redeemed her from captivity, directed her in her duty, fupplied her wants, knows how to have compaffion on the ignorant, and them that are without of the way: He took her circumstances of want, distress and misery upon himfelf, and communicates of his fulness unto her; is of God made to us wisdom, righteousnefs, fanctification and redemption;" and is in all an example to direct the love of the husband to his wife; that he attend to all her wants, diffresses and mileries; to relieve and fupply them according to his measure. And when any thing appears in the conduct of the wife inconfistent with her duty, as the husband is the head of the wife, he is to point out her duty from the word. "JESUS CHRIST gave himfelf for the church, that he might fanctify and cleanse it, with the washing of water by the word." If the word be made use of in the exercise of love, the tendency and efficacy would be to heal, as it would always bring Christ's authority to the view of the wife, and keep his example in the view of the hufband, and guard against the evil cautioned against in Col. iii. 19, "hufbands love your wives, and be not bitter against them." Remember that bitterness always springs from the root of bitterness; "the root that beareth gall and wormwood, from the turning away from the root of the rightcous, that beareth fruit." Yet so great is the deceitfulness of our own hearts.

hearts, and so imperceptible the prevalence of the enemy, transformed into an angel of light, that this bitterness may appear to spring from a fort of religious ignorance, or a mistaken religious zeal.

When we read, "That the husband is the head of the wife," and that it is his duty to rife well his own house, a strange notion of headship and rule may take place, that upon every flight occasion there is a bitter resolution; I will be master of my own house; I will be minded; it is my duty, &c. That instead of viewing the head as the feat of wisdom, care and tenderness, it is viewed as the feat of domineering; as if its only care was to fee, that my will may be done; and perhaps for no fault, only that a particular humour is not pleased, there will be a stamp on the floor, enough to make all ring again, and the hufband hold himself not guilty, from a religious zeal to be minded to rule his own house. If I find out the man, can he be offended if I should inquire, Dear Sir, where find you this in the example of Jesus CHRIST?

From this cause often proceeds such discontent with that which the industrious wife has endeavored to prepare, with as much agreeableness to her hufband, as the means he had put into her hands was capable of; that he will despise both it and her; and instead of coming with gratitude, thanksgiving and fatisfaction to his meals, as that which shews his increasing and perpetual obligation to eat, drink and do all to the glory of God, there will be bitter uneafiness through the whole of the time calculated for fainily enjoyment and happiness. If there be such a man, shall I put him in mind, that when Jesus fed the multitude with barley bread and fish, he gave thanks; and when Paul, and those with him on board the ship, were about to eat, "he took the bread and gave thanks to God in presence of them all, and when when he had broken, he began to eat; then were they all of good chear, and they also took meat."-Dear Sir, thankfgiving to God, and all of good chear, becomes a Christian's Table, which the head of the family is to lead in: * Every thing contrary comes from the root of bitterness, however disordered the head may be, fo as not to fee whence it is. The caution, "be not bitter against them," is to be attended to through the whole of the conduct of the husband to the wife, with whom he is to "dwell according to knowledge." The above described conduct must flow from ignorance and blindness, from the God of this world blinding the mind, though it be with a religious zeal for his own honor as the head of the wife, while the honor that is to be given to the wife as the weaker veffel, as his own flesh, as now, "bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh, as heirs together of the grace of life," is not attended to, and their mutual prayers are hereby hindered.

I have been the longer on this, because this evil may proceed from ignorance, and the temptation in it not discovered, which, when brought to light, may be the fooner turned from; for certainly, if a man find a proneness to these or the like evils, in his temper, it will be natural to feek a hiding place, to excuse and justify himself, and no where can he find one more easy, than under a cloak of false religion. But when the true cause or source is discovered to himself, he must conclude, that it is more agreeable to his duty, when he finds a legal, fretful, froward difposition working in him, only waiting an opportunity of breaking forth, to get alone, and take shame to himfelf, before him to whom all things are naked and open, who is "the great High Priest that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the fon of God, touched with the feeling of our infirmities, in all points tempted as we are, without fin," and take encouragement from him, " to ask mercy, and find grace to help, in time of need," and take his example with him into his family; who says, "learn of me, for I am meek and lowly." Whence proceeds a gospel disposition, which is meek and quiet.

Now then, if there be any in this honourable relation, " HEAD OF THE WIFE, EVEN AS CHRIST IS HEAD OF THE CHURCH," who with their mouths flew much love to "the grace of God that bringeth falvation to all men that hath appeared," who are so far from soberly attending to its teaching "to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and to live foberly, righteously and godly, looking for the bleffed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour, Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify us unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works," that they give themselves over to ungodliness and worldly lusts, in such a manner, as to neglect their business, their means of providing for the temporal falvation and comfort of their families for idle company, and gaming, till pinched with want, they are fretful and profane in their families, to a degree, that would be a scandal to heathens, whereby the name of God and his doctrines are blasphemed. I dare to appeal to their confciences, upon fober reflection (which they must come to, whether they will or no) whether their hearts don't die within them and become as a stone.

I was looking in my own mind, whether there were not a deception fome-how attending the temptations, by which these persons are carried away. Perhaps they will say, they thank Gop they are not as other men,—worldly, covetous, asraid of spending a little time or a little money; for their part they don't dedesire to have their hearts over-charged with cares of this this life, &c. But do they not fee, that this very practice involves them and their families in the utinost perplexity? What, though they may fometimes appear to gain, hath not divine truth faid, "wealth gotten by vanity shall be diminished?" Yes, it shall. Divine power is engaged in the cause of divine truth, and it shall be accomplished. Perhaps in this very instance in which you gain, it is sulfilled respecting fome other family.

When JESUS CHRIST exhorted his disciples, "Take heed left your hearts be over charged with furfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and that day come upon you unawares," did he not give an example of diligence in working the work of him that fent him? Says he, "my meat is to do the will of him that fent me, and to finish his work." Is it not the character of his spouse? "She worketh willingly with her hands, she looketh well to the ways of her houshold, and eateth not the bread of idleness." And doth not his Apostles direct his disciples, 1st of The state on in. 11, 12, "That ye fludy to be quiet and do your own bufiness, and work with your own hands, that ye may walk honestly towards them that are without, and ye may have lack of nothing." 2d of The falonians, iii. 11, 12, "We hear that there are some that walk disorderly, working not at all, but are bufy bodies,; now them that are fuch, we command and exhort, by our LORD JESUS, that with quietness they work, and eat their own bread." Ephefians, iv. 28, "Rather let him labour, working with his hands the things that is good, that he might have to give to him that needeth." In this the Apostle was an example, 1st of Thessalonians, ii. 9, " For labouring night and day, because we would not be chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you the gospel of Gon." Alts xx. 34, 35, "These hands have ministered to my necessities, and to them that were with me: So labouring, ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of our Lord Jesus, how he said it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Let these sayings sink down into our ears, and let us remember the exhortation, Romans xiii. 13, 14, "Let us walk honestly as in the day, not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envy, but put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the sless, to sulfill the lusts thereof." 'Tis all day with him; we are naked and open before him; "If I say the darkness shall cover me, even the night shall be light about me; yea, the darkness hideth not from thee, but the night shineth as the day; the darkness and the light are both alike to thee."

As the duty of the husband is now in view, I would take a little more particular notice of the Apostle Peter's comprehensive address to them, all contained in one verse, 1st epistle, iii. 7, "Likewise ye husbands dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wise as to the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life, that your prayers be not hindered."

"Dwell with them according to knowledge." This may import the knowledge of the mystery contained in the marriage union: as it is a figure of the union of Christ and the church, the knowledge of the love, care, compassion, and tenderness, that Jesus Christ shews to his church, as an example to the husband, and of what his word and the nature of the marriage union binds upon them."

"Giving honour to the wife as to the weaker veffel." The Apostle says, "If one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; and if one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it." Tis true here, if the head and husband give honor to the wife, all the fenfible parts of the family rejoice; if the frequently, and without cause, suffer his displea-fure, all the family suffer herein. But how may I unde stand this expression, "honor as to the weaker veffel?" When I look into the house, I see the weaker vessels, the glass, the china, honored with the most attention, the fafest and most honorable place assigned to them; they are handled with the greatest care and tenderness; and in Isaiah xxii. from the 15th, I read, that when Shebna, who looked upon himself as the nail fastened in the fure place, should be removed, cut down and fall, and the burden on it broken, God would fasten Eliakim, as a type of Jesus Christ, as a nail in a fure place; "And they shall hang on him all the glory of his Father's house, all vessels of final quantity, from the vessels of cups, even to all the veffels of flaggons." Here is honour to the weaker vessels. Hence the honour to the wife, denotes the care and tenderness with which she is to be treated; and in all her fears, distresses, and perplexities, to be put in mind of the nail in the fure place, that can never be cut down, and fall.

This is agreeable to what follows: "And as being heirs together of the grace of life." The grace of life, is the grace that reigns through righteousness to eternal life, by Jesus Christ our Lord; which comes not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy. The idea of heir-ship, is the idea of inheriting what was not our own, by the will of another. Heirs together of the grace of life, carries the mutual obligation that the grace of the gospel brings us under, to obedience to him in our mutual duties one to another.

"That your prayers be not hindered." The direction, 1st of Peter, iv. 7, "Be ye therefore fober, and watch unto prayer," together with the repeated exhortations of Jesus Christ, to watch and pray, shews the duty of watchfulness against every thing whereby our prayers may be hindered; and as Jesus Christ, in Mark xi. 52, fays, "When ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any," we may easily see that the contrary spirit must hinder mutual prayer; for where envy and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work. That your prayers be not hindered, may have referrence to mutual prayer in the church, which ought to be attended in the exercise of fervent charity, and which may be marred, weakened or broken, by an indulged carriage, unbecoming the gospel of Christ; in which case the direction of JESUS CHRIST, " If thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there remember that thy brother hath ought against thee, leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way, first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift," ought to be attended to.—It may also have referrence to their mutual prayers in the family, as their circumstances, opportunity, and fense of divine mercy, may call them thereunto: For we have direction to pray with all prayer and supplication in the spirit; and in every thing, by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, to be making our requests known to GoD; and it must be the mutual duties of husbands and wives, to guard against that conduct which would hinder the mutual enjoyment of fuch a privilege.

In what has been brought to view, the scriptures, in their most obvious meaning, have been attended to, as knowing they come with the authority of JESUS CHRIST, who is LORD of all. The authority of the Apostles is the authority of CHRIST, as he has connected them with himself; so that he that despises these their exhortations, despiseth not man, but God. And sure I am, that an attention to them, is the surest way to domestic happiness. I have often thought, that if two persons come together in the relation of husband and wife, that wished to live happily in that relation, they could walk by no better rules, even supposing they did not believe the scriptures; but in that case they would have but the body or the letter, without the spirit. The honor, the nearners, the endeared affection, and the obligations mutually arising in that relation, cannot be fully scen but as they center in Christ Jesus, in his union with, love to, and care of, his church; in whom the man is not without the woman, nor the woman without the man: "For OF HIM, and TO HIM, and THROUGH HIM, are all things;" To whom be glory for ever.

AMEN.

APPENDIX.

APPENDIX.

Containing thoughts occasioned by the provisions of the table.

Upon looking over the time calculated for family enjoyment, happiness, &c. mentioned in the 221st page; fome thoughts occurred on the provision of the table, which swelled beyond the compass of a marginal note, and are brought in by way of appendix, as tollows.

WHEN the head of a family retiring from his business to his meals, has the happiness to make them all fet down around him, and the example of JESUS CHRIST and the apostle, to direct, excite, embolden, and encourage him to give thanks before them all, if his mind is led to understand the glory of the gospel, what can hinder his breaking forth into praise, for all spiritual bleffings in heavenly things, in CHRIST JESUS, as they are brought to his view in the bounties of providence on his table; yea, though it be at a time of poverty, and there be only bread and water, to preferve life, till some further provisions can be procured, yet even that would point us to the bread and water of life, for even they were made by him, and for him, and do filently, eminently and constantly hold forth his glory; if with them I have a piece of a broiled fish, shall I be discontent because I have no more, and feem as if the meal was not large enough to call me to thankfgiving; or shall I not rather remember it is the fame with which Jesus fed the multitudes, after he had given thanks; the fame that was laid on the coals, John xxi. 9, to which he called his disciples to "come and dine," verse 12; or would my discontented mind find fault with my bread, bread, because I cannot obtain every day the finest of the wheat, let it rather remind me, that it was barley bread with which I sus fed the multitude, 70hn vi. 9. If the adversary, whose name is legion, for they are many, attempt like the Midianites that typified them, Judges vi, to destroy the increase of the earth, by introducing murmuring, discontent and uneafiness, instead of thanksgiving at my table, may this barley bread with which the multitudes were fed, remind me of what the barley cake did, in the host of the Midlanites, and be as efficacious to take away my murmuring; for will it not pierce my heart with grief and shame that I should murmur at that for which my Lord gives thanks! Can I have the least appearance of a fervant or disciple, to be thus above my master and Lord, while a "perfect disciple shall be as his master." Luke vi. 40. Herein is the love perfect in us, that we should have boldness in the day of judgment, for as he is, so are we in this world." ist of John iv. 17, Methinks here is also a further lesson for me; when a lad had only five barley loaves, and two small fishes, they were all at the service of JESUS CHRIST, of whom and for whom he had them. If I am favoured with meat, it is calculated to lead me to the meat that endureth to eternal life, which the Son of man shall give, who says, "my flesh is meat indeed." If I have a dinner of herbs, and the fense of dvine love exciting me and my family to love one another, it is better than a stalled ox, and hatred to my God, and family therewith: Shocking the thought! that my ungreatful heart is capable of this! If I cast my eye on the falt, while I reach after it, it would filently remind me of the favour of the knowledge of CHRIST, made manifest by his apostles in every place, " which is the falt of the covenant of God, that never should be lacking," typified by that which was to accompany all the offerings of the children of Ifrael, and which was given them in Ezra's time, by Darius, chapavi. 3; and by Artaxerxes, chap. vii. 22, at the commandment of the priest, without prescribing, pointing forward to the favour of the knowledge of Christ, which my falt would remind me of: This turns my mind to an instruction we have in Ezra iv. 14, " Now because we are salted with the salt of the palace, it was not meet for us to fee the kings dishonour:" This is the instruction my falt, which was created by him, is of him, and for him, would communicate to me. Is my table furnished, and am I favoured with roots, and will they not turn my mind to the "root of Jeffe," Ifaiah xi. 10, "the root out of a dry ground." chap. liii. 2, " the root of the righteous that yieldeth or giveth," Proverbs xii. 12. For my roots were by him, they are from him and for him, to hold forth his glory. Do I find my table enriched with fruits, the fruit of the vine; have I a cup of wine there, furely it fo fully points to Jesus Christ, that as oft as I drink it I ought to remember him, whether it be at the LORD's fupper, or at my own table. Do I fee the beans, peas and squashes on my table, either of these are the fruit of the bush, and would lead my mind to the angel of the LORD, or the agent Jehovah, that appeared to Moses in the bush, which burned with fire and was not confumed, which caused Moses to turn aside, to behold with attention, when he was told to put off his shoes from off his feet, in token of reverence and refignation to his LORD, which he did, and was then instructed in the meaning, which led Moses to understand, that though the posterity of Abrahram, Isaac and Jacob, were in bondage in Egypt, fighing and groaning, and was expelled a stranger in Midian, a flrange land, yet Gop faw their trouble and heard their cry, and said unto him, "I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob, this is my name forever, and my memorial unto all ages;"

ages;" I that delivered Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in all their distresses, particularly that saved Jacob, and his family when in danger of being burnt up with famine, by bringing them into Egypt, and giving them there the blessing of Joseph, with which he blessed his land in the seven plenteous years, even the sweetness of heaven, the dew, and the deep, and the sweet increase of the sun and the moon, the precious things of the mountains and hills, and the precious things of the earth, and the abundance thereof; whereby the good will of him that dwelt in the bush, rested on Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren, as a type of him in whom all fulness dwells.

" I AM that I AM, I am the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob; this is my name forever, and my memorial throughout all generations; I know the forrows of their posterity, therefore I am come down to deliver them."—And is there not in this name and memorial joy to the whole earth? Is he the God of the Jews only, and not of the Gentiles also? Yes, "even of the Gentiles also; the God of the whole earth shall he be called." The promise to Abraham is, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be bleffed." So that there is not held forth to Moses in the burning bush, the distressed state of the children of Israel and their deliverance only, but of the whole human race, who by the curse of the siery law, appeared in danger of being burnt up without remedy; but Jesus " was made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law;" he fustained the fire, and freed us from being confumed. His fultaining of, and deliverance from it was the beginning of revenges on the enemy; on which the call is, "Rejoice O ye nations, his people." In view of which, in the xlviith Pfalm, "All people" are called to "clap their hands, and shout with the voice of triumph; for G g the Lord, most High, terrible, a Great King over all the earth, he hath subdued the people under us, and the nations under our feet." The nation and people of the Jews, apprehended themselves above the Gentiles, and despited them; but since "God is gone up with a shout, the Lord with the sound of the trumpet," It is evident he hath chosen our inheritance for us, "the excellency of Jacob, whom he loved."

Our inheritance: All people, the Gentiles, who are fellow heirs, and of the fame body, and partakers of his promifes in Christ by the gospel, and all people are called on, Sing praises to God; sing praises; fing praises unto our King, sing praises; for God is King of all the earth; fing ye praises that have understanding: God reigneth over the heathen; God fitteth upon his holy throne."—Agreeable to Pfalm ii. where it is faid, "Yet have I fet my King upon my holy hill of Zion: Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee," (referring to the refurrection) " ask of me, and I will give the heathen thine inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth thy possession." Upon his refurrection, it is manifest they are his purchased possession. This King now manifestly appears to reign in righteousness: "I have set my King upon my holy hill of Zion." So in the above xlviith Pfalm, on his afcension, he is "King of all the earth," he "reigneth over the heathen," he " fitteth on his holy throne," he is come whose right it is; thus "the princes of the people are gathered together, the people of the God of Abraham;" he not only shielded Abraham's family in their affliction, but "the shields of the earth belong unto the LORD; he is greatly exalted."

Is there not a lesson for mc, under my distressing trials, of what fort soever, to realize the reverence and subjection that is due to my LORD, as in the case of Moses, Exodus iii. 5, and Joshua v. 15, resigning myfelf up to him as not my own, but redeemed by him? Now this was the manner in Ifrael, concerning redeeming and changing—to establish all things, a man plucked off his shoe, and gave it to his neighbour, and this was a sure witness in Israel, that he had resigned his right, and it was the property of him that redeemed it; which I am of my Lord Redeemer, and ought to realize it with reverend submission, under every affliction, knowing that in his everlassing name, his memorial through all generations, there is a fountain of all-sufficient consolation.

Am I prefented with the fruit of the apple-tree, to bring to my mind the tree of life, which bear twelve fruits, and yielded her fruit every month; which fruit was for meat, and the leaf for medicine; "the leaves of the tree for the healing of the nations?" If my apple should remind me of the fruit of the forbidden tree, by which fin and death entered, it will also lead me to Christ, by and for whom the apple-tree was created; for as the apple-tree among the trees of the wood, fo is my beloved among the fons." I have all in this tree; for the fruit is for food and the leaf for medicine. What may I understand by the leaves of the tree? In a natural fense, it shows that which evidences of what fort the tree is: Thus the fig tree was known it had leaves; and as the leaves of a figtree, were fewed together for aprons, after the fall, to hide nakedness and shame, as has been the manner ever fince, "to cover with a covering, but not of God's spirit," to go about to establish our own righteousness, which covering is too narrow, a man cannot wrap himself in it; so when Jesus came, the LORD our righteousness, he faith to the fig-tree, the emblem of feeking life by our own righteoufnefs, " never man eat fruit of thee henceforth for ever, and immediately the fig-tree withered away;" but his leaf shall not wither—his profession. The

The truth he heard of God at this baptism, "this is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased," the truth he taught through his life and ministry, that he witnessed a good confession to, before Pontius Pilate, that was witnessed in his resurrection, whereby he is "declared the Son of God, with power according to the spirit of holiness," this truth, which Peter made confession of, on which he will build his church, is, I apprehend, what we are led to for the meaning of the "leaves of the tree, that are for the healing of the nations," whose virtues shall prevail, 'till " there be no more curse."

PART

THOUGHTS ON EDUCATION.

ADDRESSED TO PARENTS.

Ye honored, respectful sires,
A motive now appears,
Of cautious circumspection to ards
Your children young in years.
Provoke them not to wrath, lest they Provoke them not to wrath, left they Difcourag'd should appear;

But by the nurture of the Lord,
Their tender spirits cheer.

He in his word doth nurture give,
And admonition too;
Let it imparted be to them,
With faithfulness by you.

And may you ever fit with joy,
At our Emanuel's feet,
To learn with wifdom and with love,
The little ones to treat.

PARENT and child comprehends more endearing, engaging, and respectful ideas, than I can conceive, much less express the sulness of: But when I think of them, they appear as harmonious notes in agreeable musick, which may delight the ear of him who cannot give them their proper sound. Notwithstanding, I shall attempt something that may be useful in conducting in that endeared relation.

It is the place and duty of a child to be in his parents presence with reverence and delight; and it is the duty of the parent to guard against a childless familiarity, that would tend to make the child humoursome, and bring the parent into contempt; and against such an austerity as would make their presence a dread which the child would seek to avoid. It is their duty also to guard against ill names, and such phrases and expressions as would intimate to the minds minds of the children, that their parents have not the fear of God before their eyes. If instead of the paternal, endearing expressions of—my dear child, my son, my daughter—it is—you little cur, you dog, you plague—or the like; it is, what shall I call it! a violent rape on the morals of the child. Such children are early capable of reasoning after this manner—if I am such a creature, what is my sather that begat, me, or my mother that brought me forth? And they soon get emboldened to use the same expressions, at least to those that offend them; which is productive of wrath and strife, and promotes an undesirable hardness and harshness of temper and manners.

Parents must likewife guard against a customary threatening which alienates the mind, and fowers the temper of the children, and produces contempt of the parents, when they fee their threatenings are only verbal, never to be feared except when they get into a passion. Threatenings ought to be given out with great caution and care; to be what will be the parents indispensible duty in the threatened case: They ought to be confined to moral evils; fuch as apparent wilful difobedience, lying, cheating, or profaneness; any thing that is an apparent fin against God or our neighbour: And when judiciously given out, they ought to be punctually executed, not in paffion and anger, but in love and faithfulness. And when any accidental miscarriage takes place, such as the breaking an earthen vessel, or a square of glass, it should meet with a gentle admonition, never carried fo high as to tempt the children to lie to hide it, for fear of the wrath of their parents.

Here I would take notice of the apostolick direction, Ephesians vi. 4, "And ye fathers provoke not your children to wrath, least they be discouraged, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the

"Lest they be discouraged." Doth it not include in it every thing in the education of children, that would give them a dreadful discouraging idea of God, or of their natural parents, so as to cause them secretly to wish they could hide themselves from him or them, or to make them unhappy, at the thought of being always in the divine presence (a source of security and happiness where his name is known) or at the thought of coming into the presence of their parents.

The fcripture account that God is love, and the way in which it is made manifest, is calculated to shew our highest happiness in his presence and favour; and what is to be most feared, is that which will displease him, and procure his frown. In like manner, if parents conduct by the divine rule, their children will be happiest in their presence and favour, and it must be a great punishment to be turned away from them, as a token of displeasure, but for an hour. But when, on the contrary, they cannot come where they are, without some hard names or dreadful threatenings, they are provoked and discouraged.

"But bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Nurture conveys the idea of nursing or nourishment, agreeable to 1st of Thessalonians, ii. 7, "We were gentle among you, as a nurse cherisheth her children;" 1st of Peter, ii. 2, "As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby;" 1st of Timothy, iv. 6, "Nourished up in the words of faith and good doctrine." Admonition conveys the idea, to counsel, advise, instruct, warn and reprove.

The admonition of the LORD, leads my mind to 1st of Corinthians, x. 11, Where the Apostle, speaking of the things written in the Old Testament, says, they are written for our admonition." The scriptures of the new began to be spoken by the LORD, and was confirmed to us by them that heard him. They are the admonition of the Lord; not only the fayings of Christ himself, but of his Apostles, that he connects with himself, "He that heareth you, heareth me;" are the admonition of the Lord, as is expressed ist of Thessalonians, ii. 11, "As ye know how we exhorted, and comforted, and charged, every one of you, as a father his children, that ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you to his kingdom and glory."

1st. For nurture. Let the children have the sincere milk of the word, that they may grow thereby; let them suck and be satisfied with these breasts of consolation. Only let us look into the various passages, in which Jesus Christ spake of, to, or about little children: See Matthew xviii. 1, to 14, chap. xix. 14, 15. Matthew xxi. 16. Mark xi. 13, to 16. Luke xviii. 14—16. And see if there is any thing besides glad tidings of great joy to them: If it be so, let the dear children know it as soon as they are capable of understanding; let them be "nourished up in the works of faith," in those truths that are to be believed, "and good doctrine;" the good news, the glad tidings that the Gospel contains. Or is there any threatenings of eternal damnation to children, by the Apossles of Christ? If not, who dare ring them in their ears!

There is indeed, temporal destruction, with the greatest infamy, threatened disobedient children, Proverts xxx. 17, which is a part of the second branch: The admonition of the Lord so is, Luke xv. 15, where the prodigal, from a father's house, where is bread enough, and to spare, is brought to be a poor hungry swine-seeder.

So is every caution and warning through the scriptures, especially the New Testament, which the parents ought to be acquainted with, and bring to the children's children's view, for warning, reproving, counfelling, advising, and instructing on all occasions, particularly upon any thing that is finful: The divine admonition ought to be brought immediately from the lively oracles, and they convinced it is disagreeable to the will of their Creator, Preserver, and redeemer, on whom their all depends.

For an example of admonition, we have one drawn to our hands by the Apostle, 1st of Corinthians, 1 to 11, which being well considered, may help parents to make use of other scriptures in a similar way, as there may be occasion.

Thus have I given fome thoughts on the education of children, to whom I wish the blessedness of an early acquaintance with what God has done for them, and their obligations of gratitude to him. 'Tis the duty of parents, from childhood, to acquaint them with the holy scriptures, wherein these things are contained (as Timothy was) "which are able to make wise unto salvation, through faith in Christ Jesus:" Tis with him to communicate the knowledge of himself, according to his good pleasure: To whom be glory and dominion, for ever.

AMEN.

PART

PART III.

An Inquiry into the Case of Children, with an Exhortation to them.

MATTHEW XVIII. 4.—Even fo it is not the will of my Father which is in Heaven, that one of these little ones should perish.

Third epistle of John, 4.—I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in the truth.

WHEN I meditate on the case of children, and propole an exhortation to them, instead of being governed by the various opinions there are about them, I would turn to the scriptures, and form my apprehensions from them, that I may know what ground there is for a word of exhortation to them. In Matthew xviii. 5, and Mark ix. 37, Jesus Christ fays, "Whosoever shall receive one such little child in my name, receiveth me." One fuch ;—it was a child he took in his arms, in Mark; a little child in Matthew: And in Luke xviii. 15, they brought infants, and Jesus faid, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." How comes infants constituted of the kingdom of Heaven? Matthew xviii. 11, shews Jesus Christ came to fave them; therefore, " take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I fay unto you, that in Heaven, their angels do always behold the face of my father, which is in Heaven; for the fon of man is come to fave that which is lost," Their angels; What is the office of the holy angels? "Are they not all ministring spirits, sent forth to minister for them that shall be heirs of salvation?" If their angels always behold the face of the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who is in Heaven, dothit not convey the idea, that nothing can be done against them, in a way of despising them, but what must be immediately known there? And if angels minister to infants, are they not heirs of salvation? How came they heirs; are they not by nature children of wrath; are they not lost in Adam, their head; how came they heirs of falvation? Verse 11 informs us, " For the fon of man came to fave that which was loft." Though they are really loft in union with the first Adam, and however they may appear loft in their own utter helpleffness, and the various distresses and miseries, even death itself, that they are exposed to; yet if the son of man is come to save that which is lost; has taken hold of them, taken their nature into union with himself, and conflittuted them of the kingdom of God, privirue of his own righteousness, who says, Luke xviii. 16, "for of fuch is the kingdom of Gon," then " take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones." Are they not despised by those that freely and frequently speak of the everlasting damnation of infants? Do they get it from any word of Jesus Christ concerning them? Why is it so? That they are lost is readily acknowledged; but the fon of man came to fave that which was lost: Will he not accomplish his design; is he not mighty to fave? He is the shepherd that looks after that which is lost," that "takes the lambs into his arms, and carries them in his bosom:" " How think ye, if a man have an hundred sheep, if one of them be gone aftray, doth he not leave the ninetynine, and goeth into the mountains and fecketh that which is gone aftray; and if so be that he find it, verily I fay unto you, that he rejoiceth more of that than of the ninety-nine that went not aftray: EVEN fo it is not the will of your Father who is in Heaven, that one of those little ones should perish." If Jesus Christ came to save them, and it is not the will of your your Father in Heaven that one of them should perish, must not the despisers of them, that so freely treat of their damnation, suspect themselves as advocates for the destroyer? Do they not prevail to draw a veil over the power and compassion of the Saviour, and destroy the peace of thousands?

It may not be amifs to illustrate this, by bringing in the testimony of the prophets and apossless. When God, by his prophet Jeremiah, was comforting ancient Ifrael in what he would do for them, chap. xxxi. 1, to 14, the ground and reason of which, we have in the 11th verse, " For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and ranfomed him from the hand of stronger than he." Having redeemed and ransomed him-" He that scattered Ifrael, will gather him, and keep him as a shepherd his slock: Therefore they shall come and fing in the height of Zion; and they shall not forrow any more at all; then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old men together; for I will turn their mourning into joy, and make them rejoice from their forrow, and I will fatiate the foul of the priest with fatness, and my people shall be satisfied with my goodness, faith the Lord." That this good news may reach the bottom of their affliction and forrow, expressed in verse 15, in a prophetic view, of the destruction of the children of Bethschem, by Herod, it is said, verse 16, " refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears, for thy work shall be rewarded, faith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy, and there is hope in thine end, faith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own border."-Death was the enemy where they went; from which they shall come again, and inherit their own border, in him, or by virtue of union with him, " who through death, destroys him that had the power of death; that is the devil." " Thus faith the Lord, even the captives captives of the mighty shall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible shall be delivered; for I will contend with him that contendeth with thee, and I will save thy children, Isaiah xlix. 25," "They shall come again from the land of the enemy."

"And there is hope in thine end that thy children shall come again to their own border." What is their own border? "Tis the fruit of the purchase of Jesus Christ, called their own in virtue of their union to him. To this I would add the apossle Peter, in Asis ii. 39, "For the promise is to you and to your children, and to all that are afar, of even as many as the Lord our God shall call." The promise to you and your children, as extensive as the call of the gospel, which is directed to every creature, and expressed in this language by the prophet, "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth."

It may not be unfuitable to take notice here of the error of many parents, and others, who comfort themselves concerning their infant children, when they die, from their innocency, saying, they are undoubtedly gone to happiness; and rob the Saviour of his glory, and themselves of any true comfort. If they would think a few minutes, if the salvation by Jesus Christis excluded, and they gone to happiness by virtue of their own innocency, it is a happiness that they themselves can never be admitted to; "for there is no other name under Heaven among men, whereby they can be saved, but the name of Jesus." They seem not to attend to the apostle; he hath concluded all under sin, that he might have mercy upon all."

The apostle John, when writing to the disciples, under the character of little children, says, " I write unto you, little children, because your fins are forgiven, for his name sake: I write unto you, little children, because you have known the Father." The

Father

Father is not known to any, but to whomsoever the son will reveal him. When they understood the forgivness of fins for his name's sake, they know the father: Thus is he, who is love, made manifest. And this is what little children in Christ's school are taught by an aged apostle, "I write unto you, little children, because your fins are forgiven you, for his name's sake" which he lays in the foundation of his exhortations to them, "Love not the world," &c.

I am aware of an objection against what I have brought to view. How can these things be so, when we see children, as soon as they grow up, turn after their own lusts, after "the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the fpirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience?" Do we not fee children and youth foon arrive at a shocking pitch of profaneness and immorality? Yes, verily, multitudes of them appear to be in the fnare of the devil, and led captive by him, at his will: But whose are they? Do they belong to him who hath infnared them, and leads them captive; yea, tho' he fo blind their minds as to lead them to profane the name of their rightful owner, and to fay he shall not reign over us, doth it alienate the property of them? May they not be told with truth and propriety, that they are not their own, they belong to Jesus CHRIST, to whom they must give an account of their conduct, who will bring every knee of them to bow to him; that they are working out their own shame and consussion of face before him? May they not be called to repent; to return to their rightful proprietor, owner and Lord?

But how repent, unless they are wrong in their alienation to Jesus Christ, and in their walking according to the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience? How return, if they have not gone aftray; if they belong not to their Lord Redeemer, if he be not the shepherd and bishop of their souls? Is not this idea held up in every call to repentance? Isaiah xliv. 22, "Return, for I have redeemed thee." Jeremiah iii. 12, "Return, thou back-sliding Israel, saith the Lord, "14, "Turn, O back-sliding children, saith the Lord, for I am married unto you;" 22, "Return, ye back-sliding children, I will heal your backslidings." The idea of his right as Redeemer, Husband and Father, is implied in the call to return, and every call to repentance supposes mercy: "There is forgiveness with thee, that thou mayest be feared," and we cannot conceive of mercy but in a consistency with justice: If justice is satisfied, mercy slows without obstruction, "Return, for I have redeemed thee."

Besides, as they are in the snare of the Devil, led captive by him at his will, "for this purpose was the son of God manifest, that he might destroy the works of the Devil."—When the prophet Isaiah introduces the inquiry, chap. xlix. 24, "Shall the prey be taken from the mighty, or * the lawful captive delivered?"† The answer is, verse 25, "But thus saith the Lord, the captives of the mighty shall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible shall be delivered, for I will contend with him, that contendeth with thee, and I will save thy children." He will not leave them in his hands; no, not one of the hundred; the shepherd will not lose one of the hundred sheep; he came to save that which is lost; he came to do his Father's will, and it is not his will "that one of these little ones should perish."

Thus much Of CHILDREN; what follows is addressed To CHILDREN.

Children—

^{*} Hebrew, in the bible margin, "The captivity of the just." † By "the lawful captive," or "the captivity of the just," I understand, that those who were taken captive by the mighty adversary, were taken from where they lawfully belonged, led captive from the just one, their rightful owner.

Children—Let me ask your attention to what is laid before you, fimply from the scriptures,—Are these things so? If so, methinks it is " glad tidings of great joy," and flews the ground of obligation that lies upon you to look upon yourselves as not your own, as not at liberty to walk after your own lusts, as not belonging to Satan, however he may feek to devour or infnare you, -you belong to IE-SUS CHRIST, OUR CREATOR, PRESERVER, AND RE-DEEMER, he has bought you with his blood, and therefore you are under the highest obligations to " glorify him in your spirits and bodies which are his;" and is it not in this view, most ungrateful, base and wicked, to walk contrary thereunto? I have thought whether it were not the ignorance of children about what our Lord and Saviour is to them, has done, and is doing for them, that was the cause of their finking fo low into the mire and filth of profaneness and immorality; while a fense of love always carries with it, a fense of obligation to grateful obedience: Where this is the case, it would be natural to turn our minds to the exhortation of the apostle to children, "children obey your parents in the Lord for this is right." When we confider the wretched, helpless circumstances we come into the world in, and view the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, giving paternal love, tenderness and compassion to our parents, and by this means, daily loading us with his benefits; as foon as we are capable of reflecting, it must give us a view of obligation to gratitude and thankfulness, which cannot be expressed, without a sense of obligation to obedience; therefore, children " obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right, it must commend itself to your own consciences as right.

I wish to unfold something of the meaning of this expression; if I could, it would discover such obligations gations as could not be broken through, without doing violence to our own consciences, our peace and comfort, for it must lead to a united view of what our JESUS CHRIST has done, and is doing for us, and what he makes our parents to us, and does for us by their means, which would lead our minds to all the thought, care, toil and labour of the father, and to the compaffionate tenderness of the mother, who often, with much pain and pleafure, nourishes her offfpring from her own body, both night and day; well might the apostle say, "children obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right." Here also is a direction to children, when they come to years capable of understanding the will of GOD in CHRIST JESUS concerning them; if ever the parents, through the prevalency of temptation, command any thing contrary to his revealed will, to remember the words of the apostle to the rulers who commanded them contrary to the will of the Lord, "we ought to obey God rather than man," and dutifully to remind their parents of the reasons of their conduct; to obey in any thing contrary to his revealed will, would not be to obey them "in the LORD."

"Honor thy father and mother," which is the first commandment, with promise, "that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest live long on the earth;" a contrary conduct, slights the divine authority that commands, and the divine promise annexed thereto; it slights our own welfare, and forseits life upon earth. What base folly, guilt and shame, doth disobedience to parents carry along with it!

When the apostle to the Romans, speaks of God's giving over the Gentiles to a reprobate mind, and rehearses what they were filled with which led thereunto, we find in the catalogue, "disobedience to parents," Romans i. 30, So when he speaks of the perilous times that should come in the last days, one part of the description is, "disobedience to parents,"

2d. of Timothy iii. 2.

This is that which, befides the ingratitude, bafeness and wickedness that appears in it, has a leading tendency to various others, if not all kinds of vice and wickedness; Therefore, "children obey your parents in the Lord;" Honor thy father and mother, that it may be well with thee, that thou mayest live long upon the earth," even till it please Gon in his providence, to call you by a natural death, in his own time and way, and not hurry yourselves, by your disobedience, into the hands of civil justice, to an untimely death, to which it has a tendency.

When JESUS CHRIST addressed his disciples under the character of little children, John xiii. 33, the exhortation he had to give them, to which he thus called their attention, was, verse 34, " a new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that we also love one another."— This is the duty of every one, more especially of all who hope for falvation from the love of the Saviour, which ought to excite children to treat one another with kindness and love, not to wish evil to any that offend us, not to " render evil for evil," not to despise those that are poor, but endeavour to think of the forgiveness and condescension of Jesus Christ, agreeable to the exhortation of the apostle, Ephesians iv. 31, let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice, and be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God in Christ hath forgiven you."

Here I would take notice of what I have seen in some instances, with forrow. When young persons have been intrusted with the care of little children, either at home, or to lead them abroad, they have seemed to lose all sense of that kindness and tender-

heartedness, of which the apostle speaks; and as it were, cruelly divert themselves with telling the dear little ones frightful stories, and giving out many threatenings to them, until sear and distress has banished every agreeable seeling from their tender breasts, and they burst forth into sobbing and crying; for which they have been called cross—twitched, scolded at, threatened and beaten: Which conduct, in many cases, has been of very hurtful consequences. How contrary is this to the obligations we are under to walk in love one to another!

There is one confideration I would fuggest to all that have the care of little children; i.e. what Jesus CHRIST faid, " of fuch is the kingdom of Heaven," and in that remarkable paffage, Mark ix. 36, 37, "he took a child and fet him in the midst of them, and when he had taken him in his arms," (observe the bigness of the child, a child in the arms) " he faid unto them, who foever shall receive one of such children, in my name, receiveth me, and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth him that fent me." Would we treat Jesus Christ in the above manner were he upon earth! And will not the above paffages warrant us to fay that he is now on earth, in the least of these his brethren; so that as ye did unto them, ye did unto him; and on reflection on the above conduct, any of us that have been guilty, on recollecting what we have done when we thought no one faw us, may well be afraid, and fay-furely God was in the place, and I knew it not.

May the thought ever excite to an attention to the forementioned exhortation, "Let all bitterness and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away." Evil speaking comes from a little member, but "Tis a fire, a world of iniquity; it fets on fire the course of nature, and is set on fire of hell," faith the Apostle, James iii. 6, It would perhaps haps be impossible to describe the variety into which this fire blazes and unfolds itself. Without attempting this, I shall just take notice of it, as it discovers itself in profaneness, uncleanness, coverousness, stealing, and lying.

To begin with profaneness,-Can there be any thing more base, ungrateful, and wicked, than to profane that worthy name, which is above every name, in which there is falvation, the just God and the Saviour, EMANUEL, GOD with us. We know not God but as he is thus manifest: So there can be no species of profaning that name, but it includes in it the base ingratitude of profaning the Saviour. If the consideration of his being their God, was used as an argument against profaneness with ancient Israel, as Leviticus xix. 12, "Neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God," certainly the grace manifested in the gospel hath the same obligations in it; and opens up a ground of perpetual praise and thanksgiving: And who of us are not at some times constrained to acknowledge it; and with our tongues to bless God, even the Father? Shall we therewith curse our fellow-creatures, " that are made after the fimilitude of God?" James iii. 9, Certainly these things ought not fo to be; the grace of the gospel teaches, by precept and example, " to bless them that curse you, bless and curse not, love your enemies; do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use and perfecute you." Here we are warranted to make use of the Saviour's name, in praying for our enemies; he bids us, and fets the example. How contrary the profane practice of calling on his name to damn those we think injure or displease us! It comes as evidently from the destroyer, our adversary, the devil, as the above-mentioned precepts and examples come from the Saviour. Stop dear child! stop young man, over-heated with passion and resentment, and hurried by temptation! ftop one minute and confider which you ought to follow: Hear the apostle, Let all evil speaking be put away from you, with all malice."

The next branch of evil speaking I would take notice of, is uncleanness. If we consider the warnings and cautions given against it by the apostles of CHRIST,* we must see the the propriety of our children's being warned to flun the appearance of this evil; to flun the speeches, behavior and company, that tends hereunto. What shameful ingratitude doth it discover, when we see our children, who are privileged in their education fo as to be able to write their thoughts legibly, defiling the fences, as they pass the streets, with shameful uncleanness! writing what they would at first be asraid to speak, until their minds are hardened by writing, then reading and repeating, until they contract a habit of evil speaking; which has a tendency, as they grow up, to lead after all uncleanness with greediness. I think I may tell them with truth, if they should live two or three times twenty years after, it would not obliterate, but increase the shame that such conduct must produce, upon the remembrance of fuch follies; for old age has a lively remembrance of what is done in youth, though it forgets later transactions; and the sense of forgiveness doth not take away the ground of shame, ^{*} See Galations v. 19, Ephefians v. 3, to 6, Coleffians iii. 5, to 8, 1st of Thessalonians, iv. 3, to 8, 1st of Peter, iv. 2, 3. And in the epistle to the Corinibians, the apostle says, "What know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ; shall I then take the members of Christ, and make them the members of an harlot? GOD forbid.—What! know ye not that he that is joined to an harlot is one body, for two shall be one slesh; but he that is joined to the Lord is one spirit. Flee fornication: Every sin that a man doth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication, sinneth against his own body. What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the holy ghost What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the holy ghost in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price? Therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's." ist of Corinthians, vi. 15, to the end.

but increases it, agreeable to Ezekiel xvi. 63, "That thou mayst remember and be ashamed and confounded, and never open thy mouth any more because of thy shame, when I am pacified towards thee for all that thou hast done, saith the Lord God." This I would close with the advice of Divine wisdom, Proverbs vii. 24 to 27, "Hearken unto me now therefore, O ye children, and attend to the words of my mouth; let not thine heart decline to her ways; go not astray in her paths; for she hath cast down many wounded, yea, many strong have been slain by her; Her house the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death."

I might mention the scripture warnings and cautions against covetousness, stealing and lying. Covetousness in children discovers itself in a fretful uneatiness for what belongs to other children, prompting them to attain it by any means, if it cannot be had, as they say, by fair means, and tempts them to steal, and then to lie to hide the crime. The story of Achan is lest on record for warning and admonition, which we have in Jeshua vii. particularly verses 20 and 21, where Achan says, "Indeed I have sinned against the Lord God of Israel, when I saw among the spoils a goodly Babylonish garment, and two hundred shekels of silver, and a wedge of gold, of sisty shekles weight, then I coveted them and took them, and behold them hid in the earth, in the midst of my tent," &c.

Covetousness is idolatry, it makes an idol of what it fixes on: Can there be any thing more base and disingenuous, when we consider what God is to us, and hath done for us, than to prefer any thing our peevish minds covet after, and in pursuit of it to disobey him. The apostle speaking to the Ephesians, who were in some measure acquainted with what God in Christ was to them, and had done for them, says,

chap. iv. 28, "Let them that stole, steal no more, but rather let him labour, working with his hands the thing that is good, as shewing a more excellent way of attaining what we need, and helping those that may need help from us. And in the same chapter, he exhorts to put away lying, and speak truth "every man to his neighbour," from this motive, "for we are members one of another;" therefore, in this view, we ast as if we would deceive ourselves, as if the eye should purposely betray the feet into the mire.

By what has been brought to view of the ingratitude and baseness of some of the many works of the flesh, something is discoverable of the source from whence they proceed, and of the darkness, distress and mifery to which they tend: It may lead to the fame reflections on all the works of the flesh, which are brought to view by Jesus Christ, Matthew xv. 19, 20, Mark vii. 21, 22, and by the apostle, Galations v. 19, 20, 21, It might be very feafonable and profitable by way of contrast, to consider the source and leading tendency of the fruits of the spirit, against which there is no law, the very mention of which, as they are enumerated by the apostle, Galatians v, 22, 23, wears the aspect of delight and satisfaction, both as they flow from the love of Jesus, and lead to an imitation of him, and fatisfaction in him: But as I mean not to burden young minds with what is over lengthy, I only hint at these things, to open a field for themselves to walk in with pleasure, delight and thankfgiving,* as they come to be capable; knowing that the path of the just one, which he trod and laid out for his followers to walk in, who has given us an example

^{*} Thanksgiving is a grateful, delightful expression of our obligation to God, for the manifestation of himself, "in Christ Jesus who is love; "and for all the mercies that flow to us from that seuntain, both temporal, spiritual, and eternal, which is to be expressed in thinking, speaking, singing and living his praise, to which children are encouraged, by the gracious acceptance the children met with from Jesus Christ, in their hosanna's to the son of David, Matthew axil-15, 16.

example, "that we should follow his steps, is as "the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day," while the way of the wicked one, into, which he seeks to infnare his followers, is as darkness.

Proverbs iv. 18, 19.

Thus, dear children, I have endeavoured to lead your minds to the grace revealed in the gospel, and to the view of the obligations this grace lays upon us;—if you accept my attempt, and are hereby excited to turn over the pages of revelation, and to attend to Jesus Christ and his apostles, speaking in them, I have all I wish for from you: I know I am not my own, and that every opportunity and talent I have, belongs to my Redeemer; therefore, so far as duty to him, and love to you hath excited me hereto, I have reason to be satisfied, whatever reception it hath. To his honor and glory, and your comfort and benefit it is devoted. To the only wise God our Saviour, glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever,

AMEN.

A DIALOGUE between TEACHER and SCHOLAR, for the benefit of young men: Or, an attempt to imitate TIMOTHY'S CATECHISM; who from a child knew the Holy Scriptures, that were able to make him wife to Salvation, through the faith which is in Christ Jesus, 2d. Tim. iii. 15. Being an attention to two questions arising from what the Scriptures principally teach, viz. 1st. What is Man to believe concerning God? 2d. What doth God require of Man?

SCHOLAR.

SIR, I have been attending to the Affemblies Catechifm, and the three first answers appear intelligible; but when I come to the question, What is God? I would say, As the chief end of man is to glorify God and enjoy him forever, and the scriptures are the only rule to direct us how we may thus glorify and enjoy him, and they principally teach what man is to believe concerning God, and what he requires of man, in order to this chief end, I would wish to be taught from this only rule, supposing it more plain and easy to be understod than any other. I therefore ask, that I may be taught from the scriptures what I am to believe concerning God.

TEACHER. Though your request is fingular, I can't but suppose it is reasonable, although it makes me at a loss how to answer you; if I should attempt it by bringing to your view some of the many passages of scripture in which it hath pleased God to reveal himself unto us; I would first take notice that the scriptures are often spoken of as the Old and New-Testament, or the old and new, first and second Covenant; the letter and the spirit, the law and the gospel; and in order to understand them, we are to distinguish between the language of the law and the language of the gospel, or else we shall be in danger of viewing one passage of scripture contradictory to For instance:

The law faith.

Gal. iii. 10, Curfed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them. The gospel saith, Gal. iii. 13, Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us.

Isaiah speaking in the language of the law, saith, chap. v. 25, and ix. 12, and xvii. 21, and x. 4, After repeating various judgments that befel the people of Judea, and Jerusalem, in consequence of their transgressions, repeateth, For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

The same prophet speaking the language of the gospel, faith, chap. xii. 1, In that day thou shall fay, O Lord I will praise thee; though thou wast angry with me; thine anger is turned away, and thou dost comfort me. Chap. xxv. 10, For in this mountain shall the hand of the Lord rest.

Whatever they suffered consequent on their rebellion, there was no atonement; justice was not satisffied, but his hand is stretched out still. But speak. ing gospel language, he points to Jesus under the name of this mountain, where the hand of the Lord refts.

Joshua speaking in the language of the law, faith, chap. xxiv. 19, Ye cannot ferve the Lord your God, for he is an holy God, he is a jealous God, he will not forgive your transgressions nor your sins.

Isaiah speaking in the language of the gospel, in the name of the LORD, faith, I am he that blotteth out thy transgressions for my own name sake. And Ezekiel

xx. 40, faith, For in mine holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Zion, there shall all the house of Israel, all of them in the land serve me, and there will I accept them.

SCHOLAR. You remember, fir, the question was, What is God? which I wished to be answered from the scriptures?

Teacher. I supposed the observations I have made, needful for the understanding of it, under the law, we read that God would dwell in the thick darkness: And Moses drew near to the thick darkness where God was; and he spake to all the people out of the midst of the fire, and out of the thick darkness; he made darkness his pavillion round about, darkness was under his feet, &c. Under the gospel we read God is light, and in him is no darkness at all; that God who dwelt in thick darkness is made manifest to us in Christ Jesus, the great mystery that was hid in the thick darkness of the former law dispensation, is laid open under the gospel, God was manifest in the sless.

John faith no man hath seen God at any time. The only begotten Son which was in the bosom of the Father he hath declared him, no man knoweth the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsever the Son will reveal him; if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also, and from henceforth ye know him and have seen him. Philip upon this, saith, Lord shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us. Jesus faith unto him, have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip; he that hath seen me hath seen the Father, and how sayest thou, shew us the Father, believest thou not that I am in my Father, and the Father in me. A view of these things shew that the knowledge of God was to be more fully manifested under the gospel dispensation.

The light of the knowledge of the glory of God is given to us under the gospel dispensation in the face of Jesus Christ, who is the image of the invisible

God,

God, the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person.

SCHOLAR. Doth not the scriptures speak of God as unchangeable, how then am I to understand the distinction you speak of?

TEACHER. To illustrate my meaning I would fay, if I were convicted as a criminal or desperate debtor; I could see nothing but what the law manifested as my portion, which would make all diffress and darkness to me, look which way I would; and coming to the judgment feat, could expect nothing but that it was a fure step to the infliction of the penalty of the law upon me; but to my surprise it was manifested beyond all contradiction, that my father, my friend, my hulband, my brother, whom I look on as my enemy, and had no expectation from, by reason of my crimes, has, unasked, suffered the penalty and paid the debt, that in the nature of law and justice I was discharged, and to my surprise found this united character was my advocate and judge. Then that effential love which was the moving cause of all that was done for me which before was hid in thick darkness was now made manifest, which took place before the manifestation of it to me, and was as true before I knew it as afterward; -The way is now open for your question, which you wished to be answered from the scriptures.

Scholar. The question is, What is God?

TEACHER. God is love.

God is light and in him is no darkness at all.—Saith John.

The God of peace.—Saith the Apostle to the Hebrews.

The God of patience and confolation.
The God of hope.—Saith Paul.
The God of all grace.—Saith Peter.

SCHOLAR.

SCHOLAR. Your answer is taken from the New-Testament; doth the Old-Testament afford evidence of the same truth?

TEACHER. Yes; when the law of Moses, the Prophets and the Psalms speaks in gospel language.

SCHOLAR. This is an interesting subject, and I wish to have a specimen from each of them.

TEACHER. It must be but a specimen, for neither the time nor my capacity will admit of considering it fully.

SCHOLAR. Perhaps your mentioning a few inflances may help me in my further fearching the fcriptures.

TEACHER. "Moses hath this name manifested to him, * The Lord descended in a cloud, and stood with him there, and proclaimed the Lord, the Lord God merc ful and gracious, forgiving iniquity, and tranf-gression, and sin; and that will by no means clear,— (the two words following) viz. the guilty are of a different character, to fhew they were supplied by the translators, and they appear to darken the sense of the passage; for we can't conceive of the forgiveness of iniquities, transgressions, and fin; while he will by no means clear the guilty: And therefore I conceive the words refer to the furety on whom the Lord laid the iniquities of us all, and spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all. This name being thus manifested to Moses, or as it is expressed in Pfalm cii. He made known his way unto Mofes, His way of shewing mercy; and his name the Lord God merciful and gracious, &c. being the same when this is manifested to Moses, in a time of great distress, when the people of Ifrael had rebelled and were threatened with being difinherited, he pleads the divine name on their behalf, " And now I befeech thee let the power of my Lord be great, according as thou haft

hast spoken, saying, The Lord is long-suffering and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity, transgression, and sin, and by no means clearing; (having direct respect to the surety who his own self bear our sins in his own body to the tree.) Pardon, I befeech thee, the iniquity of this people, as thou hast done from Egypt until now, the answer sollows, I have pardoned according to thy word."*

SCHOLAR. I take notice you have not mentioned a part of the above passages where it is said, Visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children, to the third and sourth generation. I wish to hear your thoughts upon it.

Teacher. When I have thought on the passage, I supposed it had reference to what was to take place under the law dispensation, till the coming of Christ; we read of the generations from Abraham to David, and from David to the carrying away into Babylon, and from the carrying away into Babylon, unto Christ; now Jesus Christ came under this third division, dispensation, or generation, for he was made under the law, came under that dispensation, and introduced the gospel dispensation; and in this view may be called the third and fourth generation, till which time the law dispensation lasted, and iniquities were thus visited; this is the clearest account I am at present able to give, and ready to attend to any one who hath a clearer view of the passage.

SCHOLAR. You will please to proceed to the anfwer to the question from the prophets.

TEACHER. It is to be observed with joy that the prophet Isaiah unites in the Divine character those persections which secure our salvation; † I the Lord and no God besides me; the just God and the Saviour, none besides me, which agree with † Zechariah, Behold thy King cometh unto thee, he is just, and having salvation, ^{*} Numbers xiv. 17 to 20. † Isaiah xiv. 21. ‡ Zechariah ix. 9.

Lord, Father, Husband, &c. with Redcemer.

* Thy Maker, thy Husband, the Lord of Hosts his name, the God of the whole earth shall he be called. Passing the various passages where this consoling connection is repeated, in the abovementioned prophet; I will just mention the last that I remember in the prophefy where it is called his name from everlaft. ing: + Doubtless thou art our Father, though Abrahams be ignorant of us, and Ifrael acknowledge us not, thou art our Father, our Redeemer, thy name from everlasting. Jeremiah speaks of him, as calling rebellious Ifrael children, # turn O backstiding children : \ Will thou not from this time cry unto me, my Father thou the guide of my youth, and the compassionate tenderness of a Father is expressed: | Return, I will not cause my anger to fall upon you, return ye backsliding children, I will heal your backslidings : Not, and I will as a condition, the and, in both verses, is supplied by the translator; but 'tis return, I will heal your backflidings. Return, I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you, for I am merciful, faith the Lord. When our minds are led to the understanding view of the riches of Divine grace appearing herein, we may well, with aftonished admiration, call to mind that majestic expression,  Behold I the Lord, THE GOD OF ALL FLESH. Is there any thing too hard for me? bleffed be his name, he condescends to say, tt I am married unto you, tt and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.

Perhaps I should tire you to turn to the rest of the prophets, to collect a specimen of their answer to the question; therefore, shall leave it to your delightful contemplation when you have opportunity.

SCHOLAR. You may remember, you mentioned the pfalms, from which I should be glad to hear something.

TEACHER. I need only remind you, that Gon is frequently called in the pfalms, the God of our Salvation; and that agreeable to the description in the prophet Isaiah, the just God and the Saviour: So righteousness and falvation is connected in the plalms: For example, see psalm xcviii. 2, " The Lord hath made known his falvation, his righteoufness hath he openly showed, in the fight of the heathen, he hath remembered his mercy, and his truth towards the house of Ifraei. All the ends of the earth have feen the falva. tion of our GoD;" which if we compare with the direction to all the earth, in the xcvi plalm, 1, 2, To flew forth his falvation from day to day, we may with pleasure, see the connection in the call to praise and thanksgiving in both psalms, for all the earth, the heavens, the sea and the fulness thereof; the fields, the trees, the floods and the little hills, which are all called to be joyful together. The matter of the joy is, the Lord hath made known his falvation, his RIGHTEOUSNESS hath he openly shewed in the fight of the heathen, &c.

Scholar. What you have made mention of appears scriptural and comfortable; in every view it feems suitable to adopt the language of lxii psalm, "My foul wait thou only upon God, for my expectation is from him, he only is my rock and my salvation, my defence, I shall not be greatly moved; in God is my salvation and my glory, the rock of my strength; and my refuge is in God; trust in him at all times ye people, pour out your hearts before him. God is a refuge for us."

But I recollect you said, under the gospel, God is maniscst in the sless, and what we know of God, is maniscst in Christ Jesus, who is the image of the in-

v. sille

wisible God, the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person. I wish you to express yourself a a little upon it, to help my understanding.

TEACHER. It is worthy of remark, that when Mofes was fent to the children of Israel, to say to them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you, and they should say, What is his name? The answer was, I have that I AM, and thus shall thou say to the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you. When Jesus asked the band and officers that came to apprehend him, Whom seek ye? they said Jesus of Nazareth, Jesus saith unto them, I am; as soon then as he said unto them, I am, thry went backward and fell to the ground. And again he says to them, † Before Abraham was, I am.

Scholar. If you please, I should be glad of fome farther particulars.

TEACHER. I will proceed to instance 1st. in creation. Moses saith, Genesis i. 1, In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. Nehe. ix. 6, Thou, thou art Lord alone: Thou hast made the heaven, the heaven of heavens, with all their host; the earth, the scas, and all that is in them. John speaking of Jesus, saith, chap. i, 3, All things were created by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made: Verse 10, the world was made by him. Colossians i. 16, 17, For by him were all things created that are in heaven and that are in earth, all things were created by him and for him.

2dly. Preservation. Nehemiah adds, And thou preservest them all. Psalm xxxvi. 6, O Lord, thou preservest man and beast. So Paul, speaking of Jesus saith, By him all things consist. Hebrews i. 3, Up.

holding all things by the word of his power.

ties. And he is called our Redeemer nine times in the prophecy of Isaiah. The name Jesus was given, for he shall save his people from their sins; and Paul speaking of him, in his epistle to Titus, saith, chapii. 14, Who gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity.

4thly. Forgiveness of sins belongs to God, Psalm ciii. 3, Who forgiveth all thine iniquities. It belongs to Christ in whom we have redemption through his blood; * the forgiveness of sins, who said, † Man thy sins be forgiven thee, and to her, † Thy sins are forgiven.

5thly. The knowledge of the hearts of men is afcribed to God only. 1st of Kings, viii. 39, For thou, thou only knowest the hearts of all the children of men.

In Matthew xii. 25, we read, Jesus knew their thoughts. And John ii. 24, Jesus knew all men; he knew what was in man.

6thly. Healing the fick. Exodus xv. 26, I am the Lord that healeth thee. Pfalm ciii. 3, Who healeth all thy difeafes.

We read in Matthew iv. 23, Jesus went about all Gallilee, healing all manner of fickness, and all manner of difease among the people.

7thly. God is the only object of Divine worship, Deu. x. 20, Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God; him shalt thou ferve, and to him shalt thou cleave; and swear by his name. It is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou ferve. In Matthew viii. 2, we read concerning Jesus, There came a leper and worshiped him, saying, Lord if thou will, thou canst make me clean. Of the woman of Canaan, we read, Mat. xv. 25, Then came she and worshipped him, saying, Lord help me. And they stoned Stephen, calling upon and saying, Lord Jesus receive my spirit. And it is the description of the disciples, them that call on the name of Jefus Christ our Lord.—Well may we with convinced Thomas, fay, My Lord and my God. Thus have I given you fome instances, which may affift your further fearthing the fcriptures, as you have opportunity.

SCHOLAR. When I think of the various passages that have been produced, which manifelts, that what was afcribed to God in the Old Testament, is ascribed to Jesus Christ in the New; so that divine worship is paid to him, as one with the father; according to the divine will, that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father, I inquire, how are we to understand these passages that speak of Jesus Christ, as Gob's servant, as sent of God; and wherein he fays, My Father is greater than I.

TEACHER. We may conceive among men of an equal, voluntarily putting himfelf into the place of a fervant, and being fent to accomplish some particular bufiness in which he that sends is greater than he that was fent, though in other respects they were equal. We read of Jesus who being in the form of God, thought it no robbery to be equal with Gon; but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a fervant, and was made in the likeness of men, and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the crofs; wherefore, Gon hath highly exalted him, and given him a name, above every name, that in the name of Jesus, every knee should bow, in heaven and in earth, and under the earth; and that every tongue Should confess, that Fesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

In his taking our nature, and coming to do the will of God, took the form of a fervant, and was capable of humiliation and exaltation.

SCHOLAR. Did not you mention in the name of Jesus, is it not faid, at the name of Jesus every knee should bow? TEACHER.

TEACHER. I know we read it thus; but from the mouth of two or three witnesses, I have been informed it is not so in the first reading, but is the same word; we have in Coloffians iii. 17, Which is there rendered, whatfoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus. God is manifested in Christ Jesus; therefore, he is thus to be worshipped, thus he bleffes his people with all spiritual bleffings IN Christ Jesus, and hath made us set together in heavenly places IN Christ Jesus. All the promises are IN him: Not because of him, or for his sake. The promife to Abraham, IN thy feed shall all the kindreds, nations and families of the earth be bleffed. The Pfalm faith, Men shall be bleffed IN him: The prophet saith, The nations shall bless themselves IN him, and IN him shall they glory. By the apostle we are faid, to be chosen IN him, to be gathered together IN him, to be rooted and built up IN him, to be justified IN him, to be made the righteoufness of God IN him, to be fantified IN Christ Jesus, to be compleat IN him; therefore IN the name of Jesus every knee shall bow.

SCHOLAR. I took notice when you faid all the promifes of God are IN him: You added not because of him, or for his sake. Is it not said by the apostle, when exhorting to sorbearing and forgiving one another, even as God for Christ sake, hath forgiven you? What difference is there between being blessed in him, and because of him; or for his sake?

TEACHER. As to the first part of your question, we read in Ephcsians iv. 22, Be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ fake hath forgiven you; but it is likewise said to be the same word as the other, even as God IN Christ hath forgiven you.

SCHOLAR. What difference is there between being bleffed IN him, and because of him; or for his fake?

TEACHER. It may be faid, one person, a mere flranger, may come to another to obtain fomething for the fake of a third person, who sent him, and obtain it, and be a stranger still, but if a wise, or a son, go in the name of the hulband or father, there is union. So if we are bleffed IN him, there is union. If we feek to be bleffed because of him, it denotes a stranger. I think the distinction is obvious, though I believe it is not generally perceived, yet I think it deferves to be foberly confidered.

Let us attend to the fimilitude a little.—A hufband or father has his wife or fon in view in all he does, and their welfare flows to them through him; according to the nature of it, the love and care is unceafing in every circumstance of sickness and health, as long as the relation lasts. So is their confidence in him perpetual, according to his ability and their wants, they bear his name, and rife and fall with him: But let a stranger come to the same man with an order from another; if the order is accepted, the fum is paid, or the thing delivered, and the matter is over, and they remain the fame strangers, the man hath no further care, and the other hath no further expectations. The above mentioned union is spoken of, Ephcsians v. 30, For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones; and blessed be his name. Jesus told his disciples, John xiv. 20, At that day ye shall know that I am in my father, and you in me, and I in you.

SCHOLAR. In attending to the answers to the question, What is God? I wished to hear you express your thoughts on the subject of the various passages in the New-Testament, in which mention is made of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, as in the commission Jefus Christ gave to his disciples, and in the form of bleffing, the Apostle makes use of in his second epistle to the Corinthians, which John mentions, 1st epiftle, v. 7, For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one.

TEACHER. I would take notice that three persons is no where mentioned; that is a tradition (perhaps from the assemblies catechism,) which I wish to avoid, but the scripture expression is, These three are one.

Scholar. That is the thing I wish to have my mind affifted in the understanding of.

TEACHER. James iii. 9, Speaks of men as made after the fimilitude of God. Now if man confilts of body, foul and spirit, are not these three, one. Again, the fame person may at the same time be in the relation of father and fon, and that filial respect, that influences a reverential, fuitable deportment towards his father, may be fitly called the spirit of the fon, that same spirit manifesting itself in the paternal love and care of his offspring, may fitly be called the fpirit of the father, or if spoken of to his children, the spirit of your father. The same spirit insluencing his general conduct, is called the spirit of the man; as 'tis often faid among men, I am fatisfied that this speech, this work, or this gift, come from fuch an one, 'tis the spirit of the man. Now in this view, is not the Father, the Son, and the Spirit one man? Are not these three, one? What hath been brought to view, brings to mind feveral paffages, as John x. 30, I and father are one. John xv. 26, The comforter, the spirit of truth; which proceedeth from the father. Gal. iv. 6, God hath fent forth the spirit of his son into our hearts. And in Rom, viii. 9, the spirit of God and the spirit of Christ are both mentioned in one verse.

SCHOLAR. If I understand you, when I read these various expressions, they speak of the same spirit.

TEACHER.

TEACHER. Yes, I understand them to speak of the fame spirit, according to the various manifestations of it. So when our minds are contemplating the character of the one only living and true God, it must be in the way he manifests himself to us; therefore if we attend to the manifestation of him, as Father, Son, or Holy Ghoft, we attend to the manifestation of the same one God.

SCHOLAR. I would wish to have this matter illustrated further from the Old Testament scriptures?

TEACHER. Have we not the three in one expressly mentioned, Genefis i. 2, And the spirit of the Lord moved on the face of the waters. And verle 26, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness. Verse 27, So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him, male and female created he them.

This feems likewise to be expressed in the form of bleffing, in Numbers vi. 24, 25, 26, The Lord blefs thee, and keep thee. The Lord make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee. The Lord lift his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace. Surely the repetition is not a vain repetition. Compare it with 2d of Corinthians, xiii. chapter and 14 verse, keep thee.

The Lord make his face to fhine upon thee, and be gracious to thec.

The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace.

The Lord bless thee and | The love of God the Father.

> The grace of our LORD IESUS CHRIST.

The communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all.

In the first expression, the Lord bless thee, and keep thee; we are led to the love of God, the fountain of life; in the next, the Lord make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee; we are led to the manifestation of this love in Christ Jesus, the light in which we see light.

The last expression in the blessing, the Lord lift his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace; leads to the communion of the Holy Ghost.

This might be further illustrated by attending to Proverbs viii. 22, to the 31st, Which may be lest to your perusal at your leifure.

SCHOLAR. Tho' I would make the inquiries with reverence, remembering Job's question, Canst thou by fearthing find out God ? Canft thou find out the Almighty to perfection? And his affertion, the Almighty, we cannot find him out; yet bleffed be his name, he hath manifested himself to us in Christ Jesus under the gospel: and it is those manifestations I am endeavouring to understand. As you have given a fimilitude from the New-Testament, if you recollect one from the Old, I wish you to mention it.

TEACHER. I wish to speak of these things with the highest reverence, and to speak of nothing but what the scriptures fully warrant; but in answer to your inquiry, I would fay, I have fomtimes thought of the passage in the xxxvi. Psalm, 7, 8, 9, 10, How excellent is thy loving kindness, O God; therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of the wings. They shall be abundantly fatisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasure; for with thee is the FOUNTAIN of life, in thy light we see light.

If we fland at the head of a fountain where we can find no bottom, it appears unfearchable; but it is manifested to be a fountain, by the constant rivers and streams flowing from it; and by these rivers and streams there is a constant communication of fertility to the adjacent lands; and of drink for the inhabitants, their children and their cattle, wherefoever the rivers come; befides the other advantage from the mills, whereby the corn is prepared for bread, and innumerable other benefits, by the communication of the rivers flowing from the fountain, and as the fountain is unfearchable and manifested by the rivers: So if we follow the rivers all running into the sea, and returning to the place whence they came, we are lost in the contemplation: So also, if we trace the benefits received, or the communion and communications we enjoy by the waters, it will presently carry us beyond our comprehension, and if we are lost in the contemplation of ourselves, and the things which we see, no wonder the things of God knoweth no man but the spirit of God; therefore in our inquiries after the knowledge of him, we are to keep close to the scriptures, wherein we have the mind of the spirit.

SCHOLAR. I would wish to detain you to hear of the other branch of the original question, that as you have indulged my inquiries respecting what we are to believe concerning God, you would also consider what God requires of man?

TEACHER. In general it may be faid, that whatever we are to believe concerning God, shews our obligation to him in that relation or manifestation of himself to us.

If we contemplate him as our Creator, we are his, and confequently to pursue the chief end of our creation-to glorify and enjoy him.

If we consider him as our Lord and King, it binds us to every thing whereby a loyal subjection to him may be manifested; a contrary conduct must weaken our considence in his protection, and tend to our unhappiness.

If we attend to the manifestation of himself to us as our Redeemer, it will shew us we are not our own, but belong to our Lord, Redeemer; being bought with a price, we are to glorify him in our spirit and body, which are his. Our obligations hereto will rise as we are acquainted with the price of our redeemed with M m corruptible things as filver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot.

His condescending to call himself our * husband, binds singleness towards him, which increases our happiness in him.

His relation to us as a father claims our honour, filial affection, and obedient behaviour, particularly it brings to mind the exhortation, Love your enemies, blefs them that curfe you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use and persecute you, That you may be the children of your Father, which is in heaven; for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil, and on the good; and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust, that you may be children of your Father; they were so, but this is to act in character as such.

If we consider God is love, we love him; because he first loved us, and 'tis his direction that we love one another, as he hath loved us.

If we attend to his character as the God of peace, it will lead us to follow peace with all men.

Or as the God of all grace; his grace which hath appeared, bringing falvation to all men; teaches to denyungodliness, and worldly lusts; and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in the world.

SCHOLAR. The remarks you have made, feem to arise very naturally from the characters mentioned; but I was ready to expect something particularly from the scriptures.

TEACHER. This would lead to another general view of the substance of the epistles, of the apostles; in the former part of them they treat of the grace of God made manifest in Christ Jesus: Then of the duty of the disciples consequent thereon. Therefore for that which is particularly enjoined upon us, I refer fer you to the application of the epistles of the apostles, of the Lord and Saviour. I having already mentioned the direction of Jesus Christ, to love our enemies, bless them that curse us, and pray for them that despitefully use us, to which I would add that comprehensive direction: Therefore, all things whatfoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even the same to them; for this is the law and the prophets.

SCHOLAR. It may be of service to me to have those parts of the epistles of the aposlles, that you mentioned, pointed to, that I may turn to them with greater readiness, when my mind is inquiring, what doth God require of man?

TEACHER. You will easily fee in reading themover; but for your present affistance you may take for one lesson, or for your entertainment at one time, the xii and xiii chapters of the epiffle to the Romans, and attend to what we are called too, as members of the one body, of which Christ is the head, according to the place in which we are fet by the various gifts bestowed upon us without slothfulness, being fervent in spirit, serving the Lord: And to see that we be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good—whatever abuse we may meet with in the world. that we live in a quiet subjection to the government that God in his providence has placed over us, and render to all their dues, attending to that love which comprehends every commandment, worketh no ill to his neighbour, and is the fulfilling of the law.

SCHOLAR. As you mentioned subjection to gogernment in this passage, I wish to have you a little more particular on this head, if I should not take up too much of your time.

TEACHER. Civil government derives its honourable origin both from Divine and human authority, as we fee by comparing Romans xiii. i, with 1st of Peter, ii. 13, it is faid in one to be ordained of God, and in the other it is called the ordinance of man.

The bleffing of good government is the greatest of all temporal bleffings, without it no outward privilege, nor even life itself can be enjoyed with any security; and as it is so extensive and universal a bleffing, it carries, in its own nature, univerfal obligation to honour civil rulers, and to pay a ready and chearful obedience to the wholesome laws that are established for the welfare of the whole political body. As this fentiment must approve itself to every one's conscience, he that refisteth must receive to himself condemnation in the very nature of it, as well as by the law of God; but as professing christians, we are bound to be subject for conscience sake. In the above mentioned Rom. xiii. 1st of Peter, ii. from the 13th to the 18th, and Titus iii. 1, we have the exhortations of the apostles of Jesus Christ, upon this subject, to which every one that calls Jesus, Lord, would do well to take heed: And a litile attention to the connection that these exhortations fland in to the grace of the gospel: The grace that brings falvation to all men, will fliew the indisputable, indispensible obligations of Christ's disciples hereunto; fo that civil government cannot be knowingly refisted by them, without refisting an ordinance of God; without slighting the authority of Jesus Christ, and acting counter to the obligations his grace lays on them, and consequently receiving to themselves felf-condemnation.

TEACHER. For another opportunity you may turn to the epiffle to the Ephefians, from the 22d verse of the fourth chapter, to the eighteenth verse of the fixth chapter. And at another time take Colosians iii, from the beginning, to the end of the 6th verse of chapter iv; with 1st of Peter, iii, from the beginning to the end of 13th verse. Your attention at another time may be profitably drawn to 1st Thessalonians, iv, from the beginning, to the end of the 12th verse.

SCHOLAR. I am obliged by your thus turning me to those passages, and purpose as I have opportunity to attend to them.

TEACHER. In the above mentioned passages we have cautions against every hurtful vice and exhortations, to a conduct and conversation becoming the gospel, in following every thing virtuous, praise worthy, and of good report, in the feveral relations we fustain, as husbands or wives, parents or children, masters or fervants, in a diligent attention to the bufiness to which we are called, that we may walk honestly, eat our own bread, and have to give to him that needeth, all built upon, connected with, or flowing from the grace of the gospel, the grace that reigns through righteousness to eternal life by Jesus Christ; in attending to them, you take your direction plainly from the authority of the scriptures, not from the traditions of men; and I would add that I would not have my filence about the epiftles that have not been mentioned, esteemed as neglect; they have been passed over only for brevity's fake, therefore, as the scriptures principally teach what man is to believe concerning God, and what God requires of man; let them dwell in you richly, be your study and your guide, and may the Divine Teacher lead your mind to the understanding of them, that you may grow in acquaintance with the grace therein revealed, even in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jefus Christ, to him be glory, both now and forever,

AMEN.

APPENDIX.

THE study of the Scriptures having been recommended, it may not be amiss to mention one motive in particular to fearch them; that deferves our most ferious attention, contained in the exhortation we have in Job xxii. 21, Acquaint now thyfelf with him, and be at peace, thereby good shall come unto thee. If we take notice of the character to whom this exhortation is given in the foregoing part of the chapter, verses 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11 and 13, to whom he brings to view as a warning, the old way which wicked men have trodden, which were cut down out of time, whose foundation was overflown with a flood, we shall find it a sinful, distressed character; yet even to fuch a character acquaintance with God is able to give peace, because God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them.

Among men, if any person is proposed or introduced to us for an acquaintance, we are desirous first to know his name, then his character, and on knowing his character, if it strike our minds agreeable, we wish to know his thoughts.

Well then, if we wish to comply with the above direction as an external means of our acquaintance with God, let us search the scriptures, where we may find his name, his character, and his thoughts.

If it should please him who caused the light to shine out of darkness in the first creation, to shine into our hearts, to give us the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, we shall be at peace.

When

When Moses speaks of him, he calls him the rock, his work is persect, for all his ways are judgment, a God of truth, and without iniquity. Just and righteous is he; but we need not look for his character distinct from his name, as we do among men, where the name only scrves to distinguish the person, and doth not communicate the character, but the name of which we speak in the various expressions of it, which we find in scripture, always conveys his character; for instance, if we should attend to the name father, so often made use of in the scripture, we should find every thing signified by that name in its persection in him.

It is a name that conveys an indiffolvable relation: Even among men, there is no prodigality or enormity that a fon can commit, that can dissolve the relation; and I suppose it scarce possible to find among earthly parents that are evil, an instance of one that would not wish with all his heart for the reformation of his most profligate son; in most cases parental affections work most strongly towards such a one, and are often expressed in ardent prayer to the father of mercies, and in application to such friends as might be supposed to have influence over such a one, for his reformation; and finally, it must be for want of wisdom, or power in the parent, if it is not accomplished; yet after all the parent is obliged to own and notice this fon, or it will break his will in other instances.

But all this parental affection is but a fiream from the fountain; if ye then that are evil know how to give good gifts to your children, how much MORE SHALL YOUR HEAVENLY FATHER.

But hath it pleased God thus to reveal himself in the scriptures? Yes; verily have we not all one father, hath not one God createdus, Malachi ii. 10. Thus saith Lord, Israel is my son, Exodus iv. 22, For I am a sother to Israel, and Ephraim is my first born, Jeremian xxxi. 9, Is he the God of the Jews only, and not of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also; the Apostle of the Gentiles thus speaks of and to them, For this cause I bow my knees to the father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all, Ephesians iii. 14, 15, and iv. 6, If so, then both Jew and Gentile are in an indissolvable relation to him, for we are all his osser-

But have not both Jew and Gentile been fo captivated by fatan, and alienated from God, as to be denominated the children of the devil, who led them captive at his will, and usurped dominion over them? Undoubtedly; but this, notwithstanding they belong to their Father, who is their Redeemer, in Isaiah lxiii. 16, Father and Redeemer are united, our Father, our Redeemer, thy name from everlasting. O the grace that appears in this name to the captivated children of men! how agreeable to hear the repetition of it eleven times in the prophecy of Isaiah, as well as in other parts of scripture! how cheering to captives to hear of a Redeemer; is there one that is able to accomplish it? Yes; as for our Redcemer, the Lord of hosts is his name; but who knows it? Read Isaiah Ix. 16, thou shalt know that I the Lord am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the mighty one of Facob, and not only thou, but as it is expressed, Chap. xlix. 29, All flesh shall know that I the Lord am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer. Surely acquaintance with his name tends to peace.

Among men the redemption price may be paid for a captive, and fomething may take place to prevent falvation from captivity; but here Saviour and Redeemer are united in the Lord; the Lord of hosts, the mighty one of Jacob, the Lord thy Redeemer, the holy one of Israel; fo that falvation and redemption comes in a fure connexion in confiftence with perfect holiness, agreeable to Zechariah ix. 9, He is just, and having salvation, and to Isaiah xlv. 21, I the Lord and no God else beside me, a just God, and a Saviour, there is none beside me. If there is no God befide the just God and the Saviour, there is falvation in his name; and to know the only living and true God in Jesus Christ, is life eternal; the knowledge of God is the knowledge of the Redeemer and Saviour; the just God and Saviour, therefore the sure hope of eternal life, or the beginning of life eternal, is thereby conveyed to the mind, therefore acquaintance with God is the way of peace, and this would be evidence from every manifestation of himself in the scriptures of truth: If we turn our mind to what Mofes was directed to say to the children of Israel in Egypt, I am the God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob; this is my name forever, and my memorial through all generations. It brings to view the gospel preached to them, that in thy feed, which is Christ, Shall all the nations, kindreds and families of the earth be blefsed. It will correspond with Isaiah liv. 5, The God of the whole earth shall he be called. Thus acquaintance with his name is acquaintance with his character and his thoughts. The prophet Jeremiah, chap. ix. 11, was directed to tell the captives in Babylon, I know the thoughts that I think towards you, thoughts of peace and not of evil. Surely his character and his name of Saviour and Redeemer, gives ground of hope, that these are his thoughts respecting every of the captived children of men, whom fatan hath led captive at his will: For, thus faith the Lord, the captives of the mighty shall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible shall be delivered.

The foregoing hints may ferve to open a subject to contemplation, that will never close: but these hints may lead our minds to the further study of his name, in the various manifestations of it, expressed in the scripture; forever blessed be his name, he hath manifested himself to us therein.

If the study of his name is accompanied with the illumination the disciples were favoured with, when he opened their understandings, that they might understand the scriptures, it will open up the plain meaning of fuch paffages, as shew the name of the Lord, a firong tower, to which the righteous run and are fafe, They that know thy name, will trust in thee; in his name shall the Gentiles trust. The Gentiles, those who were accounted far off, finners of the Gentiles, the most destitute in themselves, in all parts of the carth, the north and the fouth, which he has created, Tabor and Hermon, (east and west) shall rejoice in thy name. Thus will the ground of those exhortations be understood, which direct, To rejoice ever more, to rejoice in the Lord always, and again to rejoice, and the poor among men, shall rejoice in the Holy One of Ifrael, who remembered us in our low estate, for his mercy forever.

Introduction.

THE Pfalms, or book of Praifes, are like a treasure locked up, which cannot be seen without the key, to open that wherein the riches is contained: However, we may admire the external ornaments of the covering.

While we view them as testifying of good men, we are blundering after creature righteousness, wishing we could come to their attainments, that we could say as good David did in many of the expressions of uprightness, fincerity and love to the divine precepts, which are found in the Psalms; then we were ready to imagine we should have hope, &c.

Whereas, if we view David's character as a man, we shall find it justly summed up by himself in three words, I have sinned, and his hope could only be found in the gospel preached to him by the prophet Nathan, The Lord hath put away thy sin—thou shall not die. With an eye to the same all-sufficient and exclusive ground of hope, contained in the appearing of Jesus Christ to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

But when it is given us to understand the expressions of our Lord and Saviour to his disciples, when he discoursed with them of the Psalms, concerning me, and of the Apostle, Asts ii. 25, "for David speaketh concerning him," verse 31, "he seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not lest in hell, neither did his sless see corruption." We are helped to the key according to the Apostle, when it shall turn to the Lord, the vale shall be shaken away; then the expressions of sincerity, uprightness and love to the divine precepts, appear to be the truth as it is in Jesus: Who being our head, is made to us of God's wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption: And our compleatness is in him, then shall we abundantly utter the memory of thy great goodness, and sing of thy righteousness, which will cause us to cease from man, from any pretence to, or hope in creature righteousness.

The first Psalm speaks of Jesus as the blessed man, and points out his perfect character, which cannot be assumed by, or applied to, any other. When this bleffed one appeared in the world, bringing grace and falvation to men, we have the heathen, and the people, Jews and Gentiles raging, imagining a vain thing, the kings of the earth, and their rulers taking counsel against the Lord, as recorded in the 2d Pfalm, and in the 3d Pfalm, the many, the increafing multitude rifing up against him, with how great propriety is the 8th verse ushered in, salvation to the Lord, thy bleffing upon thy people; furely Jew and Gentiles, Kings and Rulers, with the increasing multitude must join in not unto us; not unto us, but to thy name, give glory, for thy mercy and truth's fake.

To this mercy and truth manifested in Christ Jesus as the center of all our hopes, the subject of all our songs, the Hymns, and Spiritual Songs, are attempted to be directed in plain scriptural languages, which is esteemed to excel poetical elegance, as tending more to edification, by bringing to view the holy scriptures, which are able to make wife to salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus.

A fmall Collection of Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs.

The connexion of the first and second PSALMS.

I.

THE bleffedness of the man,
Of which the pfalms relate,
Employ with joy, my mind and pen,
They are exceeding great.

Behold this ever bleffed man,
Who never walketh in Ungodly counfel, nor will fland
With those who live in fin.

III.

Nor can we see him while we sit
With pride, in scorner's chair;
This spotless character cannot Appear as sitting there.

IV.

For in the perfect law of Gon, He plac'd his whole delight, Attending to it constantly, Both in the day and night.

V.

'Tis he the precious tender plant, Of which Ifaiah flew, The righteous branch, plant of renown, The Prophets had in view.

VI.

He's like a tree that planted is
By rivers fertile fides,
That in his feafon yields his fruit,
And ever green abides.

VII.

Prosperity on him attends, Whatever he commands, The pleasure of JEHOVAH shall Still prosper in his hands.*

Not fo the ungodly, no, his hope Shall never with him ftay; But like the chaff before the wind, Be driven clean away.

Х.

Because the Lord, the righteous way With approbation knows, While the ungodly in his way, He wholly overthrows.

The fecond PSALM.

WHY? When this bleffed man appears, In perfect purity, Who has prosperity insur'd, Why rage the heathen? Why?

The people too, a vain thing think, Tho' prince and rulers join, And fet themselves against the LORD, Against his CHRIST combine.

III.

III.

Their bands, in union cast on us, Forbiding us to teach, And straitway charging in that name, We never more should preach.

IV.

Lets' break by faying unto them, Judge ye if that we may, Adhere to you, more than to God, Thus cast their cords away.*

V.

At all the sons of pride,

That thus combine against his Christ,

The Lord shall them deride.

VI.

In his displeasure and his wrath,
He then to them will speak,
What must them vex, while they oppose;
His will they cannot break.

VII.

Yet tho' you plot and rage 'tis vain,
I've fet my King upon,
Zion my hill of holiness,
He 'stablish'd is thereon.

VIII.

JESUS the firm decree declares, The LORD hath faid to me,

Thou

* In the second Psalm, the word saying at the end of the second verse, that appears supplied by the Translators, seems to make the third verse the language of those that take counsel against the Lord; but is there not ground to consider the third verse as the language of the Lord's people, when the very persons spoken of in the Psalm charged them, not to speak at all, nor teach in the name of Jesus? They break their bands by saying, Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye, for we cannot but speak the things which we have heard and seen; we ought to obey God rather than man; Acts iv. 17, 18, 19, 12-25, 26, 27, and chap, y. 29.

Thou art my Son, this very day
I have begotten thee.*

IX.

Ask of me thine inheritance,

The heathen I will give,

Possession thine's the utmost parts,

X.

Their opposition shall be broke, As with an iron rod, And dash'd as Potter's vessel is, That under foot is trod.

XI.

Now therefore, O ye kings be wife, Princes instruction gain, Serve him with fear, and trembling joy, For's mercies yet remain.

XII.

You perish by his anger sure, In keeping your own way, Then kiss the Son, for blessed are All who upon him stay.

Pfalm

* Jesus Christ through his whole life, particularly in his publick ministry, claimed the character that is declared in this seventh verse of the second Psalm, agreeable to the truth he heard of God at his baptism, and supported his claim by the works he did in his Father's name, which bear witness of him. He was charged with blasphemy, because he said, I am the son of God, making himself equal with God; the decision of the controversy was put on his resturrection from the dead, by which, as saith the Aposlie, Rom. i. 4. He is determined the Son of God, with power according to the spirit of holiness. So the Aposlie, when treating of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, Acts xiii. 30 to the 33d, says, but God raised him from the dead, and he was seen many days of them which came up with him from Gallilee to Jerusalem, who are his witnesses unto the people, and we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promise that was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled in that he hath raised Jesus again, as it is also written in the 2d Psalm. Thou are my Son, this day have I begotten thee; shewing it referred to the day of his resurrection, when the controversy is determined, and the decree declared.

PSALM LXXXVII.*

HIS foundation for his church Immovably is laid, In holy mountains, where it stands, Securely ever staid.

H.

The Lord the gates of Zion loves,
Tho' barr'd to human pride,
To Jesus, and through him to his
Are ever open wide.

Ш.

Not Jacob's dwellings ever can Be fo divinely fair, As to produce a character, That claims admittance there.

IV.

*This 87th Pfalm appears to be a prophetic description of the gathering all things into one in Christ Jesus, under the metaphor of a city, which is God's building, taking notice first of the security of the foundation, as fixed in the hely mountains. Jesus, the foundation of the church, is the holy one: Then of the gates, which the Lord loves more than all the dwellings of Jacob; by the gate, the way, the door, we understand the entrance. Thus Jesus is the way, Jesus is the door, and saith, by me, it any man enter in, he shall be saved. The entrance into this city, being Jesus, in whom the father is well pleased; Jesus, his beloved Son, in whom we are accepted, he having made us accepted in the beloved, the dwellings of Jacob cannot procure a character that can be accepted out of him.

Then the prophetic description goes on, taking notice of the glorious things spoken of the city of God. These are so great, that the mention of them is ready to stagger the faith even of those that know him, to whom he condescends to make mention of Rahab and Babylon. Rahab, or Egypt, where the children of Israel were in bondage 400 years, had their deliverance, the same day that had been before appointed; and thus was likewise accomplished their return from Babylon after a captivity of 70 years, according to the promise of God by Jeremiah, Chap. xxix. 10.

Behold Phylistia and Tyre, with Ethiopia. This was born there. When we object to the solvation of the heathen, because they know not God, we lose fight of the Gospel preached to Abraham, and even forget that God knows them.

But those things that appear as hindrances, or those places that appeared as enemies, are shown to be the places where this is born to view, which was to be more particularly understood in Zion, where this and that man, reputed enemies and friends, Jew and Gentile were united as one. Born to view as one new man in Christ, which union into one building, one city, should be established by the Most High, who when he took account of the particular inhabitants, though a great multitude, which no man could number, yet are all included in one in Christ Jesus, which being understood, set every form of praise in metion; the grand chorus of the Song is, all my springs are in thee.

ാര

IV.

Exceeding great, and glorious things,
Are spoken in the word,
To be accomplished in thee,
O city of the LORD.

V.

Should any doubt, they'll be fulfill'd, Of those my name that know, Egypt nor Babel could not let, What I purpos'd to do.

VI.

The Gentiles, Palefiine, and Tyre, With Ethiopia too; Instead of hindering is the place, Where this is born to view.

VII.

Of Zion too it shall be told,

Both this and that man were,

Both Few, and Gentile, one in Christ,

Each born together there.

'Tis not the wisdom, or the power, Of any mortal men; It is the work of the Most High, She shall be stablish'd then.

IX.

The Lord when he the people writes,
Tho' more than men can count, Rev. vii. 9.
This one new man in Jesus Christ,
Makes up the whole amount.

Χ.

Those who can fing, and cheerful say,
For ever praise the Lord,
With those on Instruments that play,
Shall join with one accord.

XI.

To shout the praises of thy love, For all their song shall be, My springs of hope, of life, and joy, Are ever all in thee.

PLALM

PSALM CXVII.

LET nations all, of every tongue, Unite to praise the Lord; And people all, of every land, To praise his name accord.

TT.

Because his kindness merciful, And truth forever fure, Is most exceeding great to us,* And ever shall endure.

Let old and young, let low and high, Together here accord; And every foul, from all the earth, Unite to praise the Lord.

PSALM CXXXIII.

The fpirit of Prophecy in this Pfalm appears to point to the love among the first Disciples on the day of Penticost the fruit of the Spirit fent down consequent on the Great High-Priest's going into the heavenly holy place, in virtue of his own blood, now to appear in the prefence of God for us.

T.

BEHOLD! a good and pleasant fight, In brethren that agree, In Christ their head, and thence are led To love and unity.

Like precious ointment that ran down, The head of Ifrael's Priest, To's garments, where their names he wear, That thus they might be bleft.

* To us, the mercy and truth is doubtless as extensive as the call to praise him; for Psalm lxxii. 17, " all nations shall call him bessed." Jeremiah iv. 2, " the nations shall bless themselves in him, and in him shall they glory."

III.

Like fruitful Hermon's useful dew, That bleffings there produce, Which Zion's mountains plenty shew, For Israel's daily use.

IV.

These shew the blessing God commands, Laid up in plenteous store, In Jesus sure it shall endure, 'Tis life forevermore.

I.

A UNIVERSAL shout of joy,
Now to Jehovah bring,
Ye heav'ns high, ye angels all,
Unite his praise to sing.
II.

Praise him ye sun, and moon, and stars, Ye heaven of heavens too, And waters that above them are, For he created you.

ΊΠ,

His glorious power, his arm of might, Upholds you where you are; By his established decree, You ever stand fast there.

IV.

Let dragons, deeps, and cattle all,
Praise him from earth below;
Fire, hail and vapor, join herein,
With stormy wind and snow.
V.

Let mountains praise, and all the hills, And sowls of every wing, The fruitful trees, and cedars all, And evry creeping thing.

VI.

Come and agree his name to praife, Ye Kings of noble birth, Together with each one that makes All people of the earth.

VII

Princes to him by whom you rule, Your grateful homage bring; And all the judges of the earth, Praife our Almighty King.

VIII.

Both young men and the maidens too, Old men and children small, In confort here most gladly join, His praise becomes you all.

IX.

Come one and all unite to praise, The Lord's exalted name; In which his glory is above Both earth and heaven's frame.

X.

This is the name that Jesus hath,
Above each name always,
That in his name each knee should bow,
And tongue confess his praise.

XI.

Thus he exalts his people's horn,
That's raifed up for us,
E'en our falvation's mighty horn,
In's fervant David's house.

XII.

He is the subject of the praise,
Of all with one accord,
His saints, his Israel, near to him,
O then praise ye the Lord.

Deut. x. 21. He is thy praise.
I.

THE glory of the church's head, Be ever on our mind, The subject of our songs in him, May we forever find.

II.

From antichristian pride in songs, May we be fase preserv'd, Nor ever dare of our own worth, To sing before the Lord.

III.

To him whose life fulfill'd the law, Whose death doth fin attone, Whose resurrection from the dead, Proves him the Holy one.

To him who lives for evermore,
A priest to intercede,
And all who come to God by him,
Can save in utmost need.

V.

E'en him who to the holiest Is gone, with his own blood, And ever pleads his worthiness, Before the throne of God.

VI.

To him who came to feek and fave, The altogether lost, Be our high praises in our songs, For evermore address'd.

VII.

To him who fav'd the dying thief; Call'd perfecuting Saul; Look't Peter to repentance too, After his fearful fall.

VIII.

To him who fet th' Adulterous free, And wash'd Corinthians stain, Who found Ephesians dead in sin, And quicken'd them again.

IX.

To him who the redeemed church, Afcribe all worth alone, And conftant pay their folemn praise, Agreeing all in one.

Χ.

To him then be all praise ascrib'd, With universal reign, And glory, honour, power, and might, For evermore, AMEN.

CHRIST RIDING TO JERUSALEM.

Ī.

REJOICE, O Zion's daughter here, With joy, exceeding great, rejoice: And let Jerus'lem's daughter too, Join in with joyful shouting voice.

11.

Behold thy King cometh to thee, With splendid ornaments divine; He's just, and yet salvation hath, In lowly meekness he doth shine.

III.

BEHOLD him riding in upon A colt his own, for him prepar'd,*
On which no man before had fat,
Attend and hear the King declar'd.

IV.

^{*} The owners held their title under their Lord: So Jesus faith to his disciples, "fay the Lord hath need of him, and straitway he will fend him." Mark xi. 3, 5, 6. Luke xix. 33. IV.

A multitude, lo! very great,
With chearfulness their garments lay;*
Others cut goodly branches down,†
And joyful spread them by the way.
V.

Hark! hear the flout of highest joy, —
Of which we heard the prophet treat,
By those that go along before,
Which they who follow loud repeat.

VI.

Hosanna, bleffed Ifrael's King,
That cometh in the name, the Lord,
Hosanna to King David's Son,
Hosanna high with one accord.
VII.

Look! fee among the crowded throng, Children aloud hofanna cry; § But it offends chief priests and scribes, Who were spectators standing by.

Were I among the multitude, Methinks I'd listen then to hear, Doth he reject, or now accept, The praises of the children dear.

From babes and fucklings he approves,
The praises of his worthy name,
And asks chief priests and scribes, if they Remember'd not to read the same.

But 'ere I leave this wond rous fight, Methinks I long to hear the King, His speech, the laws, his will, the news, He doth his vast dominions bring.

* Matthew xxi. 8. † Mark xi. 8. ‡ Matthew xxi. 9. Hofanna feems to be the acclamation of falvation and praise, or falvation and praise to the son of David. § Matthew xxi. 15. || Matthew xxi. 16.

XI.

He to the heathen shall speak PEACE,*
The ancient prophet testifies;
Peace in the Heav'ns; and glory int
The highest; multitudes replies.

PEACE comprehends the bleffed news ; And tho' I cannot longer flay,
To hear his speech, his laws, his will,
I'd bear this olive-branch away.

FRIENDSHIP.

Proveres xvii. 17.

A Friend loveth at all Times.

These mercies which we now relate,
Altho' they are exceeding great,
And claim our constant praising breath,
Yet even in their highest prime,
Are chiesly bounded here by time,

AN ADDRESS TO THE READER.

PERHAPS you may be ready to fay, on looking over the foregoing, I find, as far as I have read, every fong centers in the refurrection of Christ: Why, or whence is it that that event is fo much infifted on? I answer, for the same reason, * that the Apostles of Christ in all their preaching and writing had this truth in view, as the only foundation of their hope:

^{*} Acts ii. 32,—lb. ch. iii. 15—iv. 10—33—v. 30—vii. 52, 55, 56.—x. 40—xiii. 30, 33, 34, 37.—xvii. 3, 31. Thus for the Apostle's preaching, to turn to their writings on this hand would be too Lengthy.

If CHRIST be not raifed our preaching is vain, ye are yet in your firs, and those who have fallen afleep in Christ are perished; but now is Christ rifen from the dead, and by his accomplishing a perfect obedience to the divine Law, and fuffering the penalty annexed to our transgression, was fulfilled the prophecy of the Old Testament, of his finishing transgreffion, making an end of fin, bringing in everlafting righteousness; so that the universal Church shall call him the LORD our righteousness, and every member shall fay, Surely in the Lord have I righteoufness. Now when he was on earth, claiming the character of him who was to accomplish this, and proving it by his works, he is called a blasphemer, the iffue of the controverly is put on his refurrection, and this event taking place, he is declared the Son of God with power according to the Spirit of Holiness, and made it evident that he has accomplished our deliverance from the curse of the law, by being made a curse for us; in that law and justice could hold him no longer, for it was not possible he should be holden of death. Hence, faith the Apostle, He died for our offences, and rose again for our justification, and hence we read of the answer of a good conscience by the resurrection of Jesus Christ; and that it is God that justifieth, who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, year ather that is rifen again: Consequently, the Apostle took great care to keep this in the memory of the Disciples, Remember that Fesus Christ, of the seed of David, was raised from the dead, according to my gospel, 2 Timothy, ii. 8. Salvation by the death and refurrection of Christ, is the gospel, the Apostles preached among them, by which, faith Paul, Ye are faved if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you. To keep this truth in my own and your memory is the defign in view, as the understanding, remembrance of this truth will fave us from the distressing anxiety anxiety of the curse of the law, and the innumerable perplexities consequent thereon through life, and at the hour of death, to which we are all without exception hastening; For it is appointed unto man once to die. Surely then, that by which we are saved from the sting of death, ought to be ever had in remembrance.

HEBREWS ix. 27.

Doth thence falute our ears,

SECTION X.

Introduction.

THE method of teaching children and youth by catechifing, is undoubtedly very instructing, if the matter taught is acceptable words, even written upright words of truth, which flow from divine wifdony, and are as goads and nails fastened, for the direction of masters of assemblies, which are given from one shepherd. The Assemblies catechism being thought exceptionable in many places, when compared with this rule, bath induced fome among us to lay it aside; and having been requested by some worthy friends, to endeavour to put into their hands fomething in this way as an affiftant in instructing their children, I have thought that as the Assemblies shorter catechism had been made familiar by use, and contained many excellent things, it might comport with the request of my friends. To endeavour a more plain scriptural answer to some parts of it, and to presentitinevery answeragreeable to the scriptures of truth; an acquaintance with which, is a principal end we ought to have in view in the instruction of children and youth; for this end, I have fet the proofs in the margin, as well as to appeal to them for the truth and confiftency of the answers. All that can be faid to recommend it, is, it is an affemblage of divine scriptures, calculated to instruct the mind in a more plain, eafy and fatisfactory manner, than can be done in words which man's wisdom teacheth, by the most respectable assembly of mortal men. As it is, it is commended to the only wife God our Saviour, praying he would please to accompany it with the enlightening influences of his holy spirit to those who read or use it. AMEN.

Question. WHAT is the chief end of man?

Answer. Man's chief end is to Coll.i.16. John xvii. 24.

glorify God and enjoy him forever.

O. What rule hath God given to direct us how we may glorify and enjoy him ?

A. He hath given us in the Scriptures of the Old and New-Pfalm cxix. 9, 105. Testament, the only rule to direct us how we may glorify and enjoy him.

O. What doth the Scriptures principally teach?

A. They principally teach, what Ifai. xly. 21. man is to believe concerning God, Matt. vii. 12. and what God requires of man.

Q. What is God? A. God is a Spirit, infinite, eter-John iv. 24. nal and unchangeable, in his being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth.

Q. Are there more Gods than

A. There

Deuteronomy vi. 4.

Ifai. lxiii. 16.

Eph. i. 3.

2 John, 3. Gen. i. 2.

A. There is but one only living and true God.

O. How doth the only living and true God make himfelf known?

A. He maketh himfelf known as a Father in Christ Jesus, who is by nature his only begotten Son, and at all times, and in all places, by his operations as the Holy Spirit.

Q. How may I understand your expression, " Who is by nature his only begotten Son?"

A. Referring to the expression of the apostle, "When ye knew not God, ye did fervice to them that by nature are no gods;" which shews, that the apostles and first disciplesworshipped Christ as God by nature.

Q. If Christ be the only begotten Son of God, how are believers called the fons of God?

A. As having the adoption of children by Jesus Christ.

Q. What further evidence is there that Jefus Christ is God by nature?

A. When he took on him our nature, thereby taking the human nature into union with himself, God was manifest in the slesh; creation, providence and redemption, being attributed to him; in which the eternal purpose of God, according to the counsel of his own will, for his own glory, is executed.

Q. What is the work of creation? A. The work of Creation is God's fpeaking all things into being, by the word of his power, in the space of fix days, and all very good.

O. How did God create man?

A. In the image of God created he him, male and female created Gen. i. 27, and v. 2. he them, and he bleffed them, and called their name Adam.

O. What are God's works of Providence ?

A. His works of providence are, Pfalm exix. 91. his most holy, wife, and powerful Matt. x. 29, 30, 31, preferving and governing all his creatures, and all their actions.

Q. What special att of providence did God exercife towards man in the state wherein he was created?

A. When God created man, he gave him a test of his obedience, Gen. ii. 17, and iii. 3. forbidding him to eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, upon pain of death.

Q. Did our first parents continue in the flate wherein they were created ?

A. Our first parents fell from Gen. iii. 6, 11, 12, the state wherein they were created Rom. v. 12. by finning against God.

Q. What is fin?

A. Sin is the transgression of the 1 John iii. 4. law of God.

O. Did all mankind fall in Adam's first transgression?

A. By one man, fin entered into Rom. iii. 23. the world, and death by fin, fo death Rom. v. 12. paffed upon all, for that all have finned, being included in the one as their head.

Q. Into what estate did the fall bring mankind?

Rom. viii. 22, & iii. 16.

A. Into a state of fin and misery.

O. Did God leave all mankind to perish in the state of sin and misery?

A. God having, out of his mere good pleasure, made known the mystery of his will, which he hath purposed in himself, that, in the dispensation of the sulness of time, he might gather together in one, all things in Christ, hath manifested that he hath not left them to perish in a state of sin and misery, but hath brought them into a state of salvation in a redeemer.

Q. Did Jefus Christ, thus taking our nature, as our head, accomplish our redemption?

A. He was made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law: taking our nature into union with him. felf, the law took hold of him as our furety, and was fully fatisfied, by his perfect obedience to the will of God, and his one facrifice (which was witneffed in his refurrection.) Thus he hath appeared to put away fin by the facrifice of himfelf; and by his own blood; he entered into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption.

Q. How are we made partakers of the redemption which is in Christ Jesus?

A. By the effectual application if to to us, by his Holy Spirit.

Eph. ii. 13.

Ġal. iv. 4, 5.

Chap. ix. 12, 26.

1 Cor. ji. 10, 11, 12.

Q. How

Q. How doth the Spirit apply this redemption to us?

A. By taking of the things of Christ, and shewing them to us, enabling us to perceive the certain John xvi. 14, 15. evidences of the truth testified of him, as our Lord and Saviour.

Q. How doth the Spirit shew to Titus i. 4.

us that Jefus is the Lord?

A. By fatisfying our minds of the truth of the Scriptures, wherein this is made manifest, and subjecting them to his authority; for no man can say that Jesus is the Lord but 1 Cor. xii. 3. by the Holy Ghost.

Q. How doth the Spirit shew to us that Jesus is the Saviour?

A. By enlightening our minds, to understand the types, prophesies, Acts x. 43. Acts xiii. 23. priesthood, and facrifices of the Old Testament, to center and have their complete sulfilment in the priesthood and facrifice of Christ, the Heb. ix. 7—12. Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world; so as to cause us, with satisfaction of mind, to look to, and rest in him, as our complete and only Saviour.

Q. What benefits do they that are taught of God to know Jefus Christ, as their Lord and Saviour, partake of in this life?

A. They that believe that Jesus Christis their Lord and Saviour, do in this life partake of justification, Rom. iii. 26, 28. adoption, and fanctification, and the Acts xv. 9. several benefits which in this life do accompany or flow from them.

Gal. iv. 4, 5.

Rom. viii. 15. Gal. iv. 6.

1 Cor. i. 39.

Heb. xiii. 12.

Q. What is justification?

A. Justification is a freedom from condemnation, by the satisfaction of law and justice, even by Jesus Christ, who hath delivered us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us. Or thus; justification is an act of God's free grace, wherein he pardoneth all our sins, and accepteth us as righteous in his sight, only for the righteousness of Christ, imputed to us, and received in believing.

Q. What is adoption?

A. Adoption is of God's free grace in Christ Jesus, in whom we are received as children, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ.

Q. What is the spirit of adoption, as received by us?

A. The spirit of adoption is the right understanding and firm belief of our union with Christ, and son-ship in him, whereby we are enabled to call God in Christ our Father.

Q. What is fanctification?

A. Our fanctification, as well as adoption and justification, is in Christ, who is made to us of God, fanctification, who, that he might fanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate.

Q. What is the difference between fanctification and justification?

A. Justification conveys the idea of our being furnished with a righteouspies teousness which the law demands, which we have in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us righteousness. Sanctification leads to the idea of that purification we stand in need of in our state of pollution and defilement, by our disobedience, which we have in Christ Jesus, who said, "Lo I come to do thy will;" by the which will we are fanctisted, through the offering of Heb. x. 9, 10, the body of Jesus Christ once.

Q. What are the benefits which

Q. What are the benefits which in this life do accompany, or flow from justification, adoption and fanctification?

A. The benefits that accompany or flow from them, are affurance of God's love, peace of conscience, Rom. v. 1, 11. joy in the Holy Ghost, increasing in the knowledge of the grace which is in Christ Jesus, as their only hope to the end.

Q. What benefits do believers hope for from Christ at their death, and in the refurrettion?

A. That he may be with them through the dark valley of the sha- Psalm xxiii. 4, 6, dow of death, and that they may be 1 Thess. iv. 17, with him to behold his glory.

Q. What is the duty which God requires of man?

A. The duty which God requires of man, is obedience to his reveal- 1 Sam. xv. 22, ed will.

Q. What did God reveal to man, as the rule of his obedience?

A. God

Exodus xx.

A. God gave to the children of Ifrael, from mount Sinai, wrote on two tables, the ten commandments. commonly called the moral law.

Q. In the fourth commandment, thus delivered to Ifrael, the feventhday fabbath is enjoined; how doth it appear, that believing Gentiles are freed from it?

A. They were never under it: Neither did Jesus Christ, who is the Lord of the fabbath, in any of his expositions of the law, or his exhortations to the people, enjoin it upon them, nor any of his Apostles after him; but sufficiently shew, that it was not the defign of the gospel to bring Gentile believers under the law.

Q. The law of the feventh-day fabbath is a portion of Scripture, and is it not for our learning, on whom the ends of the world is come?

A. Yes, verily! it was given for a fign to the children of Ifrael, that Exod. xxxi. 13, 16, 17. they may know that I am the Lord that doth fanctify them; therefore it leads us to the thing fignified by that fign.

Q. What is signified to us there-

A. It leads to the Lord, that doth fanctify both them and us, even Jesus Christ, who is made to us of God sanctification.

Q. How doth the fabbath point to Christ?

Mark ii. 23. Luke vi. 5. Acts xv. 24 to 29, and the Epistle to the Gal.

r Cor. i. 30.

A. It

A. It was a perfect rest, in commemoration of the creation, when God refted from all his works of creation, because they were very good, pointing to and centering in, the finished work of redemption, producing the new creation, in Heb. iv. 16. which we are created anew in Christ Tefus.

Q. What authority have we, from the New Testament, to conclude the fabbath thus applies to Christ?

A. The fabbath is mentioned as the shadow of things to come, but Col. ii. 16, 17. the body is Christ; in the shadow, they were to do no manner of work, because in fix days God finished the work of creation, and rested the feventh: In the substance, Christ Jesus having finished the work Isai. xi. 10. of redemption, we are, through the Matt. xi. 28, 29. whole of this gospel day, to rest in Matt. iii. 17. it because in it the Father is well pleafed; as complete, that nothing can be added by us, any more than to work of creation, to which our attention is particularly called, on the first day of the week.

O. What warrant have Christ's disciples for observing the first day of the week?

A. It was the day on which Je-Mark xvi. beginning, fus Christ rose from the dead, which evidenced the completion of the work of redemption; on that day he appeared to his disciples the first and fecond time; the first publick John xx. 19, 26. meeting meeting of the Apostles and first disciples was on that day, viz. the day of Penticost, which was the morrow after the Jewish sabbath; and from that day, ever after, they met on the first day of the week; and the observation of the first day of the week has ever since been in practise, down to our day.

Q. Was there any type of this change under the Old-Testament dispensation.

Lev. xxiii. 11. Lev. xxiii. 36. John vii. 37. Numb. vi. 10. Lev. xiv. 10, 23. Lev. ix. 1, 30.

A. The first fruits were offered on the morrow after the fabbath; the eighth day was the great day of the feast of tabernacles; the Nazarite was accepted on the eighth day; the cleanfed leper was to bring his offering for cleanfing on the eighth day. After Aaron, the Jewish high priest, and his sons had been confecrated feven days, the offering for them and the people, was on the eighth day; when, in token of acceptance, fire came out from before the Lord, and confumed the offering; all pointing to, and entering in the antitype of these offerings and purifications. Their being offered on the eighth day, appears to point to the resurrection of Jesus Christ, the manifestation of his acceptance as our high priest and purifier; and in his, we have the witness of our acceptance, justification, fanctification and redemption: And by believing, we enter into the rest he hatk hath entered into, as our head; and are partakers of an holy fabbath kept through time and eternity.

O. What doth the observation of the first day of the week imply?

A. Though multitudes observe it from tradition, without under-John iv. 42. flanding, yet it is plain to those who understand, that, in the nature of it, it implies a belief that Jesus is the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

O. How ought the disciples of Christ to conduct in the observation

A. By endeavouring to acquaint themselves with the Scriptures, that testify of the character and finished work of Christ, and shew the import of his refurrection, that they may with understanding, celebrate it with joy and thankfgiving, and by meeting together, to worship God in Christ; to hear of his glory, and fing of his grace and mercy, and to break bread, in remembrance of Acts xx. 7. him, in imitation of the first disciples in the primitive churches.

Q. What rule is given to believing Gentiles, under the New-Testament dispensation?

A. Jesus Christ hath summed up the moral law in these words, "Thou Matt. xxii.37,38,39,48. shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, and with all thy foul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment, and the fecond is like unto it, "Thou Luke x. 27.

fhalt love thy neighbour as thyfelf. On these two hang all the law and the prophets."

Q. How is this understood?

r John v. 3.

A. To love God with all the heart, will exclude any other God, and excite to worship him in Christ Jesus, which isto worship him in spirit and truth, to reverence his name, and observe his institutions. To love our neighbour as ourselves will excite honour, duty and respect to magistrates, parents and superiors, and prevent hatred, malice, murder, fornication, adultery, thest, salse witness, and covetousness. Love worketh no ill to his neighbour, therefore love is the suffilling of the law.

Q. What doth the preface to the ten commandments, delivered to Ifrael at mount Sinai, teach us?

A. The preface, which is, "I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, and out of the house of bondage, teacheth us, that because God is the Lord and our God, and Redeemer, therefore we are under the highest obligations to obedience to him."

Q. Is any man able to keep the

A. No mere man, fince the fall is able, in this life, perfectly to keep the commandments of God, but doth daily break them, in thought, word and deed.

Rom. xiii. 1.

Q. Where is then our hope?

Q. How are the believers of this Gospel to conduct themselves ?

A. They are to manifest their gratitude by a thankful, cheerful Psalm. 1. 23. obedience to his will, attending to his word and institutions, with prayer for his grace, that they may adorn the doctrine of God their Saviour, Phill. i. 27. by a conversation becoming the Gospel.

Q. How is the word to be attended to for this end?

A. The reading and preaching of the word is to be attended with Col. iii. 16, 17. diligence, that we may, by a growing acquaintance with the grace therein exhibited, be more and more acquainted with our obligations to the duties therein enjoined upon us, in every relation and circumstance of life.

Q. What are the institutions of the New-Testament?

A. The institutions of the New-Matt. xxviii. 19. Testament have been commonly r Cor. xi. 22, 24, 25, 26. called baptism and the Lord's supper.

Q. What is baptifm?
A. The New-Testament speaks of John's baptism, and the baptism of Christ.

Q. What is John's baptism?

A. John, as the forerunner of Christ, baptized with water, calling the people to repentance of every expectation of falvation from the observation of the law, or from any fupposed superiority one over another, by strict attention to it; full falvation being in the Messiah, for all, without distinction; for John verily baptized with water, faying, "To the people, that they should believe on him that should come after, that is Christ Jesus."

Q. What is the baptifm of Christ?

O. There is the baptism that Christ was baptized with, and the baptism wherewith he baptized.

O. What is the baptism that Christ was baptized with?

A. That of which he spake, when he faid, "I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I ftraitened until it be accomplished;" in which he spake of hisagony and death, that he tells the fons of Zebedee they should partake in.

O. How is that to be understood?

A. By that union which was manifested in his drawing all men unto him, when he was lifted up, and tafting death for every man; fo that when one died for all, all died.

Q. What

Q. What evidence have we of this, feeing it was spoken only to the sons of Zebedee ?

A. The Apostle appears to have it in view, when he speaks of being buried with him in baptism, and Col. ii. 12. fays, "Know ye not, that so many Rom. vi. 3. of us as were baptized in Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death," as being confidered in him in his fufferings and death, and partakers of the benefit of it.

Q. Why was Jesus Christ baptized with water in John's baptism?

A. He gave the answer to John, "Thus it becometh us to fulfil all Matt. iii. 15. righteousness," speaking as the head, Matt. v. 18. and intimating his relation to the people. This took place under the law dispensation; and Jesus Christ being made under it, that not one Matt. iii. 17. jot or tittle of the ceremonial, as well as the moral law, should fail; thus fulfilled the righteousness of it, and had this testimony by a voice from Heaven, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased;" John i. 33. and was thus evidenced to John to be he that should baptize with the Holy Ghost.

Q. What was the baptism wherewith he baptized?

A. John fays, " I indeed baptize Acts i. 4, 5. with water, but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost;" and Jesus told his disciples, before his ascenfion, "Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost." Q. What

Q. What is intended by being baptized with the Holy Ghoft?

A. Baptizing with the Holy Ghost immerses the mind in the dostrine of Christ, so as to perceive the evidence of the truth and the sulness of the salvation exhibited in the Gospel, freeing from condemnation, and surnishing the answer of a good conscience towards God, by the resurrection of Christ.

Q. What may be understood by the passages where mention is made of Christ baptizing with the Holy Ghost and with fire?

A. Fire communicates light and heat, refines gold and filver, and confumes every thing that is fuel for it; so the baptism of the Holy Ghost both enlightens the mind to understand the doctrine of Christ, and warms the heart with gratitude and joy, under a fense of the exceeding riches of the grace therein made manifest, and gives a lively hope of deliverance, in due time, from all the defilement that cleaves to us; and that every thing, wherewith we are encompassed through the temptations of Satan and the weakness of the slesh, as wood, hay, stubble, tares or chaff, shall be entirely feparated from us, by him who hath his fan in his hand, and will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather the wheat into his garner, and burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire. Q. What is the Lord's Supper? A. The Lord's Supper is an institution of Christ, wherein his love is brought to remembrance, in gathering together the whole purcha- I Cor. xvi. 17. fed possession into one, in himself, as the many grains are gathered into one bread, or the many grapes into one cup, his body being given, Luke xxii. 19, 20. and his blood shed, not only for his John vi. 33, 51. immediate disciples, but for the life of the world; and his disciples breaking bread and drinking wine, in remembrance of him, hereby fhew forth to the world their fatiffaction in, professed subjection to, and dependence upon, a crucified, 1 Cor. 31, 26, risen Saviour, as their only hope of eternal life.

Q. Who among the finful children of men may be encouraged to partake in the Lord's Supper?

A. Every destitute, lost, guilty creature, that fees enough in the perfect character and finished work of Christ, as witnessed in his resurrection, for his complete falvation, and the falvation of the whole world, and professes hearty subjection to him.

Q. What is required of them that would worthily partake of the Lord's Supper?

Q. What in particular is a man to examine himself about, in order thereto?

A. Our examination respects ourselves and others.

Q. How doth it respect ourselves?

A. Our iniquity is, whether we discern ourselves as members of the Lord's body, so that our hope of eternal falvation is built entirely on what Jesus Christ, as our head, has wrought for us in his life, finished in his death, and witnessed in his resurrection, exclusive of any supposed personal excellency in ourselves; which is examining, whether we are in the faith.

Q. Doth not our examination re-Spect our practice?

A. Yes; we have to examine, do I understand that partaking in the bread and cup, is a voluntary profession of my obligation to slee every departure from the Lord, particularly to be on my guard against every of those things which occasioned the overthrow of the children of Israel in the wilderness.

Q. How doth our felf-examina.

tion respect others?

A. As Christ is the head of every man, drew all men unto him, and tasted death for every man, we are to inquire, whether we discern every man as members of Christ (though

Q. What is to be understood by the condescending action of Fefus Christ, in washing his disciples' feet?

A. There appears a literal and spiritual meaning in that transaction; literally, it teaches the disciples of the Saviour to be ready to attend to every office of kindness one to another; to be ready to wash one another's feet, whenever there shall be an occasion for it, so as to be an act of kindness. The apostle mentions John xiii. from verse 4. it as a good work, together with re- 1 Tim. v. 10. lieving the afflicted.

Q. What

Q. What instructions are hereby conveyed, as the spiritual meaning of that transaction?

Phill. ii. 6, 7.

A. The first thing that calls our attention is the inconceivable condescension of Him, who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and manifested it by taking the place of a servant in washing his servants' feet, who he taught, Except they were washed, they had no part in him.

rst Sam. xxv. 41.

Q. Why was the feet only washed?

A. Jesus Christ gave Peter the answer, He that is washed, needeth not, save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit; the tempter was to bruise the heel, the human nature: And when the Psalmist, speaking in the person of Jesus, as encompassed with our transgressions; calls them the iniquities of my heels, the head of every man not needing washing, being holy, harmless and undefiled.

Gen. iii. 15.

Pfalm xlix. 5

Heb. vii. 26.

Q. What further instructions have we herein?

A. That nothing but his washing can cleanse us. "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part in me." Our defilement is so deep, that neither our tears, repentance, reformation, nor any works of our own, can ever wash it away; nothing short of the fountain fountain opened in Christ Jesus to purify from fin and uncleanness.

Q. Why is the Christian falutation fo of ten enjoined on the first churches, called HOLY. "Greet ye one another with a HOLY kifs."

1 Cor. xvi. 20.

A. It may refer to that perfect ad Cor. xvii. 22. holiness that is made manifest in the embrace of mercy and truth, righteousness and peace in Christ Jesus; and to that purity with which the disciples of Christ ought to salute one another, as partakers therein, Pfalm lxxxv. 10. and to distinguish it from all others.

O. How is it to be distinguished from all others?

A. As the giving a cup of cold Markix. 41. water in the name of a disciple is distinguished from the giving one merely from civil courtefy, viz. because ye belong to Christ, it is respect to Christ, and to his disciples for his fake, that diftinguishes; which respect being exercised about the boundless grace of the Gospel, may be called love; and when this falutation is performed from love to Christ, and his disciples for his fake, it may be called, in the language of Peter, v. 14. Peter, "The kifs of charity."

Q. How is that direction in James v. 14, to be understood, that speaks of anointing the fick with oil, in the name of the Lord?

A. It appears to have respect to miraculous healing; the prayer of faith shall fave the fick, even the faith that Paul perceived in the im- Acts xiv. 9.

potent man at Lystra, who had faith to be healed; and it is mentioned with casting out devils, as what was done by miraculous power.

Q. What is prayer?

A. Prayer is an offering up of those desires to God, for things agreeable to his will, that are excited in us by his Spirit, in the name of Christ, with confession of our sins, and thankful acknowledgment of his mercies.

Q. What rule hath God given for our direction in prayer?

A. Every part of the scripture is of use to direct us in prayer, but the special rule of direction is that form of prayer which Christ taught his disciples, commonly called the Lord's prayer.

Q. As there are different apprehensions in the minds of Christians about the Lord's prayer, some suppoling it was designed only for the use of the disciples during the days of his humiliation, and had its accomplishment in the death, resurrection and ascension of Christ, and the gift of the Holy Ghost; who take notice of this prayer by giving thanks, that thy kingdom is come, and thy will is done in Christ Jesus, and that we have this Gospel-day our daily bread, &c. Others look upon it as a form still to be used by Christ's disciples: How then is it a rule of direction in prayer? A. It

A. It is a rule of direction to both, to pattern after; for those that believe it was fulfilled in Christ, must Heb. ii. 2. know that while we fee not yet all things put under him, there are yet glorious things to be accomplished concerning his kingdom, until the feventh angel foundeth, and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever. Rev. xi. 15. And those who constantly use this form, must know that Jesus hath glorified the Father's name, that his kingdom come, or was made fully manifest, after the Holy Ghost was given on the day of Pentecost, his will being done in him; therefore it is necessary that the use of this prayer should be with understanding; and to each fentiment, it is a rule of direction in prayer.

Q. What doth the preface of the Lord's prayer teach us?

A. The preface of the Lord's prayer, which is, "Our Father who art in Heaven," teaches us, in union with Jesus Christ, to draw near to Gal. iv. 6. God with all holy reverence and confidence, as children to a father, able and ready to help us, and that we should pray with and for others.

Q. How are the feveral petitions to be used as our direction in pray-

A. Every thing we are directed to pray for, in the Scriptures, is comprehended comprehended in the glory of the Divine Name, the advancement of his kingdom, and his will being done in earth as it is in Heaven, in our being fupplied with daily bread, by being enabled daily to feed on the bread of life, trufting in, and looking to him for the neceffary support of the outward man; the forgiveness of trespasses, from him who hath power to forgive fins, and our being bleffed in him, with an ability to forgive those that trefpass against us, being kept from temptation, and delivered from the evil one, may comprehend all ware directed to pray for.

Q. What doth the conclusion of the Lord's prayer teach us?

A. By the conclusion of the Lord's prayer, which is, "For thine is the kingdom, the power, and glory, for ever, Amen," We are taught to take our encouragement in prayer from God only, and in our prayers to praise him, ascribing, kingdom, power and glory to him; and in testimony of our desires and assurance to be heard, we say, Amen.

APPENDIX.

WHILE the law dispensation lasted, Jesus Christ, who was made under it, is said, to make and baptize more disciples than John, though Jesus himfelf baptized not, but *his disciples; John hearing this, saith, He must increase, but I must decrease, intimating, that his baptism was to go out by decrease, and that the baptism, that was to take place after the ascension of Christ, must increase, which was the baptism of the Holy Ghost: which Jesus told his disciples to tarry at Jerusalem for; and while they were there assembled, the Hely Chost came upon them; and according to his promife to them, that he should take of mine, and shew it unto you, they received a clear understanding of the doctrine of Christ, and power to be his witnesses at Jerusalem; and as many as gladly received the word, were baptized; if by gladly receiving the word, is to be understood, a clear understanding of the truth of the Apostles doctrine, so as to gain full credit in their minds, enabling them to count all things loss for the excellency of this knowledge, their minds being immerfed in the doctrine of Christ, they were baptized with the Holy Ghost; which was the baptism the Apostles and believers were tarrying at Jerusalem for, according to the direction given them by Jesus Christ before his ascension; and when we consider three thousand were added in one day, it is difficult to conceive that so many could in one day be baptized with water.

^{*} A learned aged person has assured me that he had in his youth an ancient Greek Testament (the loss of which he lamented) in which this passage is thus read, "Though Jesus himself baptized not, but discipled,"

It is true, we have two passages that expressly speak of baptizing with water after the ascension, viz. Phillip baptizing the Eunuch, and Peter at Cornelius's house: and it also seems probable that Paul baptized Crifpus and Gaius, and the househould of Stephanus, with water; but he thanked God that he baptized no other; (which makes it very likely that the disciples Paul found at Ephesus were not baptized with water by him; if they had been, it would make a greater number than he had spoken of, for the men were about twelve, who, when they HEARD, were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus:) For, saith he, Christ fent me not to baptize, but to preach the Gospel. It is probable, he might not at first so fully understand his commission, as John's baptism was to go out by decrease, the like may be said of Peter, who, though he faid at the house of Cornelius,* Who can forbid water that these should not be baptized, who have received the Holy Ghost, yet after, in one of his epiftles, faith, haptifm doth now fave us, not the putting away the filth of the flesh, (which is all water can do) but the answer of a good conscience towards God, by the refurrection of Christ.

However, those who think themselves bound to practice water baptism, must know, if they do it understandingly, that it can be no more than a visible profession of christianity, and they ought to beware of the error that puts it in the place of Christ Jesus, as necessary to salvation, which has so far prevailed, as to cause parents to mourn as without hope, if any thing prevented the baptizing of a child before its death, who would have had no anxiety if the child had been baptized, as if the salvation by Jesus Christ was incomplete, till finished by the actions of his creatures.

^{*} In the same Greek Testament this passage is thus read, "Can any man dispute about water baptism, seeing these have received the Holy Ghost as well as we, and he commanded them to be enrolled among the disciples,"

But it may be said, salvation appears connected with baptism, in Mark xvi. 16, "He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved; and he that believeth not shall be damned." If this is understood of the baptism of Christ, it is easy and plain to conceive, that when the mind is baptized in the doctrine of Christ, and finds full rest in his perfect work and facrifice, as witnessed by his resurrection, as its complete and only salvation, or finds the answer of a good conscience toward God by the resurrection of Christ, that it is freed or saved, from the searful expectation of the curse of the law, justly due as a transgressor; while he that believeth not, remains under that sense of condemnation, which cannot be removed but by the belief of the Gospel,

CONCLUSION.

CONCLUSION.

INQUIRING for the meaning of the apostle in the exhortation, Let a man examine himself, and to let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup-I find the apostle in the tenth chapter of the first of Corinthians, taking notice of the Ifraelites who were baptized into Moses, in the cloud, and in the sea, and did all cat the same spiritual meat, and did all drink of the same spiritual drink, for they drank of that spiritual rock that followed them, and that rock was But with many of them God was not well pleafed, for they were overthrown in the wilderness. and mentions them as our example, to the intent we fhould not lust after evil things, as they also lusted; and when he had gone over those things which proved their overthrow in the wilderness, he says, " Wherefore, my beloved, flee from idolatry; the cup of bleffing which we blefs, is it not the communion of the bloud of Christ; the bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ; for we being many, are one bread, and one body, for we are all partakers of that one bread;" as if an attendance on the Lord's-supper, in its native simplicity, was a most efficacious call from idolatry, and from every fpecies of the above-mentioned errors of the children of Ifrael. Being all partakers of that one bread, why fhould it not fatisfy, and fave us from murmuring under every dispensation of providence? why should we tempt Christ? being discouraged because of the way, by loathing what he provides for us, (who is our manna, our daily bread;) the realizing that we are one bread, and of the one body, that our bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghost, should ever excite

tis to fiee fornication, and not to take the members of Christ and join them to a harlot; and that singleness towards Christ, which partaking of the Lord's-supper we are called to, which calls us off from idolatry, for, faith the Apostle, ve cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of the devils; ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table and the tables of the devils. This compared with the rebuke he gives to the Corinthians, in the next chapter, for their conduct when they came together; for one taking before another his own fupper, and one is hungry and another is drunken, looks as if they had flid into their former practices in their state of Gentilism (that was then in practice among the Gentiles) and called it the Lord's supper. Even as the seast made to the golden calf, was by Aaron called a feast to the Lord, when the people fat down to eat and drink, and roseup to play. Apostle talls them, this is not to eat the Lord's supper: for which conduct he could not praise them; and then to call them off from such conduct, carries their minds to an attention to it, as he had received of the Lord, which he backs with the confideration, that whoever eats and drinks unworthily, eateth and drinketh judgment to himfelf, or felf-condemnation, being condemned of himself for not judging a right of the Lord's body; for which cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. It is easy to conceive of excels in eating and drinking, together with felf-condemnation arifing therefrom, bringing on weakness and sickness, &c.

Therefore, let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup. Now when we consider the apostle in the midst of these things, of which we have taken notice; say I would have you know, that the head of every man is Christ, we are taught, if the head of every man is Christ, then the whole human nature are taken into him, were drawn to him, when he was listed up, and he tasted death for every man, is this my encouragement, as the ground of my acceptance, upon a level with the vilest? Or have I some preference on account of something personal that encourages me to eat before another my own supper? this is not to eat the Lord's supper; for in that we being many, are one bread and one body; all former difference between the several grains of wheat being lost in one bread, so all distinction is lost in Christ Jesus, he being all in all. Our encouragement being exclusively from him, produces the highest sense of our obligation to yield ourselves, with all our hearts, to him; which is what every one that attends on the Lord's supper, with understanding, is fensible of.

Or, on the other hand, do I, for want of a fense of the complete fulness that is in Christ, wish for some other excellency, wish to be like some other whom I esteem, as if I should then have an encouragement which I could not find exclusively in Christ, and come to look for it there, in order to make one of that body, and to partake in the one bread. The Apostle says, we are one body, and one bread, for we are all partakers of that one bread.

Further, we may inquire, do I understand the obligation, that partaking in the bread and cup, I confider myself voluntarily under, to slee every species of departure from the Lord, or the tendency of that singleness towards Christ, with which I should partake in the Lord's supper, to cause me to beware of every of those things, which occasioned the overthrow of the children of Israel in the wilderness.

These thoughts being persued, in order to find an answer to the question, what is a man to examine himself about, in order to partaking of the Lord's supper? Are here inserted, that any one may judge of the propriety of the answer to that question, and those confequent upon it.

S E C T I O N XI.

The RIGHT and WRONG WAY, with their TENDEN-CY and Effects.

THERE often arises much perplexity of mind from different apprehensions of several texts of scripture, and various expositions of them by writers and preachers, who often run counter, not only to each other, but sometimes appear inconsistent with themselves, so that in attending to them, the mind is ready to sigh out a wish, O that I knew the right way. It is a short, but a comprehensive ejaculation.

In order to treat of it distinctly, it may be useful to fay,

First. There is the way of our acceptance with God.

Secondly. The way of our peace.

Thirdly. The way of our duty, or the way in which we ought to walk; these are all connected, but for clearer understanding, may be considered distinctly.

First, For the way of our acceptance with God, Jesus Christ hath told us, I am the way; and the apostle tells us, He hath made us accepted in the beloved. Take special notice of the single syllable in, and it will tend to help the understanding of the passage: It is not said he hath made us accepted for the sake of the beloved, but in the beloved; if we are accepted in him, we are in him. The human nature, is considered in the sirst Adam, as their head in the transgression; he being the sigure of him that was to come, they are considered in the substance of that sigure: For as in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive, 1st of Corinth. xv. 22. The apostle again makes it even in Romans v. 22, As fin reigned unto death, even fo might grace reign through right-oufnefs, unto eternal life by Jefus Christ our Lord.

The head of every man is Christ, the human nature is confidered in union with him, as members in the head, as branches in the vine, or as the marriageunion, Thy maker is thy husband, the Lord of hosts is his name, the God of the whole earth shall he be called. In vew of this union, we understand the particle in, he hath made us accepted in the beloved, which agrees with the gospel preached to Abraham, In thy feed shall all the families of the earth be bleffed. With the Ixxii pfalm, Men shall be bleffed in him. With the prophet Jeremiah, The nations shall bless themfelves in him, and in him, shall they glory. The prophet Isaiah saith, The Lord laid on him the iniquities of us all, and he appeared to put them away by the facrifice of himself. The apostle Peter saith, He bear our fins in his own body to the tree. The apostie Paul faith, He died for our offences, and rose again for our justification. Hence we are said to be justified in him, ift of Corinth. vi. 11, and as we stood in need of fanctification in our flate of pollution, as well as to be justified from guilt and condemnation, Fefus Christ is made to us of God fanctification. So the apostle speaks of being fanctified IN Christ Jesus. When we reflect on any spiritual bleffings we enjoy or hope for, we are led to bless the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual bleffings in heavenly things in Christ Jesus; and if that expression should cast the eye of our mind back to the fountain from whence they flow, the following words will direct the mind to the center-According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world.

We are said to be chosen in him, to be gathered together in him; rooted and built up in him; made to sit together in heavenly places, in Christ Jesus. Sitting is a posture of rest, where we might pause to reslect on the exceeding riches of grace herein made manifest. These considerations may serve to excite us to look for acceptance, justification, fancisfication, and all spiritual blessings, where they are, and not in ourselves where they are not; which would be to seek the living among the dead.

What has been offered may help to an understanding of the words of our Lord and Saviour, who says, I am the way, no man cometh to the Father but by me. Tis what is called by the prophet, the old path, the good way, referring to the gospel preached to Adam, in the feed of the woman; to Abraham in thy feed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. The way made known to Moses and the children of Israel in all the tipes and facrifices, under that dispensation, pointing to, and centering in, Christ Jesus, called by the Psalmist, the way everlasting, because the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, is his name for ever, and his memorial to all generations.

When Jesus, the way, is made manises, the Aposse calls it the new and living way, the way to the holiest of all, by the blood of Jesus: Thus you have an attempt to point out the scripture account of the right

Objection. Doth not the scripture speak of repentance, faith and obedience, as necessary to salvation.

For answer, I would say, I conceive repentance to be an alteration of mind; upon the manifestation of a truth that was hid before, as when John preached, repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand, and Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent for the kingdom of Heaven is at hand, they preached to the Jews who were in expectation that the Messiah should have an earthly kingdom, and should deliver them from the Romans, under whom they were in bondage; they are called to alter their minds, it was the kingdoin of Heaven that was at hand. After the death and refurrection of Christ, we have no account of the Apostles repeating the same expressions, the kingdom was come, and repentance, and remillion of fins, were to be preached in his name. To use a fimilitude-Suppose a traveller to have lost his way, and yet knew it not, and had progressed far in a wrong way, should he be overtaken by a faithful, skilful guide, that was able to convince him that he was wrong, had loft his way; and to fhew him the right way, confequent on this he would turn, undoubtedly grieving he had been fo long loft, and had gone fo far out of the way.

Now it is natural for the children of men univerfally to suppose that something must be wrought in in them, or done by them, in order to their acceptance with God. Wherewithal shall I come before the Lord, is the universal inquiry of every thoughtful mind, if they are convinced that burnt offerings, calves, rivers of oil, yea, even the first born, will not atone for transgression, nor the fruit of the body for the sin of the soul: Yet they are ready to think, if I had true repentance, then I should be accepted for Christ's sake. And the inquiry is, how shall I get it, how shall I exercise it, how shall I know it is sincere, how indeed! until Jesus is known as the

When the mind is thus loft, looking for acceptance in or from himfelf in a greater or lefs degree, it will never come to full rest in the sincerity and uprightness of his own repentance. What lack I yet? will still distress the mind, and sometimes prevail to that degree that is described, Job xxxiii. 19, He is chastened with pain upon his bed, and the multitude of his bones with strong pain; so that his life abhorreth bread, and his soul dainty meat; his sless is confumed away, that it cannot be seen, and his bones that were not seen, slick out; yea, his soul draweth near to the grave, and his life to the destroyer.

The following words appear to fliew the effect of the good news of the Gospel:-

If there be a messenger, an interpreter, one of a thousand, to shew to man his uprightness, (namely the uprightness of Jesus Christ made manifest by the Holy Spirit, who Jesus Christ promised to send to testify of him, for the scripture tells us there is none upright among men) then he is gracious unto him, and saith deliver him, for I have found a ransom. The satisfaction of mind consequent hercupon, is manifested in the following words. His slesh shall be fresher than a child's, he shall return to the days of his youth—he shall pray unto God, and he will be gracious unto him, and he shall see his face with joy. Thus have I written of Jesus Christ as the way; and of our being accepted in the beloved, as knowing we shall always progress in the way of self-righteousness, until we are led into the new and living way.

The like may be said of saith; for how shall they believe on him, of whom they have not heard: It is a fruitless business to labour to work saith in our hearts, and exercise it, and evidence it by obedience while we are ignorant of the truth to be believed,

Therefore have I written of the truth to be believed, viz. that he hath made us accepted in the beloved, that Jesus is the way; if this can be evidenced to the mind to be a certain truth from the scriptures, can the person help believing it, and is it possible for all the labour of the mind, with all the assistance of others, to produce faith, unless the gospel is thus evidenced to be true.

There arises another objection to what hath been faid, concerning our being accepted in the beloved.

The Apostle Peter, when he went to Cornelius, said, I perceive that God is no respector of persons; but in every nation, he that search God and works eth righteousnels is accepted of him.

For answer it may be inquired, who is he that feareth God, and worketh righteousness; was it Cornelius or Jesus Christ? it may be said, that the three men who were sent to Peter, called Cornelius a just man, and one that feareth God: That was their opinion of him, and testimony concerning him. But the testimony of the scripture concerning all mankind is, they are all under sin, there is none righteous, no, not one; there is no fear of God before their eyes, therefore Peter appears to have respect to Jesus Christ, as he that feareth God, and worketh righteousness, the same of whom the Psalmist speaks in the 112th Psalm, Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord. (The man is the singular.) This will appear,

1st. From the end for which Cornelius fent for Peter, which was to hear words whereby he and all his house should be faved. Acts xi. 14.

2dly. It appears from the defign of the vision that appeared to Peter, to prepare him to go to Cornelius the Gentile. The gospel that was to be preached among all nations, was to begin at Jerusalem, and the Apostles were forbidden at first to go to the Gentiles; what Peter was taught by the vision, was that he should call no man common, or unclean, as the Jews until then, looked upon the Gentiles.

So then when Peter had come to Cornelius, and had heard the occasion of his sending for him, confirming what he had already been taught by the vision, he opened his mouth and said, I perceive that God is no respector of persons, but in every nation he

that feareth God, and worketh rightcousness, is accepted of him, as if he had said, I perceive Jesus Christ's perfect work is accepted in behalf of the Gentile, as well as the Jew: This is the mystery that in other ages was not made known to the sons of men. As it is now revealed to his holy Apostles and Prophets by the spirit, that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ, by the gospel.

adly. It appears from Peter's preaching to Cornelius—See how it proceeds in every nation, he that feareth God, and worketh righteousness is accepted with him, according to the word which God fent to the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jefus Christ, he is Lord of all. Read on in Acts x. from the 36th to 43d verse, which closes with, to him give all the prophets. Witness that through his name, whosoever believeth in him, shall receive the remisfion of fins. As he spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word; the Holy Ghost was not given by the works of the law, but by the hearing of faith, or the preaching of Jefus. Now putting these things together, the end for which Peter was fint for, and for which he had the vision preparatory to his going, and Peter's preaching Jefus to him, and bringing in the evidence of all the prophets to this truth; it appears from this paffage that he hath made us both Jews and Gentiles accepted in the beloved.

OBJECTION. Jesus Christ saith, Except a man be born again he connot see the kingdom of God; of what avail will the work of Christ be to me unless I am born again?

For answer it may be said, the scriptures testify of Christ as the head of every man, and when we read them as testifying of men, we have not the key that will open them, to the rest and satisfaction of our minds;

X x perhaps

perhaps this scripture text has been thus perverted as much as any other portion of scripture. Let us look of the passage:

Nicodemus fays, We know that thou art a teacher fent from Gcd, or proceeding from God. For no mon can do these miracles that thou dost, except God be with him. Jesus answered and said unto him except some one were born from above he cannot fee the kingdom of God, as it is read in the Greek Testament the words, A man and again, are not there, therefore it appears that Jesus Christ is speaking of himself as if he had said, you are so far right, Nicodemus, in faying I am a teacher, proceeding from God, for no man can do these miracles, except God be with him; for except fuch a one were born from above, he cannot fee the kingdom of God. Here arifes a question, What is the kingdom of God? Let the apossle anfwer. He faith the kingdom of God is righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. Now where can this be feen in any man born after the flesh? The current testimony of scripture is, that there is none righteous, no, not one; they are all gone out of the way; there is none upright among men. Hence except some one be born from above, he cannot see the kingdom of God. As righteoufness, so peace is exclusively in him, for the work of righteousness is peace, and the effect of righteousness is quictousness, and assurance for ever. Hence Jesus Chila fays—My peace I give unto you, in the world ye shall have tribulation, but in me ye shall have peace.—And the apostles preached peace by Jesus Chr st. Hence the spirit that Jesus Christ promised was to testify of him, not to speak of himself, or of his own work in the hearts of men, perfuading them that they are born again, that they have a new nature, an inwrought principle of grace and hotiness in themselves, which makes them not like other men; but he shall glorify me, he shall take of mine and shew it unto you: For faith the apostle, No man can fay that Jesus is the Lord but by the Holy Ghoft. Nicodemus Nicodemus not understanding our Lord, speaking of timfelf, faith, How can a man be born when he is old, can he enter the second time into his mother's week and be born. Jesus answered, Verily verily I fry unto thee, except some one be born of water and of the prit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

When Jesus went to John to be baptized of him, he fand to John, Thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteonfues; and when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the wa er, and to the heavens were opened unto him, and he faw the spirit of God descending like a dow, and ight ng upon him; and to a voice from heaven, saying, this is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased. This was the truth he heard of God, confirming to him the prophesy in Isaiah xlii.1, Preparing him for his sasting and temptations in the wilderness, and for his public ministry.

That which is born of the stess is sless, and that that is born of the spirit, is spirit: That Jesus was born of the spirit is evident from what was said to Mary, in answer to her inquiry, how shall these things be, seeing I know not a man; the angel answered and said unto her, the hely Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the highest shall overshadow thee, therefore also that holy thing that shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God, this is the holy one born from above. John saith, verse 31, He that cometh from above, is above all, he that cometh from Heaven is above all, and Jesus Christ saith again in John viii. 23. I am from above, 'tis the same word that is translated again in the 3d verse.

OBJECTION. But it is said, verse 7th, marvel not that I said unto you, ye (in the plural) must be born again.

For answer it may be remembered that the Apostle saith, the head of every man is Christ, he is called the second Adam, the Lord from Heaven; and the head is not without the members, nor the members without the head; either in birth, life, death, resurrection, or afcention: The Apolle faith, we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus, when therefore we look for the new birth in ourfelves, the voice behind us points us to Carift Jefus, faying, this is the way.

If we would look for marks, compare John i. 12, 13, with 1st of John, v. 1, and we have the Apostolick account of this matter, He that believeth that Fefus is the Christ is born of God.

The Spirit bloweth where it listeth, and thou heareft the found thereof, but canft not tell whence it cometh, nor whether it goeth; fo is every one that is born of the Spirit, the word, that is, is not in the Greek Testament; so is every one born of the Spirit.

Nicodemus answered and said unto him, how can thefe things be? Jefus answered, art thou a master in Ifrael, and knowest not these things? As if he had said, do not you, that are a teacher in Ifrael, know that part of Isaiah's prophely that is ushered in with a note of attention, Behold! Behold a virgin shall conceive and bear a fon, and thou shall call his name IMANUEL, or do you not recollect the other prophefy of the fame prophet, unto us a child is born, unto us a fon is given, whose name is the wonderful counfeller, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of peace, with the prophely of Mica, but thou Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, out of thee shall he come forth to me, to be ruler in Ifrael, whose going forth have been from of old, from everlasting.

Verily, verily I fay unto thee, we speak that we do know, and test fy that which we have seen, and ye receive not our witness; if I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things. If I have used a similitude from earthly things to speak of my being born from above, and ye believe not, how shall you believe, if I tell you of heavenly things. In what follows, to the end of the 21st verse, where the account of the conversation with Nicodemus closes, unless you believe me to be born from above, how can ye believe me to be the antitype of the brazen serpent or the Saviour of the world.

Viewing this passage as testifying of Christ, there appears a connexion between Nicodemus's address and our Saviour's answer to him, the whole pointing to himself as the world's Saviour, agreeable to the aposses expression, to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved.

Is there not an objection arising from what has been said to Cain, If thou dost well, shalt thou not be accepted; but if thou dost net well, sin lieth at the door.

For answer, it may be said, that Abel offered the sirstling of the slock, and of the sat thereof, pointing to the one sacrifice, the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world. The apostle says, by saith Abel offered a more acceptable sacrifice than Cain, which shew that he looked to be accepted in the beloved.

Cain being very wroth that his offering was not accepted, which is mentioned before Abel's, was thus answered, and in that answer the gospel appears to be preached to him. If thou dost not well, sin lieth at the door: If we inquire who is the door, Jesus himself gives the answer, I am the door, by me if any man enter, he shall be saved (any man not excluding Cain.)

The passage goes on, and his desire (viz. the desire of Jesus the door) shall be unto thee, and thou shalt rule over him. Christ's desire was unto Cain, though the same spirit that influenced Cain, ruled over him, or prevailed to put him to death; his desire was towards them that were thus influenced, expressed in his prayer, Father forgive them, for they know not what they do.

Having thus confidered the objections to the first head, the way of our acceptance with God, let us

2dly, The way of our peace. The prophet Isaiah faith, the chastifement of our peace was upon him, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord, that hath mercy on thee; the apostle saith, he is our peace, and they preached peace by Jesus Christ, he hath made peace by the blood of his cross; that being an unshaken truth, that can never sail; as true if we do not believe it, as if we do; yet it puts no man in possession of peace in his own mind and conscience, until the gospel that reports this truth is believed; the things of our peace are written that we might believe, it is believing we have life through his name. Life and peace are so connected, that we cannot enjoy life without speace; hence it is said, we which have believed do enter into rest. The apostle speaking of Christ dying for our sins, and rising again for our justification, adds, Therefore, being justified, by saith or beliving this truth, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

adly. For the way in which we should go:

Negatively, it is not to make our peace with God, that is made by the blood of the cross.

When any that visit the sick and dying, ask them whether they have made their peace with God, and exhort them to it immediately, they do not appear to be messengers of peace, a messenger of peace would rather comfort a distressed sinner, by bringing to his view, all we like sheep have gone astray, and the Lord laid on him the iniquities of us all; he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and by his stripes we are healed; when we were without strength, firength, to make our peace, Christ died for the un-godly.

Positively it is to attend to the will of God in Christ Jesus, revealed in the scriptures; and as man cannot be profitable to God, we can render him nor things but thanksgiving; therefore he hath directed us to manifest our gratitude to him, by our conduct one to another. Hence it is emphatically included in what is called the new commandment, that ye love one another, as I haved love you, this is my commandment, that ye love one another. The exercise of it, is directed by that precept, Therefore all things whatfoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them, for this is the law and the prophets: Therefore, wherefore because your heavenly father is more ready to give good things to them that ask him, than earthly parents are to give bread to their children.

Love thus directed, worketh no ill to his neighour. Thanfgiving includes every exercife we are called to. Prayer has its foundation in Thankfgiving, that there is a new and living way, by which we draw nigh to God, that it is faid, that if any among you are afflicted, let him pray that we are allowed in every thing by prayer and supplication, to make known our requests to God, is always ground of thankfgiving: Faith and repentance are inseparable from thankfgiving. The gospel being believed true, will fill the mind with joy and thankfgiving. The discovery of the right way to a lost traveller, will fill his mind with joy and thankfgiving, mingled with grief and forrow for his progressing so far in the contrary path.

If any act of obedience is performed, it is from this quarter: Every act of benevolence, that is rightly performed, is a thank-offering to the Lord.

If a number of disciples eat and drink together in remembrance of the dying, rising Lord, what is it but a season of thanksgiving; thus I think the whole of the exercise of piety towards God, may be included in thankfgiving, which is a grateful commemoration of his love and mercy, that promotes an attention to the observation of his will, which hath been before faid to be, that we love one another: Love one to another includes that fellowship we have one with another, in drawing nigh to God in Christ, in expressions of thankfgiving, and in a benevolent care to perform those mutual good offices we may have an oportunity for, or are called to one to another.

It may be of use after having meditated on the way of our acceptance, the way of peace and the way wherein we should go, to remark the consequences of going out of the way, or to meditate on the wrong way. The wife man faith, the way of transgressors is hard, and we read in the 89th pfalm, which is spoken prophetically of Jesus Christ, if his children for sake my law, and walk not in my statutes, I will wish their transgression with a rod, and their iniquities with stripes, nevertheless my loving kindness will I not take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail: The loving kindness shall not be taken from him, from Christ Jesus, yet if his children forfal. my law, I will, there is the word of truth, for it I will vifit their transgressions with a rod, and their iniquities with stripes, the rod and stripes follow transgression, as the shadow follows the substance. To instance in our first parents, after transgreffion they hid themselves, were afraid because they were naked; fear, shame and nakedness were the confequence, never could they recover the robe of innocence by all the figleaves they could few together, but must forever have remained naked, had not the Lord God cloathed them.

Suppose you or I had never told a lie, but were innocent in that respect, upon our being once guilty, it were impossible to recover that robe of innocence, we fhould be immediately exposed to felf-condemnation which as stripes with a rod, would distress our minds with shame and remorfe, when ever we reflected on the nature and aggravations of fuch an evil.

Suppole our covetoulness prompts us to overreach and defraud our neighbors, that we might get unjust gain, what a fource of trouble and diffress should we open on our own minds? Perhaps in time of temptation, we think of no other difficulty, than what and es from the hiding it from the knowledge of those whom we may deceive; and are not afraid of being harraffed by the reflections of our own minds. We do not mean to worry ourselves about such matters; but purpose to divert them from such gloomy thoughts: But riper age, fickness, or unavoidable wakefulness in the night, which we are exposed to, will bring on thinking, whether we will or no: Or the meeting with something fimilar from others, may force conviction on our minds, when we are ready loudly to fay what they deferve: Or heavy losses and disappointments in business, may force the mind to inquire, if they are not providentially ordered as a rod and stripes for thus going astray. It is said, that the children of Ifrael, when from time to time they were carried into captivity, not only brought to remembrance later transgressions against the law of God, but were ready to fay, there was an ounce the golden calf in all their afflictions.

When Joseph's brethren were in affliction in Egypt, what they had done many years before, afflisted their minds in fuch a manner, that they could not keep it in, but faid one to another, We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we faw the anguish of his foul, when he befought us, and we would not hea, therefore is all this evil come upon us. They had doubtless been under the rod and stripes for the fucceeding years, while they endeavored to conceal their conductiowards their brother. How much acli-

ing of heart they endured? what fear leaft they should be found out? What a sense of ingratitude and disobedience they labored under, which they concealed? But now from home the rod and stripes came so heavy, that they could not help crying out in Egypt under the smart. Thus we see the tendency of going aside from the rule of doing to others, as we would they should do unto us.

If we were to take notice of the tendency of every vice, every step out of the right way, we might see the above connection between erring from the way, and the confequent forrow and affliction.

The consequences of intemperance, are often made manifest, both in the bodily health and outward estate of those of us, who unhappily indulge in those excesses;* these are visible, while the reslections of our own minds may be almost intolerable to ourselves, though we may labour to conceal them from others.

If we should reslect on the tendency of debauchery, it would open a field of distressing consequences, which would serve to illustrate the truth of the apostles expression, He that committeth fornication, sinneth against his own body: As well as that of the wife man, and thou mourn at the last, when thy sless and body is consumed.

Thus taking a view of the different ways, we fee the tendency of each. The path of the just one, is as a rifing light, which shines more and more unto the perfect day, while the way of the wicked is as darkness. The certainty of the truth of these observa-

^{*} Dr. Rush, in his "Inquiry into the Effects of Spirituous Liquors," after having spoken of their effects, on the body, producing discase, goes on to mention their effects on property, saying among the inhabitants of cities they produce Debt, Disgrace and Bankruptcy, among farmers they produce Idleness, with its usual consequences, such as houses without windows, barns without roofs, gardens without inclosures, fields without fences, hogs without yokes, sheep without wool, maugre cattle, feeble horses, and half-clad, dirty children, without principles, morals or manners.

tions, may be gathered from the scriptures of the Old and New Testament, it is said, He that diggeth a pit, shall fall therein; he that breaketh a hedge, the serpent shall bite him; there is no serpent in the high way, no lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast, but on breaking the hedge to go out of the way, the serpent shall bite, not may possibly, but shall. Our blessed Saviour says, With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again. And the apossle saith, Whatsoever a man sowe h, that shall he also reap: He that soweth to the sless, shall of the sless rorruption, but he that soweth to the spirit, shall of the spirit reap life everlasting. And when he is speaking to servants, he says, He that doth wrong, shall receive for the wrong, that he hath done, and there is no respect of persons, no not those who may be esteemed high in the divine savour: The passage in the 89th psalm, sirst mentioned, may here be recollected, If his children forsake my law, I will visit their transgression with a rod, &c. It may be inquired, how doth this consist with the doctrine of forgiveness, I will sorgive their iniquities, and remember their sins no more.

For answer, the case of the children of Israel, may be mentioned, who sell in the wilderness, for whom Moses prayed. Pardon the iniquity of this people, &c. who was answered, I have pardoned according to thy word; not I will, but I have, yet it is said, Surely they shall not see the land, which I promised to their fathers; though they were pardoned, their carcasses sell in the wilderness, and they were not suffered to go into the promised land: The psalmist appears to have this in view, psalm xcix. 8, Thou wast a God that forgavest their iniquities, though thou tookest vengeance of their inventions. It is, if his children forsake my law, I will visit their transgressions with a rod, &c. agreeable to the passage in the Hebrews, whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth and scourgeth, Every

In Matthew xviii. 27, it is faid, The Lord of that frount was moved with compassion, and forgave the debt. But this forgiven fervant, put his fellow fervant into priton for an hundred pence, confequent on this, was delivered to the tormentors, not for the debt that was forgiven, but in confequence of the hardness of heart, he discovered towards his brother after his forgiveness, till he should pay the utmost farthing, till he should indure the misery consequent on his transgression, according to the law of retribution, thus expressed: With what measure you mete, it shall be measured to you again, which doth not militate with the doctrine of reconciliation, according to pfalm xcix. 8.

We have been ready to look on the afflictions, distresses and miseries of the children of men, as if they denominated them the hated of God; evidences of their being cast off by him, especially when their afflictions are very great; but there is this confolation, that he whose name is Father and Redeemer from everlasting, is unchangeable.

Among ourselves, the disobedience and consequent misery of a son, doth not destroy the relation; but his happiness in his Father's presence, is in proportion to his dutiful behaviour.

I have known feveral inflances of two fons of one man. The one brought up without a blow or a stroke of the rod, the other so disobedient and stubborn, that the father hath been obliged with aching heart, to multiply the stripes of the rod of correction; yea, I have known the inftance when the disobedient ion, still refractory, despised the correction, and refufed to return. This disobedient son consequently fhunned his father's presence, and looked on him as an enemy, while at the same time the bowels of the compassion of his father, strongly exercised, were manifest in his earnest application to the Father of mercies.

mercies for the disobedient son, who was, notwithflanding his disobedience, a beloved son still, though he never could be happy in the apprehension of his father's love, while he continued in his stubbornness and disobedience; while the other brother was all the while happy in his father's presence, enjoying his sinite.

I knew a mother who had three children that lived to grow up, who faid five was obliged to whip each of them once in their childhood, and never had occa-fion to repeat it, they being ever after ready to submit to her authority—the rod and reproof appeared to give wildom.

I mention this to show the happy tendency of being in subjection to the Father of our spirits, who doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men, while stubbornness, under the correcting hand of God, causes a behaviour like a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke, wishing to get away, would fain slee out of his hand, and looks on him as an enemy. While this stubbornness continues, it is impossible to enjoy happiness.

I wish that we might entertain a just apprehension of the Gospel, and the dispensations of Providence, that while we conceive the hope of eternal life by Jesus Christ, as brought to view in the gospel, we may have a just sense of every promise of chastisement and correction, that we meet with in the Scriptures, which set before us life and good, death and evil, and excite us to choose life that we may live. Where is our life? In the enjoyment of God—In thy savor is life. Eternal life is the gist of God, through Jesus Christ our Lord—doth not depend on any thing wrought in us, or done by us. But life and good, death and evil, are set before us according to the way in which we walk. If we walk in the high way, nothing hath any right to annoy us, and we have no right to go out of the way, for if we go aside and break the hedge, the biting of the serpent is connected with it; and can any man enjoy himself thus bitten, or can he be relieved but by the antitype of the brazen serpent.—I would further say, there are most beautiful representations of the way in the Scriptures. Suppose we look into some passages of the prophet Isaiah, where it is repeatedly called a highway; the thought is enough to gladden the heart of a traveller, that though ever so poor, he hath an equal right with others to travel on the high way. Glory be to him who calls it my high way. Tis the friend of the poorest subject—they shall have protection in the high way: Yes! they shall be protected from injury from their fellow subjects.

It may be inquired, But may not the travellers be exposed to wild beafts.

Answer. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast.

Q. What Company may be found in the way.

A. Negatively, The unclean shall not pass over it. Positively, The redeemed of the Lord shall walk there.

O. But are they not a melancholy, forrowful, cast-

A. They shall return and come to Zion, with fongs and everlasting joy upon their heads, they shall obtain joy and gladness, and forrow and sighing shall slee away.

Q. But is it not a difficult way by reason of low miry places some part of the way, and mountains in the other.

A. The King, the Lord of hosts hath said, I will make all my mountains a way, and my high ways shall be exalted; and hath directed a cast up way over the low places, prepare ye the way of the people, cast up, cast up the high way; gather out the stones, take up the Stumbling-Block, out of the way of my people.

Q. Is

Q. Is not the way through the wilderness, where we may be exposed to hunger and thirst?

A. He hath said, I will make a way in the wilderness, and streams in the desert; it is said of the children of Israel, They thirsted not when he led them through the desert, he caused the water to slow out of the rock for them. Respecting hunger, read Isaials xlix. 8, 9, 10, Thus saith the Lord, in an accepted time have I heard these, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee, and I will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people to establish the earth; to cause to inherit the desolate heritage, that thou mayes say to the prisoners, go forth to them that sit in darkness, shew yourselves.

Mark the following most gracious word, "They shall feed in the way, and their pastures shall be in all high places, they shall not hunger nor thirst, neither shall the heat or sun smite them; but he that hath mercy on them shall lead them even by the fpring of water, shall he guide them."

Alas! among men it often happens that poor prifoners, when liberated from the prison, are in very destitute circumstances, having nothing to satisfy hunger or thirst, and exposed to the inclemency of the season; but our gracious deliverer hath provided plentifully, and hath said, he that cometh unto me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

It follows—and I will make all my mountains a way, and my high ways shall be exalted, so as to remove all obstructions from all parts: Behold, observe the notes of attention: Behold, and lo, behold, these shall come from far, and lo, these from the north, and from the west, and these from the land of Sinim, or the South

Country.

When we meditate on this most delightful paffage, can we help looking on the 13th verse with joyful joyful admiration, Sing O heavens, and be joyful O earth, break forth into finging O mountains, for the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy on his afflicted. Thus you have my endeavour to lead your mind to some passages of scripture that speaks of the way; it is from them I wish you to take your ideas, and take nothing from me that is not agreeable to them.

Taking my leave of my readers, I would bring to view 2d of Corinthians, xiii. 11, Finally brethren, furewell, be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace and the God of peace shall be with you.

Finally: As if the apostle, about to leave them, as it were, paused, to recollect how he might sum up all he had, said, in a few comprehensive words, full of affection,

My brethren, how comprehensive the expression, implying relation, affection and equality, as children of one father, leading our minds to the confideration of Jesus Christ, who is not ashamed to call us brethren, who graciously fent to his disciples after his refurrection, laying, Go to my brethren, and fay unto them, I afcend to my Father and your Father, to my God and your God. The expressions include in them love, honour, reverence, submission, trust and confidence, joy and confolation; in God, in Christ as our father, and every expression of ardent affection we may be called to, and have ability and opportunity for one towards another. Is not Jesus Christ ashamed to call us brethren? How shall I then express my shame, that my poor brother has been treated with such cold indifference by me this day.

But what has the aposse to fay to his brethren? Farewell, as if he had said, the doctrine I have taught among you since I have determined to know nothing among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucisted is a

faving, foul-fatisfying testimony, calculated for your welfare: Hold fast the grace therein contained, and you will fare well, however your circumstances may be in the world, for we are complete in him.

Be perfect: As if he had faid, keep in view what I have preached and wrote to you concerning Christ Jefus; viewing his perfect character and finished work as witness in his resurrection, as your head in behalf of all his members.

View him as the first born among many brethren; the brother born for advertity, the kinfman who had right to redeem-keep this in view, and you are complete in him-your perfection is there.

Be of good comfort; is there enough in Jesus Christ for your welfare and perfection, enjoy it; be of good comfort; let it be your comforting cordial in all your afflictions and distresses in life and death.

Live in peace, peace being preached by Jesus Christ, he being our peace, having made peace by the blood of his cross, given his peace to, and left it with his disciples, how refreshing the tidings; on his refurrection, the fame day at even, when the doors were shut, when the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews-came Jefus and flood in the midft, and faid, peace unto you, and when he had fo faid, he shewed them his hands, and his side, gave them evidences to their satisfaction and joy, that it was he! Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord. In which there appeared a fulfilment of Pfalin exix. 74. They that fear thee will be glad when they fee me, because I have hoped in thy word.

When the disciples were thus convinced and satisfied, he faith unto them again, peace unto you; and after eight days the disciples were within, and Thomas with them; then came Jesus and stood in the midst, and said, peace unto you. His gift of peace flowed from unchangeable love, notwithstanding they had all forfook him and fled, and fome of them had fo shamefully denied him in the time of his deep humiliation: Though they were changable and forfook him, he being, the fame yesterday, to day, and forever, forfook not them, but manifested the truth of what he had said, when he gave them his peace, Not as the world giveth, give I unto you, let not your hearts be troubled, neither let it be afraid. The world gives peace, and offences break it; but though the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed, my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord, that hath mercy on thee.

To them was confirmed, thus repeatedly he fent his apostles forth to preach peace by Jesus Christ, agreeable to the prophecy, I create the fruit of thelips, peace, peace to them that are far off, and to them that are nigh. How becoming those, that are blessed with these goad tidings, to live in peace, according to the apostles wish, in his farewell to them: Agreeable to the exhortation given elsewhere, if it be possible, as much as in you lies, live peaceable with all men, be at peace among yourselves; it becomes every disciple of Jesus Christ, to be a peaceable member of society, and a peaceable member of the family, where they are planted in the providence of God.

And the God of peace shall be with you. Is it possible to be otherwise? Only bring all into one point; the God of peace, who brought again from the dead, our Lord Fesus Christ; that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, hath hereby provided for our welfare, perfection, consolation, union and peace; and in the view of this, while we are at peace one with another, he is

While, if we indulge the works of the flesh, which is hatred, wrath, strife, &c. it raises a cloud that inter-

repts the view of the God of peace, agreeable to Island lix. 2, Your iniquities have separated between you and your God: Observe it is your God; notwithstanding, O the grace, its because he is God and not man, and to Jeremiah v. 25, Your iniquities have turned away these things, and your sins have withholden good from you.

Thus have I taken a view of the Apostles taking leave of his Corinthian brethren, and taking my leave of my readers, I would say, brethren, as I know no other hope of faring well, perfection, good comfort, or peace, for my self, but what is here hinted at, it has been one motive in my writings to lead my readers to view and consider those scripture truths, that has led my mind to these consolations: Therefore, bringing to view the Apostles expression in Galations iv. 12, Brethren I befeech you, be as I am, for I am as ye are. Wherein he appears to persuade them to be satisfied with the perfect work of Christ, as the alone ground of their acceptance, as it was his, he being a fellow sinner with them. I would close with my hearty wish that seeing we are complete in him, we may all join with Psalm cxv. 1, Not unto us! Not unto us, but to thy name, give glory for thy mercy, for thy truths sake, for of him and through him, and to him, are all things, to whom be glory for ever,

AMEN.

AGED Advice to a Young Man fetting out in the world.

OUNG man, I wish you to remember you belong to your Creator, Preserver, and Redeemer; who is our master and Lord. Though you are now free from your earthly master, it is your happiness and honor, and the only way to enjoy liberty, to consider you have a master in Heaven, and make it the rule of you condust to inquire what is his will concerning you and to endeavour to pursue a condust agreeable to 1862.

In des com with your fellow men, his direction is serves be we even fo to them.

In our enjoyments, the greatest of which begin the will by bringing to view the refurrection of Jefus Chaft, the foundation of the Christian hope; let it then be our inquiry how would my master and Lord have me fpend the day: Not how would my acquaintance, or my corrupt inclination lead me. And thus from day to day through the week .---- When any day of relaxation from bufiness, or diversion arrive, let it be perfued with a lively, joyful fense of his presence, for he is not far from every one of us, for in him we live and move, and have our being, for we are all his offspring. Are we all his offfpring? A reviving thought! How happy are little children to have their father go with them on a holiday, shew them what is to be feen, tell them the meaning, and what use to make of what they see, what dangers to fhun, what enjoyments they may partake in! How fafe they feel themselves under his protection, till they return fafe home under his care; while fuch as reject parental care often get hurt abused, and lose themselves, and brought home, greatly diffatisfied; children of 12 and upwards may get a hint of instruction from them. A fenfe

A fense of the presence of our Father with us, may be a powerful motive to shun that profaneness of speech which is so common and fashionable among too many of our young people. It is a vice altogether unprofitable. Can an instance be produced of one-that ever got any thing by it, to clothe or feed himself or family?

Again: It is a foolish practice. A very profane person, being in a tavern where was much company, who were disturbed with his profaneness, one of them addressed the tavern keeper thus, "Do you allow of such profaneness in your house?" Who answered, I must impute it to lack of good sense; a man of good sense can entertain his company without it, but where good sense is wanting, it is often brought in to fill up a vacancy.

Again, it is a hurtful vice, as it has a hurtful tendency, among thoughtless youth. If a young man, that is hired as foreman of a shop, indulge himself herein, it is a wonder if it do not spread among all the apprentices, and if some of them don't go beyond him in it, so as even to call for a rebuke from him, that was instrumental of leading him therein: Besides a young man has the hopes and prospects of a family, and perhaps has no caution on his mind, while his children are in infancy, and ere he is aware, the wead takes root, and springs up with their learning to speak, and grows with rapidity, with the growth of the children; to prevent which let every young man take care he does not save, nor sow the seed.

Again: It is the most dishonourable to God, whose name is the Great God our Saviour, to call on him to do the work of the destroyer.

Jesus Christ says, the thief cometh not but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have more abundantly. Now if any person will indulge himself to fay, "God damn you, it, me, him or them," what is it but to call on the just God and the Saviour, to do the work of the thief, the murderer and destroyer; to take from himself the fruit of his purchase; to kill those that he came to give life to, and destroy what he came to save. Can our adversary the devil, with all his devices, contrive any thing more dishonourable to the Great God our Saviour.

A fober thought on the unprofitableness, the folly, the hateful tendency, and above all, of its being difhonourable to God, will, I hope, guard your mind

Upon the whole, on our fetting out and travelling through the prefent world, our fafety and happiness is to keep the high way; the high way of the upright you know is to depart from evil. The upright one has marked it out—has given order to cast up the high way, to gather out the stones, to take out the stumbling blocks out of the way of his people; has engaged that no lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast. Keep then the high way, and you keep the way of safety, peace and joy. It is the only way to true happiness in the present world.* To wander from this way, leads to darkness, distress and misery.

I doubt not but you will receive this as an evidence of the love of your old friend, that wishes you a happy journey through this present evil world.

FINIS.

^{*} I say, in the present world I need not inform you, except it be to kir up your mind by way of remembrance, of what you already know, that eternal life is the gift of God through Jesus Christ our Lord.
